Buildings are measures of school's development

Buildings are faces of University development, faces that reflect past accomplishments and future development. Tradition lingers from another era in the form of ivy-covered landmarks while progress is shaped in massive structures of concrete and glass. But the University experiences more than an outward change. Construction masks an inner growth, an expansion of programs and goals measured not in millions of dollars but in the continual search for the face of progress. The 1968 Royal Purple reflects this year of development at Kansas State University.

Stadium and auditorium head expansion projects

Paralleling the growth of the University's academic programs and enrollment, construction enters the largest period of expansion in nearly 20 years. As blueprints for a stadium, an auditorium and a motel-convention center are converted into man-hours of digging, drilling and building, expectations are changed into realizations. Progress is measured in the transition between old and new — while Wildcat fans cheer in Memorial Stadium for the last Saturday afternoon, construction crews scoop out sod at the new stadium site. Cranes and earth-movers break the permanency of campus skylines and hint that the University is not bounded by stone walls. As strange limestone shells merge with familiar ones, students adapt to the changed look of the University and anticipate future development, an indication that educational challenges will be met.

Cry of 'We gonna win' renews feeling of pride

Pride — the slogan synonymous with University football — develops in a multitude of ways. Some are more visible than others — the excited crowd of fans chanting "we gonna win" and waiting for the 'Cats at Manhattan Airport, "purple power" fashions for Saturday afternoons, "pride" buttons and ribbons. Pride may develop unconsciously from the feelings of comradeship and loyalty between athletes and spectators or from the belief that victory is achievable and defeat is temporary. Pride is measured not only in scores, but in attitudes. And the biggest developers of pride are students — anxious to show off the campus to parents, confident of the prospects of a 'Cat victory, frustrated by setbacks but not defeated in spirit. More than a slogan, pride is a philosophy developed on a foundation of achievement and dedicated to the success of the University.

All student experiences reflect University's spirit

Spirit is developed through experiences — the ferocious yet funny antics of Willie-the-Wildcat, the shouts of jubilant students celebrating in Aggieville or a whistle of exhilaration. From the damp drizzle of a rainy October day to the sparkle of Homecoming, from moments of ectasy to disappointment, spirit molds common goals among students and ignites a sense of identity with the University. Experiences shared with friends and roommates develop spirit — a spirit of communication and enjoyment that creates the longest-lasting memories of University life.

FEATURES

Features develop the University's personality, changing it with the seasons, modifying old habits and introducing new ones. Some features are contemporary — Roger Miller in concert, a salute to Expo, a Homecoming house decoration — but they are remembered. Others are more lasting, more essential to the foundation of the University. Men of politics and religion, of science and art, bring their experiences and wisdom to students. And students test their own depths of knowledge through competition, performance and creativity. Together they reveal frames of the University's personality, frames of exuberance, youth, the striving for excellence that comprise its features and remain etched in the minds of students for years to come. Through these features, the University comes alive.

To prepare for a future profession, a student enrolled in the five-year architecture curriculum must spend long hours carefully drawing and reproducing blueprints for structures he may someday design.

University students find their lives ruled by time

Time was the key word for students rushing to classes, to meals and to meet their dates. Lack of time was the common lament as finals or vacation time approached. A semester's time was too short in which to thoroughly understand subject matter in a difficult course and too long between reunions with family and friends at home.

In a year's time, most students' attitudes, ideas and friendships caused them anxieties and endless frustrations; but, only with more time, was their significance fully understood.

Exhausted from the constant study of Dead Week, a student finds a few short minutes for relaxation.

Dorm residents often find concentrated study to be a challenge amid other activities of college life.

Students find that library carrels provide a quiet atmosphere for study amid endless campus activities.

Peace marchers, traveling to Washington, stopped to address students and faculty from Seaton hall steps.

College students find converted fire escape slides at Manhattan's City Park ideal for summer recreation.

For most native Kansans, surfing is a new and infrequent experience. The majority of students, taking a break from summer school, are content to paddle at Tuttle Puddle, five miles north of campus.

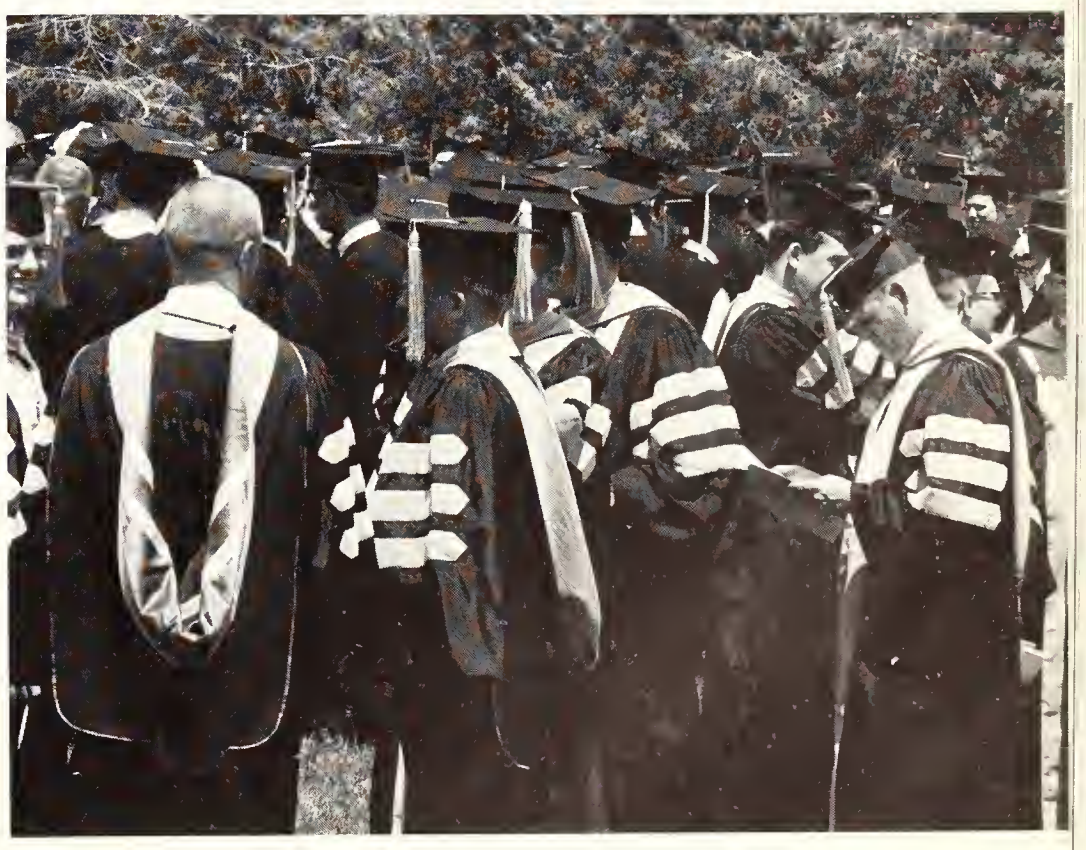
Following President James A. McCain and his platform party, Ph.D. candidates and faculty members lead approximately 1,200 M.A., M.S., B.A. and B.S. candidates to the Field House to receive degrees.

1,200 receive degrees at June commencement

Assembling on the field across from Anderson hall, graduation degree candidates marched four abreast to Ahearn Field House, where more than 1,200 degrees were conferred. Completing their degrees at mid-term, 628 students received diplomas through the mail and were invited to participate in June, 1968 commencement exercises.

More than 4,000 students attended the summer school session which included workshops and seminars, as well as regular classes. The seminars were as diversified as the one entitled "Creativity in Elementary Education." More than 60 air-conditioned classrooms accommodated the casually dressed summer students. For recreation, students took Union-sponsored trips to the Starlight Theater in Kansas City, and rode the Blue River Queen, a 31-foot pontoon excursion boat.

Dressed in the robes designating their individual degrees, candidates await the march across campus.



Arousing pre-season enthusiasm, varsity football coach, Vince Gibson, tells students of his "We Gonna Win" philosophy, and introduces squad members to the crowd at the Orientation Week watermelon feed.

Challenging new students attending the President's Convocation, a Mortar Board member tells of opportunities for service in college. All college deans were introduced during the Sunday afternoon session.

Sporting a new fall outfit, a fashion board member introduces campus-wear to freshmen students at a Union-sponsored fashion show. The event is one of the most popular features of Orientation Week.

Parents learn of college at orientation sessions

Helping parents gain a realistic outlook on college life and the experiences students face, a summer parent orientation program was planned in connection with freshman pre-enrollment. In the fall, freshman orientation included special sessions on subjects chosen by freshmen, including learning and study procedures, military service obligations, budgeting and career planning. Weekly freshman seminars continued into the year and brought out problems facing the college freshman. At the annual convocation, President McCain was introduced to new students.

Activities such as the Union kick-off dance and a fashion show with psychedelic music and paintings highlighted orientation week. Climaxing the week, the Freshman Talent Show introduced acts ranging from musical solos to comedy routines.

Boasting record sales of more than 7,750 books and approximately 8,000 class pictures, the 1968 Royal Purple increased by 16 pages, featuring twice the number of color pictures in previous editions.

Freshmen and new students make an extra stop in enrollment lines for the official transcript snapshot.

Arts and Sciences tops fall enrollment increase

Enrollment received a boost, with the fall semester showing a total of 11,755 students, an increase of 470 over the previous fall enrollment. All colleges recorded an increase of students, with the College of Arts and Sciences leading enrollment figures with 4,401, followed by Engineering with 1,232, Agriculture with 1,205 and Home Economics with 1,131. Graduate School enrollment also increased to 1,460. All colleges recorded a drop in enrollment for the spring semester, with total enrollment down approximately 1,400. The biggest drop came in Arts and Sciences.

Student enrollment for the spring was the smoothest recorded in the University's history. Most students with schedules meeting all requirements filled out information cards, picked up grades, paid fees and received their semester class schedules in less than 30 minutes.

Students pay more than $2.5 million in fees to the University during the three-day enrollment period.

Purple pride in bloom during Homecoming '67

Pride and "purple power" bloomed across the campus to the theme of "Everything's Coming Up Purple" for 1967 Homecoming. The week's activities included the Roger Miller concert in Ahearn Field House and the K-State Players' production "Never Too Late," starring Academy Award winner Ed Begley.

House decorations for Homecoming featured special sound and lighting effects. Winners of the overall decorations competition were Delta Delta Delta and Sigma Nu. First places went to Alpha Xi Delta and Phi Kappa Theta and second place winners were Gamma Phi Beta and Sigma Chi. In independent competition, winners were Smith Scholarship House and Putnam hall.

University tradition includes Mortar Board's annual mum sales for Parents' Day and Homecoming football games. Proceeds were used to publish a booklet for the Graduate School, distributed throughout campus.

During Homecoming previews, Diane Crostarosa appears in response to Captain Vince's plea for someone to head the growing University pride campaign during a scene from Putnam's skit "The Good Ship KSU."

Approximately 2,250 persons attended Roger Miller's Homecoming concert of country and western music.

Queen Susie Schwab reigns at Homecoming

Following interviews with Blue Key, skits at Homecoming Previews and voting by the student body, Susie Schwab of Alpha Delta Pi was named the University's 37th Homecoming queen.

In the week before the University of Oklahoma game, Miss Schwab appeared on the Vince Gibson show, was interviewed on KSDB-FM radio. She also attended local service club meetings, the Blue Key Alumni banquet and the bonfire pep rally. Presented at halftime ceremonies of the game, Miss Schwab was crowned that evening at the Roger Miller concert by Dwight Klinger, member of the Kansas Board of Regents. Her four attendants were Sherry Keucher, Jan Miller, Helen Packard and Kim Williams.

In the talent contest, Diane Messing's rendition of "I Can't Say No" moved her on to win the title.

Diane Messing named Miss K-State-Manhattan

Selected from 12 finalists after talent, evening gown and swimsuit competition, Diane Messing was named Miss K-State-Manhattan for 1967. Each living group nominated contestants and the finalists were chosen after preliminary judging. Miss Messing was also awarded the Miss Congeniality award at the Kansas pageant.

Mary Lou Grosko and Dennis Culley were crowned queen and king of the 1967 Greek Week games. Each sorority and fraternity nominated a contestant, who was judged on her or his appearance in a Greek toga. Crowned during Spring Fling activities, Sherry Spillman and George Shupe were named Wildkitten and Wildcat.

Chosen Greek Week royalty, Mary Lou Grosko, a Chi Omega, and Dennis Culley of Delta Upsilon were crowned at the Greek games Friday afternoon. Other activities included a service project and house dances.

Named Miss K-State-Manhattan, Diane Messing is crowned by Judy Hysom, who held the 1966 title.

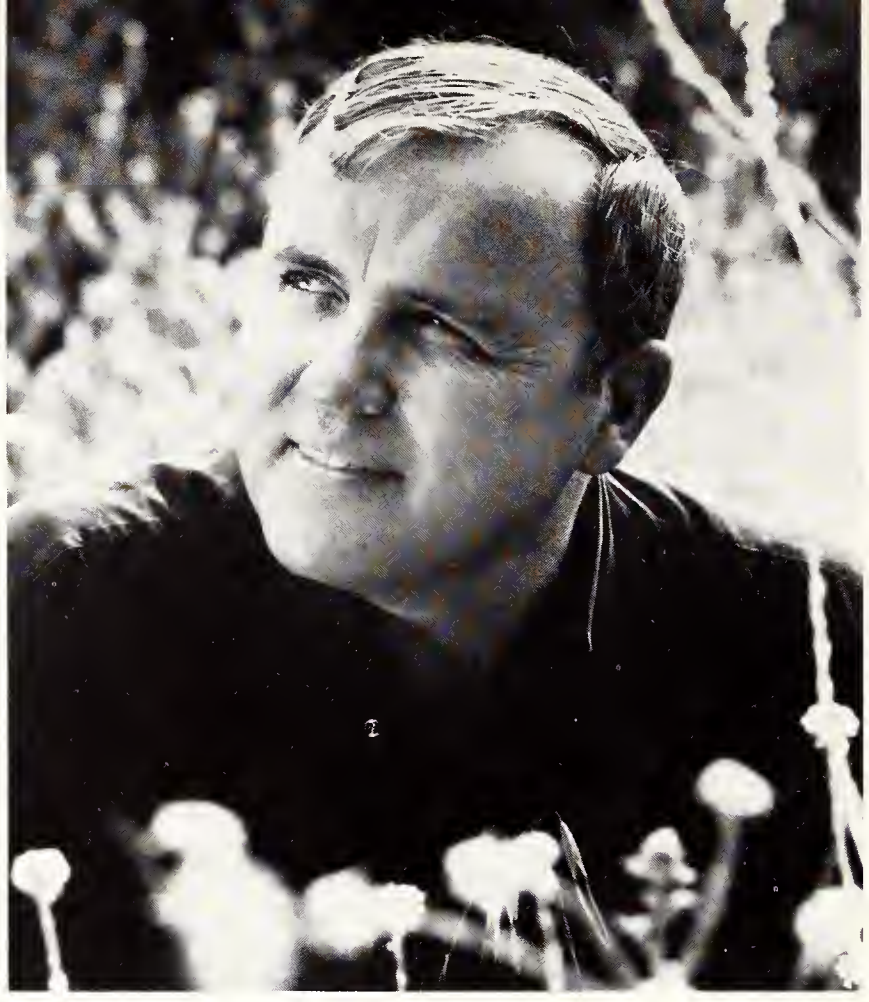
Yarbrough crowns queen during February concert

Recording star Glenn Yarbrough crowned Connie Veskerna 1968 Royal Purple queen during his February concert. Yarbrough selected Miss Veskerna and her four attendants from 23 candidates representing 18 organized living groups and Off-Campus Women. Yarbrough introduced the queen, representing Kappa Kappa Gamma, and her attendants, Cheryl Bain, Susan Fugger, Earlene Hovis and Kathleen Sewell.

The queen and attendants were escorted by representatives of Arnold Air Society, the Athletic Department, Blue Key, Pershing Rifles and Scabbard and Blade. Yarbrough judged the candidates on photographic beauty from black and white portraits.



Formerly a member of the Limelighters, Glenn Yarbrough presented a concert of love and folk songs.

Nancy Atkinson receives her crown as Miss Agriculture from Margie Henry, the 1967 queen, at the Autumn Festival. Queen qualifications include an agricultural background and proficiency at farm chores.

After being named and crowned FMOC by RP Queen Connie Veskerna, Tom Hawk accepts his trophy.

Students select queens of festival, military balls

After being crowned the 1968 Miss Agriculture at the Ag Autumn Festival dance, Nancy Atkinson took on the duty of promoting the College of Agriculture. One of five finalists, Nancy, a member of Alpha Delta Pi sorority, was chosen on her knowledge of agriculture and her display of farming skills at the college's Chore Night.

After a week of campaigning and two days of voting, coeds elected Tom Hawk of Delta Upsilon as their Favorite Man on Campus. Candidate previews and the crowning at the final home basketball game replaced the traditional FMOC dance. Military balls in the spring were highlighted by the crownings of Kathy Klag as Military Ball queen and Rita Rieschick as Little Colonel of the AFROTC Candlelight Ball. Both were elected by ballots cast by those attending the dances.

Lesta Riley was selected as Kansas' candidate to accompany Bob Hope on his tour as Miss World 1967.

Modeling outfits for school, church and evening, Bev Bucher was named the 1968 Best Dressed Coed.

Coeds win in national, international competition

Representing the University and Kansas, campus coeds went on to enter national and international contests. After the Best Dressed contest, Bev Bucher submitted pictures and an essay to national competition sponsored by Glamour magazine. Barbara Socolofsky entered regional competition with University rodeo team points to take national honors as All-American Cowgirl. Kansas representative Jeanie Wolfe competed in the Miss USA pageant in Miami, Florida, a Miss Universe preliminary, while Lesta Riley also entered international competition, placing sixth for Kansas in the Miss World finals in Baltimore, Maryland. World tour winner Jill Bunker was chosen during beauty, talent and speech competition to reign as Miss World Putt-Putt for the international Putt-Putt golf courses.

All-American Cowgirl Barbara Socolofsky won her title in June 1967 after receiving awards at the Midwest Rodeo and the Great Plains regional, permitting her to advance to the national finals.

Representing Kansas in the 1967 Miss Universe Pageant in Miami, was Jeanie Wolfe of Alpha Delta Pi.

Winning a Grand Prize world tour, Jill Bunker was crowned Miss World Putt-Putt in Miami in January.

Little American Royal determines top showmen

Brahma bulls ridden Roman style by Leon Adams, a professional rodeo performer, were favorite crowd attractions at the 1967 Little American Royal. Margie Henry, Miss Agriculture 1967, presented championship trophies to Richard Teagarden, grand champion in the Block and Bridle division, and Harry Peckman, Dairy Division grand champion.

Featured at the 1968 Little American Royal on March 30 was a Roman riding act, a dance routine and a high jumping exhibition by Janet Hill, a trick rider from Garnett. Don McClure was selected grand champion in the Block and Bridle division and Don Sauerwein took the grand championship title in the Dairy Division.

Competition for the overall grand championships required that the students show four animals. Ribbons were also awarded to runners-up.

Six K-Steppers and featured twirlers Jan Miller and Dick Middleton provided halftime entertainment at all home football games and attended the Big Eight pre-season basketball tournament in Kansas City. The eight twirlers also performed during halftime of the University of Kansas game in January before a television audience.

Under the direction of Keith Meredith, the 40 members of the Pep Band made a trip to Wichita for the NCAA tournament in February. The band also played their popular and original arrangements at all home basketball games. Chosen in the spring by the Pep Coordinating Council, five men and five women cheerleaders led students in yells and performed pompon routines with music from the pep band. The cheerleaders traveled to all away football games and followed the basketball team to most Big Eight games, including the NCAA tournament games in Wichita.

Football halftimes honor parents, bands, editors

Selected from campus-wide nominations, Dr. and Mrs. George Chapman were named by Chimes as the 1967 Honorary Parents. The couple was entertained at a brunch and luncheon and attended the Nebraska football game, where they were honored at halftime.

Nearly 800 Kansas high school cheerleaders attended events at the annual Cheerleaders' Day football game against Colorado. The girls took the field at halftime and did cheers led by Wildcat cheerleaders. Editors from 100 Kansas newspapers, guests of the Collegian, also attended the Colorado game. They were recognized after attending a luncheon at the Union.

"Expo '67" was the theme of the 33rd annual Band Day. A parade of the 58 high school bands, a picnic lunch and performance at halftime ceremonies of the VPI game highlighted the day.

Tijuana Brass attracts concert crowd of 6,000

Familiar south-of-the-border sounds of Herb Alpert and the Tijuana Brass attracted a record attendance concert of more than 6,000 area fans in May 1967. "The Lonely Bull" and "A Taste of Honey" closed the 1967 spring concert series, which also included composer, arranger and conductor Stan Kenton, performing his "sounds of a new era in modern American music." From jazz to blues, Al Hirt and Pee Wee and the Young Set attracted a crowd of 3,000 in April.

Accompanied by comedian George Carlin, Roger Miller included "King of the Road" and "Chug-a-Lug" in his concert, rounding up the fall Homecoming festivities. "Baby the Rain Must Fall," a humorous rendition of falling in love with a mermaid, "100 Men" and "Crucifixion" portrayed the changing mood of the Glenn Yarbrough concert in February. Appearing with Yarbrough were the Fred Ramirez Trio and the Moffitt and Davies team. Yarbrough's concert, including songs by poet Rod McKuen, began the 1966 spring calendar of entertainers.

Characterized by their "mariachi" style, Herb Alpert and the Tijuana Brass drew a record audience.

"Sugar Lips" and "Cotton Candy" resound from the famous trumpet of Al Hirt during his spring concert.

World renowned Stan Kenton and his orchestra accept applause while concluding their mid-week concert.

Speakers outline ideas on current world topics

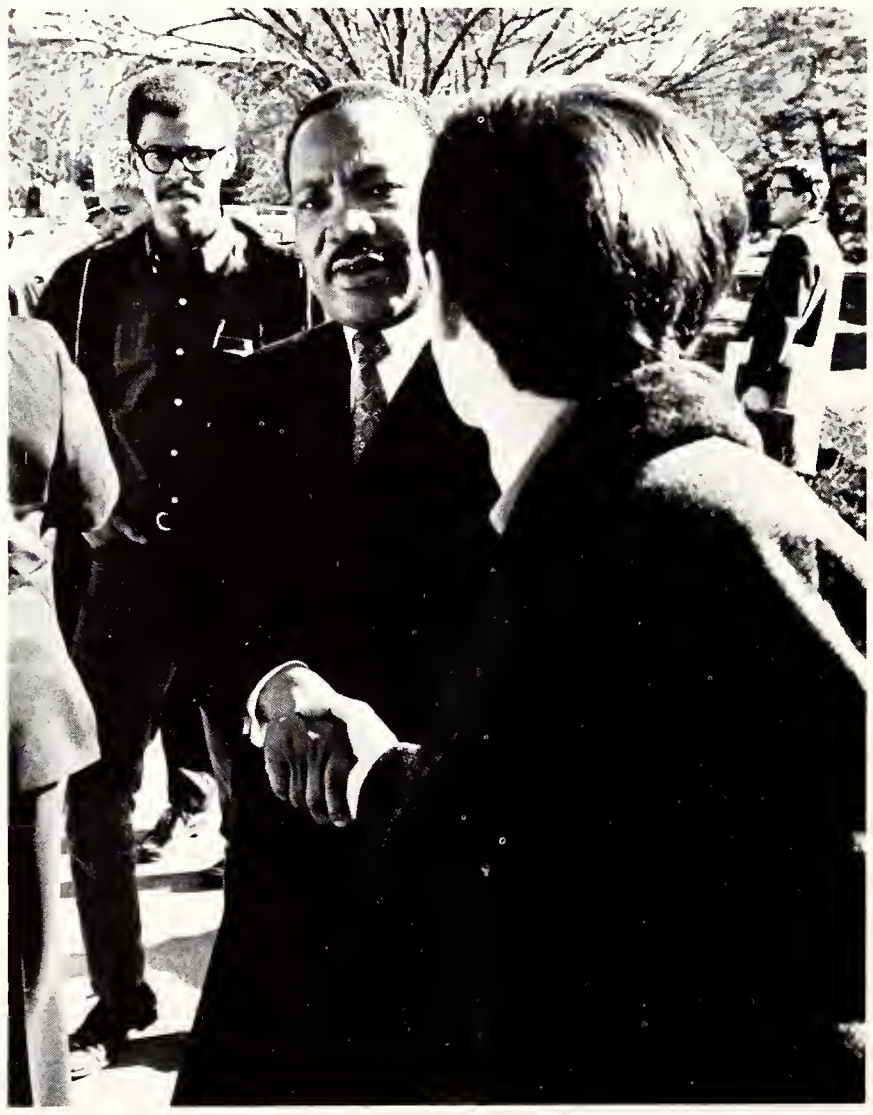
During the All-University Convocations series, students and faculty listened to speakers noted for their controversial opinions on current topics of concern. Former Episcopalian Bishop James Pike outlined the use of situation ethics in his talk on the "New Morality" and later blasted United States policy in Vietnam. America's commitment in Southeast Asia was also challenged by Arkansas Democratic Senator J. William Fulbright. The current racial situation was discussed both seriously and humorously by the late Martin Luther King and comedian Dick Gregory.

Buckminster Fuller, inventor of a geodesic dome and currently a professor at Southern Illinois University, discussed automation and specialization and Norman Cousins, editor of the Saturday Review, lectured on "The Age of Acceleration" for his International Week convocation.

Former Bishop James Pike urges students to assume responsibility for shaping their own moral codes.

Dick Gregory warns the audience of future Negro revolts if America's race questions remain unsolved.

In his address, the late Martin Luther King, suggested non-violent means in attempting integration.



Vietnam war critic Senator J. William Fulbright denounces the administration's current policies in Southeast Asia while expressing his faith in the younger generation to promote drastic changes.

Noted writer and lecturer Norman Cousins explains the possible consequences of rapid acceleration.

Reagan, Kennedy speak at Landon lecture series

Under the auspices of the Alfred M. Landon Lecture Series honoring the former Kansas governor, national figures Ralph McGill, George Romney, Ronald Reagan and Robert Kennedy accepted invitations to speak on public issues. Inaugurating the series, Landon spoke in December 1966, followed in May 1967 by Pulitzer Prize winner McGill.

In the fall, California Governor Ronald Reagan traced the role of higher education in contemporary America, calling on students to open the door of "hope" in the world. In December, Michigan Governor George Romney told a crowd of 8,000 that "underdevelopment is a greater danger than Communist aggression." After postponing his scheduled appearances three times, New York Senator Robert Kennedy launched his presidential campaign before a record Ahearn Field House crowd of 14,500. Historian Arthur Schlessinger was slated to participate in the series in November 1968.

Thetas, Phi Delts win HQ with computer satire

"Numerical Myth, or What's in a Name?," a modern myth about a student without a number on a computerized campus, took top honors in Harlequinade 1967 for Kappa Alpha Theta and Phi Delta Theta.

Gamma Phi Beta and Sigma Phi Epsilon combined forces to capture second place in the Mythical Miracle competition with the story of a controversy over a new castle in "The Death of a Pharoah, or the Case of the Dummy Mummy." Phi Delts and Thetas shared honors for the best choreography with the Kappa Kappa Gamma-Sigma Chi skit, "Shadies of Hades, or the Chill of It All," which took trophies for best costuming and set design.

Chuck Briscoe was awarded the best actor trophy for his role as the student with a name. A three-way tie developed for best actress honors, with Michele Clark, Pat McCabe and Martha Lonergan sharing the awards. The fourth production, " 'Tis Only a Delusion," was presented by Alpha Chi Omega and Phi Kappa Theta.

KDs, Phi Taus sweep top three '68 HQ honors

An old-fashioned melodrama produced by Kappa Delta and Phi Kappa Tau took a clean sweep of the three top trophies awarded for Harlequinade 1968. The skit, "Flour Power, or LSD is Neat, But You Can't Beat Wheat," told the story of an attempt by Rottenly J. Hawk to undermine the campus and the psychedelic consequences of his mistake.

In the winning cast were Geoff Holland, the villain, named best actor, and Sheryl Albright, playing Pride Gibson, named best actress. The Phi Delta Theta-Alpha Delta Pi production, "Cheese It, or the Rat's Out of the Bag," placed second in the annual production.

Completing the program were "The Edge of Knight, or Hadigal's Hectic Happenings," the story of a blundering knight by Alpha Chi Omega and Beta Sigma Psi, and Chi Omega's and Acacia's "Navel Disaster, or It's Not as Hard as It Looks," about a disillusioned witch doctor.

Vet Medicine, Home Ec organize open houses

Displays on animal diseases, meat inspection and instruments used by veterinarians were included in exhibits at the 11th annual Veterinary Medicine Open House in October. Set up in Vet hall, Burt Hall and Dykstra Clinic, the displays attracted 7,000 people. The theme, "How Veterinary Medicine Serves You," informed the public of the work being done by veterinarians.

"Let's Take an LHE Trip, or a Look at Home Economics" was the theme of Hospitality Day in April. Nearly 5,000 attended the day's events, planned to acquaint high school students with the College of Home Economics. The program featured exhibits in the morning, a luncheon planned and served by Institutional Management students, and a fashion show in the afternoon. Home economics displays included clothing and textiles, home ec and journalism and housing.

Nuclear display merits honors at Open House

Engineers' and Architects' Open House was officially opened March 29 by Marjorie Spear and Larry Green, St. Patricia and St. Pat. After the lighting of the torch on the steps of Seaton hall, approximately 5,000 visitors viewed the exhibits, which represented each department's curriculum and professional opportunities. Steel Ring presented a trophy to the nuclear engineering department for the best displays.

Architecture departments represented at the showing included architectural design, building construction, interior design, landscaping, regional and community planning and structures. Engineers displayed exhibits representing the areas of agricultural, chemical, civil, electrical, industrial, mechanical and nuclear engineering.

Union plans expansion; hosts major conferences

Blueprints for a $3 million Union addition were completed, while definite plans for construction were begun in the spring. The addition, financed largely through student fees, was to include a full-service book store, arts and crafts shops and additional lounge and cafeteria space.

Drug use and abuse was analyzed, discussed and reviewed during the Drug and Society Conference in March. Allan Cohen and Joel Fort, nationally known drug experts, spoke on how to make an intelligent decision about drugs. Panels and discussions were also conducted during the 12-day conference. In November, representatives from four states were guests, when 300 delegates met for the regional district meetings of the Association of College Unions International.

Expansion and additions to the present Union, opened in 1956, are expected to be completed by 1970.

Between classes, students stop in one of three Union lounge areas to talk, study or watch television.

Final K-State Player tryouts of the spring season selected cast members for "Murder in the Cathedral," a mystery story. The play, running four days in May, was enacted in St. Isidore's Catholic Chapel.

Academy Award winner joins Players for show

Academy Award winner Ed Begley and a student cast presented the rollicking three-act comedy, "Never Too Late" for a Homecoming audience of more than 1,000. Begley, who won an Oscar for his supporting role in "Sweet Bird of Youth," portrayed Harry Lambert, a middle aged New England lumber merchant old enough to be a grandfather, who discovers that his wife, Edith, is going to have a baby.

Begley arrived a week before the actual production to rehearse with K-State Players, who composed the supporting cast. During his stay, Begley was initiated into the group and also presented an honorary membership in Pi Epsilon Delta, national drama honorary.

Membership in K-State Players required seven points, based on artistic and dramatic merit in a production on campus or for the community.

Players' season opens with Broadway comedy

After playing to a sell-out audience during the summer, K-State Players opened their fall season with "Any Wednesday," a Broadway comedy hit. Also in the fall, a graduate thesis production, "Cross of May," was written and directed by Lydia Aseneta. In March, two one-act operas in English, "A Game of Chance" and "Slow Dusk" were given, and K-State Players and Religious Council jointly presented "Sacrifice," an Indian play about conflicts in 16th century Tiripura.

Children's Theater productions for the year included Mike McCarthy's "The Secret Within the Walls" and "King Midas and the Golden Touch." T. S. Eliot's "Murder in the Cathedral" climaxed the year's productions. The play, the story of the martyring of Thomas Becket in Canterbury Cathedral, was in St. Isidore's chapel.

Singing groups perform in tours to area schools

Local concerts and Midwest tours highlighted the year for the K-State Singers, Varsity Men's Glee Club and the University Choir. In March, the Singers, presenting Broadway show hits, a medley of modern tunes, a dance medley and solo acts, gave a benefit performance to provide music scholarships. Performing jointly with the Women's Glee Club in the fall, Varsity Men's Glee Club presented a concert at Stephens College in Columbia, Mo. The men's group also performed in Salina and in the Christmas Oratorio.

Selected as one of three state choral groups, the University Choir was invited to perform for the Kansas Music Educators' Association convention in Wichita. Singing Roman masses, contemporary versions of classical music and contemporary tunes, the choir toured Kansas in March, performing in Lawrence, Kansas City and Wichita.

Concert Band performs in nine Kansas towns

During February, Concert Band members went on their eighth annual state tour, performing in nine Kansas towns. They also presented a winter concert in All-Faiths Chapel auditorium and were selected to perform at the Kansas Music Educators' Association concert in Wichita. The band gave a premier performance of "Overture for Band," written by a music department instructor, Dan Haerle. Playing British selections, the band participated in the Arts and Music Festival. Commencement exercises in June marked the band's final appearance, in which they played the processional and recessional. Paul Shull directed the band for his seventh consecutive year.

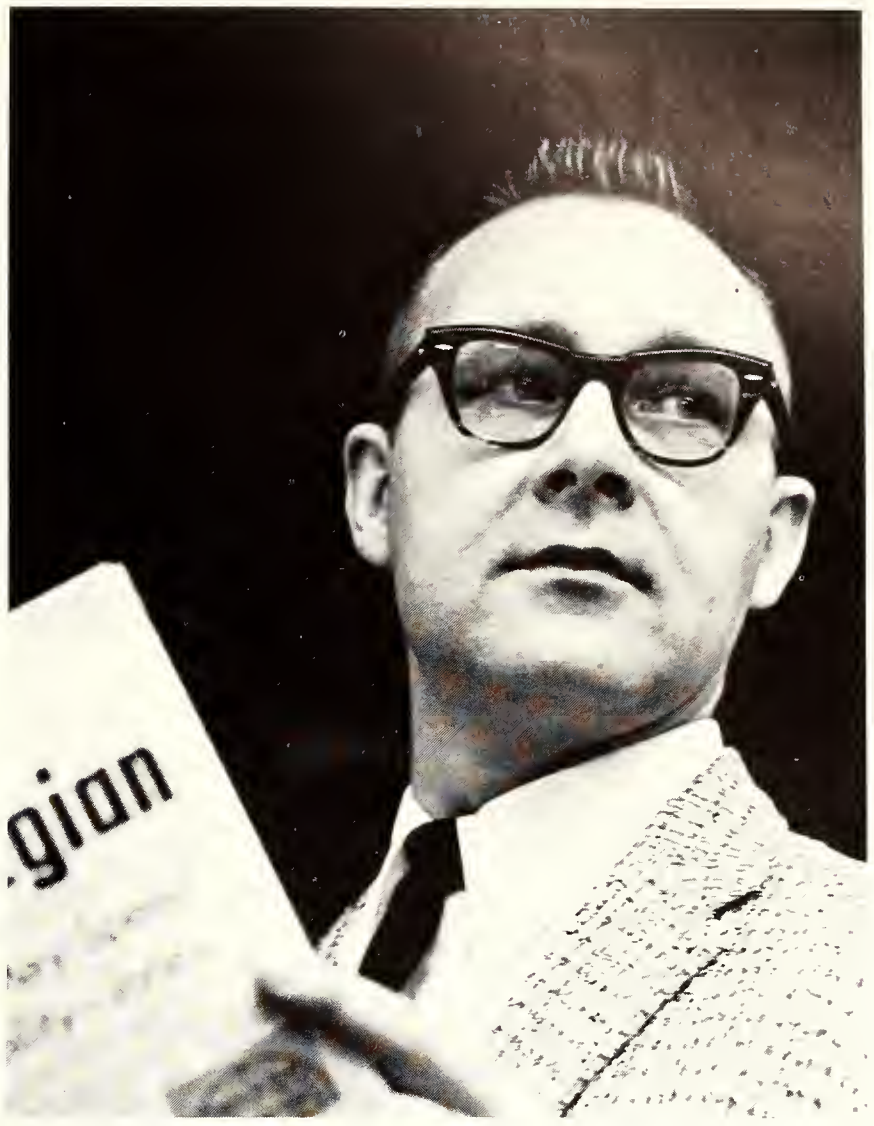
Activity in the Collegian office increases around noon each day as the deadline for stories approaches. Last minute information is often gathered over the phone amid the bustle of conversations.

Board approves increase in Collegian advertising

With Collegian advertising increasing four times during the last five years, the total budget of the Board of Student Publications nearly doubled, increasing from $124,000 to $240,000. Following a 35 per cent increase in Collegian printing costs, the Board apportioned an increase in national and local advertising and was forced to suspend publication of the Montage supplement.

Consisting of three elected students and three appointed faculty members, the Board selected editors and advertising managers and formed policies for both the Collegian and the Royal Purple. Jack Backer, director of Student Publications, and Royal Purple Adviser Del Brinkman acted as unofficial members, making recommendations but having no actual voting power.



Collegian adviser Jack Backer promoted the second semester change-over to a morning University paper.

Boasting the fifth largest daily circulation in Kansas, 10,200 Collegians are published daily.

Associate Director of Student Publications Del Brinkman completes his second year as RP adviser.

New Collegian program features morning paper

With the beginning of the spring semester, the Collegian, averaging 13 pages an issue, began morning distribution. Papers were delivered each morning to all organized living groups, the University trailer court, Jardine Terrace and three on-campus points. The change to morning distribution was initiated to provide a more realistic working schedule for student staff members and to supply better service to the student body.

During the fall semester, Vern Parker was Collegian editor and Stan Wethington was advertising manager. In the spring, Editor Bill Buzenberg introduced a "Faculty Speaks Out" column and increased the coverage of international news in the paper. Ad manager Duke Reiber and his staff sold approximately $80,000 in Collegian advertising during the year and expanded use of spot color in the daily papers.

Directory features listing of students, faculty, staff

More than double the size of the 1966-67 edition, the 194-page University Directory used a four-color front cover and color pages in special sections. The most significant change came with the use of three short lines of type, listing the name, hometown, address and phone number of each student, faculty and staff member.

Editor Melodie Bowsher and her staff of six published the summer Collegian twice weekly. Approximately 3,700 copies, averaging eight pages, were available to summer school students and faculty. Ed Chamness and Jean Lange edited the University Edition of the Collegian, which was sent to pre-enrolling freshmen and businessmen and distributed to returning students at registration. The 156-page University Edition was printed in August, with a press run of 16,000.

Royal Purple sales reach all-time high of 8,000

Expanded to 688 pages, the 1968 Royal Purple sales totaled 8,000, 500 more than the previous year. The 35-member staff used IBM cards to simplify the ordering procedure and facilitate indexing. In the largest RP ever published, Editor JoAnn Goetz used 60 four-color transparencies on 53 pages throughout the book. This was an increase of 50 per cent from the previous year in the use of informal color pictures. Distinguished as the yearbook with the longest record of All-Americans, the 1967 Royal Purple was awarded the 32nd All-American rating by the Associated Collegiate Press. Judges gave the book bonus points for the outstanding seniors section.

Four interest magazines published by students

Touchstone, Crit, the Ag Student Magazine and the K-State Engineer were student publications for particular interest groups on campus.

Touchstone, a 75-page creative writing magazine, contained original student poetry, fiction and artwork. Crit, the architecture student magazine, was published twice each semester. It contained essays and articles about architectural trends and activities within the college. Ag journalism students published the Ag Student Magazine, featuring articles about current farming and scientific ideas. Written and published by students, the K-State Engineer compiled engineering facts and information about college events.

Student programs aired over station KSDB-FM

Maintained completely by students, radio station KSDB-FM was operated by the University to provide practical experience in the field of broadcasting to students in radio and television. The operating station in Nichols hall was equipped with a production studio, control room, programming equipment and a record library. For the first time under the supervision of the Department of Journalism, students gained one hour's credit for setting up a news service, broadcasting their own shows once each week and planning program policies for the station. The station covered campus and civic events and broadcasted Luckey and Manhattan High School sports events.

Ag judging teams merit superior national record

Placing in 10 regional, national and international intercollegiate judging contests, University judging teams earned recognition for the best national record won by student judging teams. The four-man Senior Meats Judging Team won a special American Hereford Association award for the grading at the 37th Regional Meats Judging Contest in Kansas City. Senior livestock judgers placed second at the International Livestock Judging contest in Chicago, organized with the International Livestock Exposition. Junior livestock judgers ranked second in matches in Ft. Worth. After taking first place at the American Royal in Kansas City, the five-man Wool Judging Team participated in the National Western Intercollegiate Wool Judging contest in Denver. Dairy products judgers tied in international competition, while dairy cattle and poultry judgers attended national contests. The six soils judgers took fourth place in regional tests, while the best individual showing went to a University judge at the same regional competition.

ACADEMICS

Academics are the University's development of the mind. As students experiment with the basic scientific formulas, they seek the knowledge of today and the discoveries of the future. They explore the anatomy of life and search for its meaning and relevance in a constantly changing world. At the crossroads of the University is the blending of art and science — of theorems and free form sculpture, of nuclear engineering and philosophy — an educational process which leads to the student's own development. But academics also are embodied in the material symbols of the University. The white tower of Anderson hall, a symbol of the University's academic traditions since 1879, soars high above campus rooftops. And around Anderson new signs of academic growth spring up as the University continues to expand its educational programs and goals.

Enrollment forces physical, academic expansion

The last 10 years have witnessed continuing growth in faculty size, classroom allotment and academic growth. To cope with an enrollment increase of 4,860 students, faculty additions underwent a 58 per cent increase until the 1968 number of faculty positions reached 1,495.

Academic growth was exemplified in the status change from school to college in the areas of education, commerce and architecture and design. In 1958, the areas available for Ph.D. study numbered 15, with the 1968 figure exceeding 30.

Another phase of growth during the 10 years included construction of Denison, Justin, Cardwell and King halls. In addition, remodeling added classrooms and research facilities to Seaton, Willard and Kedzie halls.

Students in the Home Economics curriculum may enroll in ceramics and learn to mold pottery on a potter's wheel. Completed objects are baked in a kiln or "fired" to protect them from cracking.

Simultaneous listening and reading of a lesson is an integral part of a student's study of a foreign language. Two laboratories each week are required in the first two years of all foreign languages.

Outstanding instructors representative of faculty

For the second consecutive year the Royal Purple has selected 14 faculty members who, the staff feels, represent the many outstanding instructors in the University. Because of space limitations, it would not be feasible to individually picture the entire faculty. We hope that recognition of these 14 "representative faculty," pictured with their respective colleges, will partially compensate. Selection was made from a list of 34 nominees submitted by the college councils. Student opinion and departmental information were additional bases for the final decisions.

President initiates plan for University analysis

Through participation in International Week, conferences concerning overseas educational programs and dinners for numerous foreign dignitaries, President James A. McCain promoted the University's international program with foreign exchange universities and the growing number of foreign students studying here.

Self-study programs developed for the purpose of making specific plans for the University during the next ten years benefited the nine colleges. The committees for the program, encouraged by President McCain, included deans, faculty, student leaders and staff personnel. Two short-range discussion topics studied by the committees were residence halls and the adequacy of large lecture classes. Long-range ideas included whether or not to maintain the traditional departments in the College of Engineering and the curriculums of freshman students.

Faculty members teach at two schools abroad

Through the Agriculture International Development program, the University established contracts with India and Nigeria and as a result students came here to study and University staff members went abroad in advising, teaching and research capacities. In 1964, the program with India centered in the state of Andhra Pradesh and its University of Hyderabad. Patterned after the land-grant universities, Hyderabad offered agriculture, veterinary medicine and home economics. Also in 1964, Nigeria contracted to develop programs in agriculture and veterinary medicine at Ahmadu Bello University in Zaria.

Staff members and their families remained abroad for the regular term of two years. Because of a civil war in Nigeria, however, staff members were forced to abandon their posts after 90 days.

Since the initiation of the AID programs, the University has hosted 167 students from Nigeria and India. In exchange, 63 professors worked in the two countries, including 22 this year.

Vice-president observes Nigerian ag advances

Establishing a College of Agriculture and Veterinary Medicine at Ahmadu Bello University in Zaria, Nigeria, was one project of Vice-president for Agriculture Glenn Beck. For a week in August, Beck reviewed staffing policies and checked recent developments at the university. He also made a trip to India in January to finish plans for a rural university, patterned after land-grant schools in the United States. The schools, partially staffed with instructors from the University, served as agencies for international development, providing technical assistance.

Elevated to the office of vice-president two years ago, Beck was assisted by Floyd Smith, director of the Agricultural Experiment Station, Robert Bohannon, director of International Agriculture programs, and Harold Jones, director of the University office of Extension.

Extension sends specialists to 10 state offices

Employing more than 600 people and working with a budget of more than $7 million, the University Department of Extension was directed by Harold Jones. The department conducted public relations work to 105 county offices throughout the state, sending extension specialists to 10 regions. Extension printed more than one million pamphlets each month on multilith duplicators, distributed 250 publications, operated radio station KSAC and maintained its own film library of educational programs.

Extension service conducted meetings and programs with attention centered on all areas of home economics, agriculture, 4-H work and community development. All areas were aided by the Extension art department and area specialists. New programs, centered on economic problems of the urban and low income families, were developed and county agents were trained to manage each situation.

Vice-president for University Development C. Clyde Jones supervised $14 million in campus construction.

Jones supervises plans for campus construction

Supervising plans for approximately $14 million of construction on campus during the year, C. Clyde Jones, vice-president for University development, and Vincent Cool, assistant vice-president for University development, met with building contractors and supervised all construction. As chairman of Athletic Council and coordinator for activities of the alumni and endowment associations, Jones made final plans for a new athletic stadium and dormitory. The development council also planned a new veterinary college, which was to be constructed in seven phases.

In late spring, work began on the $3 million addition to the Student Union. Plans called for a two-floor book store, additional conference rooms, a forum with a seating capacity of 600 and an extension to the snack bar and bowling alley.

Other major construction included the auditorium, biological science building, library addition and restoration of agricultural buildings. Completion dates for the projects were in 1969.

Construction begins for auditorium and stadium

Ground-breaking took a prominent place among campus events, as construction of a new auditorium and stadium began. Financed through state appropriations and federal grants, the $3 million auditorium was slated for completion in the fall of 1969. Construction of a $1.6 million stadium, with a seating capacity of 34,000, began in the fall. Supported by revenue bonds and private contributions, the major addition to the campus athletic program was scheduled to be ready for the 1968 football season. Complementing the new stadium, an athletic dormitory, accommodating 177 men, was built north of Jardine Terrace.

Other major buildings scheduled to be erected included a $3.8 million biological science building. A forestry building, which provided cold storage facilities and shop and service areas to implement the University forestry program, was also constructed. Under the jurisdiction of C. Clyde Jones, vice-president for University development, additional plans for a swimming pool, library addition and Union expansion lay in preliminary stages.

Begun in April, construction of the $780,000 athletic dormitory was completed in October. The dorm, which consists of living quarters, recreational facilities and cafeteria, houses 177 athletes.

Studies on the protein quality of feed additives and the calcium and phosphorus needs of laying hens are conducted at the new Thomas B. Avery Poultry Research Center located north of the University.

During the summer, workmen race to complete construction of the athletic dorm for fall occupancy.

Construction on the $3 million auditorium progresses toward the anticipated completion date in 1969.

Business office handles University appropriations

Appropriation requests, processed through the office of Daniel Beatty, University business manager, made construction of a $1.6 million athletic stadium northwest of campus possible. Another $2.7 million appropriation enabled work to begin on an addition to the present Union building.

In addition to handling appropriations, the business office prepared the University's annual budget, which exceeded $50 million. Beatty advised President McCain and other University officials on proposed expenditures, related legalities and availability of funds. University Comptroller Ralph Perry managed administration of the business office, receipts, payroll checks and fund expenditures. Ted Dobb, budget director, prepared the annual budget statement for the state legislature and the Board of Regents.

Checks for grants, loans and scholarships are dispersed to students through the Comptroller's office.

Center enlists computer for placement programs

Computerized recruiting programs for students seeking employment in industry and education were introduced by the Placement Center in November. New temporary partitions provided interviewing facilities to 1,200 recruiters for more than 8,000 student interviews. Approximately 20 per cent of the student body took advantage of part-time job openings, made available through the Office of Aids, Awards and Veterans' Services. Regular and emergency loans were also available to students with financial needs. In September, a $300,000 Student Development Grant was received by the Counseling Center to continue a three-year program in the areas of counseling, communications and research. Through the Office of Student Religious Activities, directed by William Tremmel, Buddhist, Moslem, Hindu and Jewish scholars were invited to speak to campus religious groups about their beliefs and how they differ from Christianity.

Health center increases facilities, staff, offices

Modernization and expansion of facilities marked the year at the Student Health Center. The basement of the center provided space to accommodate three new staff members, a health physicist, a public health engineer and a health educator. Construction included three conference rooms, a staff lounge, medical library and business offices at an estimated cost of $100,000. With the creation of the offices, more room on the ground floor was available for physicians' consultations rooms, a new reception desk, expanded laboratory facilities and offices for the newly developed physiotherapy department.

During the fall, Student Health sent questionnaires to living groups asking for health topics on which students desired more information. As a result, the health education director from Student Health set up programs of films and speakers for each living group on campus.

Approximately 1,000 students are treated annually in the 40-bed student hospital.

Farrell library schedules $2.5 million construction

Plans were initiated in the fall for a $2.25 million addition to Farrell Library, with construction scheduled to begin in 1968. Proposed features of the six-story structure included a 24-hour study area on the ground floor and space on the top floor with controlled temperature and humidity for collections of old and rare books. Provisions also were made to introduce computers for the processing of books checked out and returned by students. One feature of the process included notifying students if they had any other books out and if they were overdue. When returned, books were automatically sent to appropriate floors.

Individual residence hall libraries were replaced this year by a branch of Farrell Library opened in Derby Food Center. The more efficient library branch served residents of Ford, Haymaker, Moore and West halls.

Brown allocates space, sets academic programs

Working with deans of the nine colleges as liaison from President McCain, Vice-president for Academic Affairs John Lott Brown attempted to integrate, coordinate and plan overall academic programs. Attending meetings with the deans every two weeks, Brown allocated facilities where they were most needed. He also met with the Research Coordinating Council, which handled experimental stations and general research.

Brown oversaw institutional research where statistics on enrollment and University trends were prepared. He also directed the computer center in Anderson and summer school admissions and records.

By putting class schedules on tape and setting up class rosters and students' schedules alphabetically and by colleges, Dean of Admissions and Records E. M. Gerritz made efforts to update the year-old computer system of enrollment. The new process eliminated approximately 80,000 space-consuming IBM cards, once used to record the classes of every student. Gerritz also worked on the promotion of the pass-fail system of grading made available in the fall.

Graduate school grows to meet public demands

Due to additional demands of education, industry and government for highly trained people in every area of specialization, enrollment in the graduate program increased 10 per cent over last year. New programs were added in computer science and geochemistry to meet demands of industry. The departments of physics, math, biology and other sciences also expanded research programs and added new faculty members.

Development in graduate work involved new programs crossing departmental and college lines. Programs in animal breeding, food science, animal nutrition, genetics and regional and community planning drew greatest support and gave graduate students the opportunity to bring together materials and research techniques. The newly initiated programs also attracted a greater number of instructors from other departments.

Formerly dean of Arts and Sciences at the University of Arkansas, new Graduate School Dean Robert Kruh has published several articles concerning the chemical structure of liquids and crystals.

Kruh proposes programs to expand doctoral work

Alert to the demands on the graduate office by students and industry, Dean Robert Kruh considered new programs to meet the demands and scrutinized established programs to assure their quality. Kruh coordinated all policies formulated by the Graduate Council and the Graduate School faculty. The policies were designed to insure teaching excellence, encourage research and help provide the environment to stimulate high intellectual and scholarly achievements.

Kruh planned programs for new ways to acquire basic skills in such areas as languages, library use, mathematics, statistics and computer science in Graduate School. Because of the rapidly expanding University graduate enrollment, he proposed masters and doctoral programs in all established curricula.

Ag attempts to broaden curricula with self-study

Emphasis on broadening the agriculture curriculum, with particular stress on better advising and instruction, was the highlight of an extensive self-study by the College of Agriculture. Patterned after the University-wide study, an analysis of the academic, research, extension and international programs of the college was conducted and recommendations made by committees of faculty members and Agricultural Council.

Agriculture recorded a greater percentage increase in enrollment than any other college. The increase was attributed to the extra option added to all areas of the agriculture curriculum, efforts of the faculty during a symposium in 1967 and monthly seminars emphasizing the principles of teaching and developing careers in agriculture.

Dean Hess updates agriculture courses, teaching

In his second year as dean of the College of Agriculture, Carroll Hess was involved in national and regional projects devoted to the updating and improvement of the agriculture curricula. Appointed member of the National Academy of Science's Committee on Education in Agriculture and Natural Resources, Dean Hess met with other University personnel to develop and support efforts to improve the quality of teaching.

At an eight-state university conference, Dean Hess met with other deans and associate deans in agriculture to discuss a reciprocal agreement whereby non-resident students were allowed to pay in-state tuition for certain curricula.

Ag expands curriculum with specialized options

With a total enrollment of 1,205 compared to 1,097 in 1966, the College of Agriculture continued marked expansion. To compensate for the increase, various options in all areas of agriculture curriculums were offered. Students in pre-forestry specialized in conservation, recreation, horticulture or the economics of forestry.

Students enrolled in other areas studied in the production field or in scientific research relating to agriculture. New aspects in farming and international relations were studied in the new International Agriculture option, which enabled students to prepare specifically for service in the Peace Corps. Additional social science courses were required for some agriculture majors, including speech and humanities, to keep pace with the expanding needs and positions in the agricultural field.

Supervising courses in five curriculums and updating studies with the addition of six new courses, Emil Fischer began his fifth year as dean of the country's fifth largest College of Architecture and Design.

Architecture dean works on campus committees

Filling positions on the University's Long-range Planning Committee for future development and the Auditorium Building Committee, Dean Emil Fischer of the College of Architecture and Design taught introductory courses in fundamentals of design. The senior class also chose Fischer to serve on a committee to select one of several projected plans for a campus directory map landscape, which they later donated to the University as a class project.

As dean, Fischer was required to sit on panels reviewing graduate thesis and summations. He also was a member of the Deans' Academic Council, which administered academic programs, directed the administration and worked on the college curriculums and the general organization and planning of the University calendar.

Fischer was appointed by Vice-president John Lott Brown to serve on the committee of general education which investigated and updated general programs. He also was host to the annual Kansas planning conference in November.

Student architects intern on three-month projects

Fulfilling a requirement for all architecture students, a series of three-month internships on off-campus projects sent students in the College of Architecture and Design to points across the state. Those in regional planning developed designs for a mall shopping center in Oberlin, a northwest Kansas community, while senior architects studied the development of Milford reservoir and its recreational facilities. In other studies, students planned future remodeling possibilities for empty grain elevators in the area. In cooperation with University of Kansas architects, students hosted a November state planning conference, displaying student projects and works of professional planners.

Chalmers names faculty to study course revision

Possible revisions in the liberal arts curriculum were studied by a faculty committee appointed by Dean John Chalmers of the College of Arts and Sciences. Six additional committees, composed of faculty members, were formed later to recommend individual departmental curriculum changes. Formation of the committees was prompted by a desire from both students and faculty to solve problems created by an increasing number of students, a lack of student-peer relationships and the diffusion of student interests.

Dean Chalmers was vice-president of the Council of Colleges of Arts and Sciences and was the University coordinator of the Marymount College program. Through this five-year plan participating faculty completed their second year teaching classes at the Salina college in an effort to broaden the school's liberal arts curriculum.

Kolasa named chairman of evaluating committee

In his position as acting dean of the College of Commerce since March of 1967, Dean Blair Kolasa participated in faculty seminars. The weekly sessions were concerned with new developments and discussions on quantitative methods and computer sciences in teaching.

As chairman of the social science committee established by Vice-president John Lott Brown, Dean Kolasa evaluated the state of the social sciences and made recommendations for future courses. New dean of education plans improved research

Beginning his duties in August, 1967 as dean of Education, James McComas initiated plans to increase the college's research capabilities and to strengthen its relationship with public schools. Formerly professor and head of elementary and secondary education at New Mexico State University, he was a field reader for the U.S. Office of Education's Bureau of Research, reviewing proposed innovations in curriculum and educational administration. He also was involved with programs associated with a reading research center and National Teachers Corps instruction.

New engineering dean reviews modernization

Ralph Nevins was appointed dean of the College of Engineering in September, 1967 after serving as head of the mechanical engineering department for 10 years. During his first year as dean, Nevins organized a thorough review of the college's curricula and organization in order to formulate goals and objectives to be met by the college. The needs involved preparing graduate engineering students for future work by bridging the gap between pure engineering and its application to humanities and emphasizing the study of industrial and technological advancements which the engineer needed for his work.

College of Engineering plans building complex

Review and modernization took form in the College of Engineering through the direction of the new dean, Ralph Nevins. The curricula of mechanical, chemical, civil, nuclear and industrial engineering were studied so the college could be modernized and expanded, with emphasis on the area of application of engineering to a modern society. The expansion included a proposed complex of buildings which would house the Departments of Chemical, Nuclear and Industrial Engineering. Updating the college also called for training the graduate engineer to be more socially-minded in his application of professional training to construction. The approach of study in engineering specifically included an expansion of courses that dealt with an engineer's duties toward society. Humanities and social sciences were especially emphasized.

Graduate students in Industrial Engineering study physiological cost of work with a four-spot form.

Dean Hoffman makes executive visit to India

On an executive visit to Andhra Pradesh University in India, Dean Doretta Hoffman of the College of Home Economics reviewed the programs in home economics and evaluated the university's international potentiality.

Dean Hoffman represented the University in nation-wide home economics research as a member of the Home Economics sub-committee of the Experiment Station committee on organization and policy. She also was chairman of the Association of Home Economics Administrators of State Universities and Land Grant Colleges.

In order to give students an opportunity to voice their ideas, Dean Hoffman initiated student participation in the Dean's Advisory Council. Elected student leaders met informally each month with the Dean, her staff and faculty to coordinate programs in the college.

Home Ec initiates plan to visit, assist students

In order to further develop the areas of dietetics, nutrition, medical technology and physical therapy, the College of Home Economics received a $7,000 grant from the Department of Health, Education and Welfare. The money was used to develop a brochure describing professional opportunities and to provide speakers for schools and organizations across the state.

With Bethel College in Newton, the Two-Two Plan was initiated in which a University faculty member visited the Bethel campus during registration to assist students with their schedules. In the spring, Bethel students made a field trip here to become acquainted with the campus. Representatives from the dean's office also visited junior colleges to help them with home economics related problems.

Dean Cornelius pushes college building program

During his second year as dean of the College of Veterinary Medicine, Charles Cornelius pushed the school's building program through its initial stages. In the fall, the state legislature allocated $110,000 for architectural fees in the first in a series of steps toward the projected $14 million building program for the school.

First phases of construction for the college were a new wing for the medical science building and the addition of a wing to the Dykstra teaching-hospital complex. Seven different completion dates were set for the total construction project.

Increasing emphasis in the college was placed on an expanded building program, ineluding a seven-phase plan for construction and on researeh. Experiments and observations using herds of sheep showed developments of mutant lines of animals with inherited metabolie diseases. Researeh support was doubled with an increase in the number of incoming grants and the addition of 12 faeulty members with extensive teaehing and research baekgrounds.

ORGANIZATIONS

Organizations are contributors to University development. They bring national recognition and honor to campus achievements. But organizations do more than that because they furnish the student a niche in the activities of the University community. Students as members of an organization feel a special pride in wearing purple and white, cheering for the 'Cats at a Saturday game or selling mums on a bright Homecoming Day. Students also feel a deeper pride in service to the University that their group achieves. Decorating the Union at Christmastime, preparing a graduate school booklet or directing traffic at athletic events are a few of the tasks that campus organizations perform. Organizations help tie students to University development through achievement, activities and service.

Supplies, sweatshirts, stationery and University souvenirs are available at the "Den" in the Union.

Record budget, workers expand Union services

With a record budget of more than $1 million and a record 185 employees, the Union offered a snack bar, art showings, supply store and recreational facilities and acted as a conference center for state-wide groups.

Nine students, three faculty members and one alumni representative composed the Union Governing Board that formulated Union expansionary policies. The Union Program Council and Student Government Association offices were located at the Activities Center, headquarters for student activities. Eight student committees, including Art, News and Views, Campus Entertainment, Hospitality, Movies, Personnel and Research, Trips and Tours and Harlequinade operated under the council's direction. Approximately 300 students worked on the 30 sub-committees.

SGA initiates program for senatorial assistants

Under the leadership of Student Body President Bill Worley, the Student Governing Association introduced a Student Senate committee system and a senatorial aide program. The association also proposed SGA's affiliation with the National Student Association, an information organization designed to advise student government programs. SGA also published the "K-Book," a handbook which reviewed numerous phases of campus life for new students.

Consisting of Worley and his nine-man cabinet, SGA's executive branch supervised 11 committees, involving more than 200 students. They published the first international activities calendar, organized a round-robin Quiz Bowl tournament and revised Student Health insurance plans. The Public Relations committee assigned teams to investigate discrimination in groups and to submit their findings to President McCain.

AWS alters structure, hosts dance for officers

Completely revamping the organization, Associated Women Students representatives voted to change the closing hours policy, with emphasis on calling hours and self-limited hours for junior and senior women. The association met to review the policies of the year in February and decided whether or not to continue the policy. AWS also planned a decrease in the number of officers, with representation in University student government. Exchange dinners between living groups, including off-campus women, and a dance for Ft. Riley officers leaving for Vietnam highlighted the year's activities. AWS also sponsored the Service Opportunities Committee as a cross-communication service between groups wishing to do service projects on campus.

Senior men's honorary entertains 1937 alumni

To commemorate their 30th year as a campus organization, the men of Blue Key with Dave Langford, president, sponsored an alumni luncheon for the returning graduates of the class of 1937. They also organized Homecoming previews, selected queen candidates and acted as escorts to those who were elected to the Homecoming Court.

The top students in Kansas junior colleges were invited guests at the honorary's Ju-Co Day. Members served as guides for their visitors on a tour of the campus and answered questions concerning the University. On the Saturday preceding the K-State-University of Kansas basketball game, the senior men painted victory signs in Aggieville and downtown store windows.

National Mortar Board commemorates 50 years

Celebrating the 50th anniversary of its national founding, Mortar Board, senior women's honorary, invited members from the University of Kansas to a February conclave. Earlier, the 17 members, headed by Sue Brandner, participated in the traditional mum sale for Homecoming and Parents' Day. They also collaborated with Blue Key to oversee Homecoming elections and window painting before the KU game.

Further activities included sponsoring a "Favorite professor" luncheon, publishing a handbook for University students interested in graduate school and hostessing the president's convocation. An annual scholarship dinner featured Donald Clifton from the University of Nebraska's Human Resources Institute.

Members of Chimes, junior women's honorary, heard student volunteers speak about the Vietnam war at a meeting at a local pizza parlor. The honorary also planned a garage sale in the spring, and a trip to Fort Riley to visit wounded soldiers.

Organizing the annual Parents' Day activities, Chimes recognized the honorary parents during halftime of the Nebraska-K-State football game and invited them to the Homecoming Previews that evening. At Christmas, members hosted an annual Mortar Board breakfast with members of the senior women's honorary as special guests. The two groups also teamed up to bring more noted and influential speakers to the campus, and sold mums for the Homecoming football game.

Milling honorary gives flour to needy families

In its 33rd year on campus, Alpha Mu, milling honorary, built a display for Ag Science Day and sponsored initiation banquets in the spring and fall. For the second consecutive year, the fraternity, in conjunction with the local Elks Club, donated sacks of University milled flour to needy families in Manhattan. New members were required to be enrolled in milling, feed science or bakery management curriculums and have a 2.9 grade average.

Ag Ed honorary recruits for Agriculture College

In cooperation with the State Office of Vocational Agriculture, Alpha Tau Alpha members recruited Kansas students for the University and the College of Agriculture. The 27 members of the agricultural education honorary, headed by Terry Schoenthaler, accompanied University professors to vocational agriculture area meetings. There they spoke informally with students about the importance of higher education, and answered questions about University life.

Operating station relays Open House messages

By installing an operating station in Seaton hall, the Amateur Radio Club relayed messages from people attending the Engineers' and Architects' Open House to out-of-state friends.

Often receiving transmitter equipment from Fort Riley, the club, headed by David Soldan, heard lectures featuring the radio and public service role of operators. One talk included an electrical engineering student's course in theory for the amateur radio operator.

Alpha Phi Omega runs student book exchange

Responsible for maintaining campus bulletin boards, hosting campus conventions and ushering at Union concerts, the 40 members of Alpha Phi Omega, national service honorary, also operated the student book exchange in the Union. The honorary, which aided in planning Homecoming activities, was in charge of the University wildcat mascot, Touchdown VII. At Christmas, the group, headed by Cecil Brazzell, sponsored a Christmas party for underprivileged youths.

Chemical society plans tour of research center

Planning trips to the Conoco Research Center in Ponca City, Okla. and exchanging research ideas with the University of Kansas chapter, the American Chemical Society, headed by President Steve Rock, met for monthly meetings. Open to undergraduates majoring in chemistry, biochemistry and chemical engineering, the organization heard guest speakers from private companies and watched films illustrating the processes involved in procuring and refining oil. Members also discussed graduate school plans and opportunities.

Organists' spring recital features wedding music

Recitals and workshops conducted by a guest organist, a series of group recitals and an exchange recital with Washburn University and the University of Kansas marked the activities of the 14-member American Guild of Organists. Headed by Rochelle Ediger, the organists planned a spring program, featuring appropriate music for weddings and associated ceremonies.

During monthly luncheons, the members, all students of other American Guild of Organists members gathered to compare techniques.

AIA members inspect architecture in Wichita

Members of the American Institute of Architects took a December trip to Wichita for an architectural inspection tour and two students attended the Washington, D.C. forum, sponsored by the national AIA organization. Moving in the fall into a new office on the third floor of Seaton hall, the 150-member chapter invited several architects and business representatives to lecture. A balcony provided space for publication of a student departmental magazine.

Architects' wives learn dressmaking techniques

Organizing a one-night tour of several local homes and collecting clothing and toys for a needy Manhattan family's Christmas marked the activities of the Architect Auxiliary, 30 architecture students' wives, headed by Carol Bonner. During one of their bi-monthly meetings, Donice Hawes from the College of Home Economics lectured on dressmaking techniques. For their yearly project, the auxiliary members made additions to the library and lounge in Seaton hall.

AID makes ornaments, decorates for Christmas

To finance a field trip to the Chicago market, the 20 members of the American Institute of Interior Design decorated three Manhattan businesses with their original Christmas ornaments. Meeting twice monthly, they also attended a Christmas dinner, featuring a speaker from the College of Architecture and Design. Working on an annual AID project, members prepared designs for competition at a regional conference, where one of their designs took first place in 1967.

AIAA members tour two aircraft companies

Touring the Boeing and Lear aircraft companies, the student branch of the American Institute of Aeronautics and Astronautics attended monthly meetings of the professional AIAA in Wichita. The club also sponsored a paper airplane contest open to all students in Ahearn Field House and presented a club display at the Engineering Open House. A report on rocket thrust, submitted to a national writing contest, won regional awards for one AIAA member.

Chem Engineers show display in glass tower

During monthly meetings of the American Institute of Chemical Engineers, representatives from Proctor and Gamble, Humble Oil, Celanese and Phillips explained growing opportunities for chemical engineers in industry and explained new chemical processes. The 80-member group also prepared electroplated keys and solvent extractions in glass towers for display in the Engineers' and Architects' Open House in March. Phillips Petroleum Company allowed the club to exhibit an all-glass distillation tower unit, similar to the one housed in the Smithsonian Institute.

Industrial engineers win third in chapter contest

Receiving third place recognition in national competition for the best student chapter, the 48 members of the American Institute of Industrial Engineers toured Wichita and Kansas City industries. At the annual Midwest convention students received second place for a paper investigating linear programming in planning farm operations, and received honorable mention for an inertia welding study. Members also entered research papers at the convention.

Under the guidance of President Gary Johnston, the club hosted an awards banquet for outstanding students, and had a picnic in Sunset Park during the fall.

Civil engineering society attends MU conference

Exchange conferences with other Kansas chapters, a Mid-continent conference at the University of Missouri and a tour of Armco Steel Company in Kansas City highlighted activities of the American Society of Civil Engineers. Lecturers included a Norwegian engineer speaking on the relationship between geology and civil engineering, a mechanical engineer who had taught in an engineering college in Egypt and a student who had studied engineering in Germany with a JFK memorial scholarship. Members published "CE Compass," a civil engineering alumni brochure.

Ag Engineers' speakers explain job opportunities

Speaking to the 40 members of the American Society of Agricultural Engineers, T. O. Hodges explained research projects he was involved in while working at Andhra Pradesh University in India. Farm implement companies, including John Deere, International Harvester and the J. I. Case Company, acquainted members with job opportunities available with their companies. At one meeting, a University graduate, representing the Allis-Chalmers Company, addressed the group. Other speakers represented government services and extension. Several members also related their experiences at summer jobs with the Soil Conservation Service.

Architects host picnic, establish wives' club

Meeting monthly, the American Society of Landscape Architects established a Wives' Club, sponsored a picnic and boating party and welcomed various speakers to discuss professional responsibilities. Students who had worked under the Canadian National Park and Recreation service during the summer showed slides of Canadian landscape architecture, and Coach Vince Gibson reported on plans for the new football stadium.

Planning continued for the development of a nature study area at Quinlan Gardens, the area between Petticoat Lane and the home management houses. The area was named for the former head of the landscape architecture department.

ASME receives grant to finance national trip

Recipient of a national Proctor and Gamble grant, the American Society of Mechanical Engineers met monthly to exchange technical findings. The grant was designed to finance the trip of one student member to the national ASME meeting in Pittsburg. The 65-member group also participated in annual competition in Fayetteville, Ark. Five awards were granted to student papers dealing with subjects such as the conversion of a power hammer to a hand-held diesel engine. The club encouraged idea exchanges in anticipation of a new award to the creator of the best mechanical engineering exhibit at the Engineers' and Architects' Open House.

Society lectures outline jobs, nuclear research

Since its beginning seven years ago, the American Nuclear Society has worked to promote professionalism among prospective nuclear engineers. As members of one of the first student chapters, nuclear engineering students of good academic standing were able to broaden their views of the nuclear engineering field. Speakers, either from government or research, discussed all aspects of nuclear engineering, with emphasis on the profession itself at ANS meetings.

The 40 members, with Kipp Shrack as president, participated in the Engineering Open House as representatives of the department with a display featuring the campus nuclear reactor.

Angel Flight entertains soldiers from Vietnam

Wounded soldiers home from Vietnam were able to attend University football games through efforts of the 52 Angel Flight members, commanded by Sharon Fairbank. The coeds also attended a social function for the soldiers at Irwin Army hospital. Primarily a service organization, Angel Flight members worked with Arnold Air Society and the Red Cross on the University bloodmobile drive. They assisted with the Government Careers Conference and sold concessions at football games. In the spring, members went to Colorado Springs, Colo., where they were guests of Air Force Academy cadets.

Arnold Air recognized as top honor squadron

Chosen as national honor squadron at the 17th annual national conclave in Miami, Fla., Arnold Air Society worked to promote scholarship, and increase University involvement by its members. As sponsors for Angel Flight and the Manhattan Civil Air Patrol squadron, the 80 active members, commanded by Roger Parks, ushered at football and basketball games and worked with Angel Flight and the Red Cross on the University bloodmobile drive. Members attended the national conclave in New York in the spring and hosted the annual Candlelight ball. All members were required to have a 2.5 grade point average.

Arab students analyze nation's Israeli dispute

Major topic of discussion for the Organization of Arab Students was the Arab-Israeli War. Other activities included picnics and a dinner during International Week with a guest speaker from the United Nations. Formed 10 years ago, the organization worked to promote better understanding and stronger ties between Americans and international students. It also worked to promote Arab unity and encourage Arab students on campus to study problems facing the Arab nation.

Foresters market trees as money-making project

In their second year as an organized club, the Association of Student Foresters members sawed firewood at the horticulture orchard experiment station at Ashland. In December, they sold the wood and marketed Christmas trees. The proceeds were used for trips to the University of Nebraska and Colorado State University to tour forestry facilities. The club also made plans for a book and pamphlet library to assemble information for those seeking occupations in forestry.

AVMA members exhibit Open House displays

Information about the veterinary medicine profession and opportunities available through the American Veterinary Medical Association chapters were offered to all regularly enrolled students in the College of Veterinary Medicine. Bi-monthly meetings of the only departmental organization boasting total membership included sponsoring the Pre-Veterinary Club and electing delegates to the national convention. "Advances in Veterinary Medicine" was the theme of the annual Veterinary Medicine Open House, which included exhibits featuring the recent and future developments in surgery and laboratory farm animal research. Block and Bridle plans livestock judging meets

First recognized as the Saddle and Sirloin Club, Block and Bridle Club received its national charter with clubs in Nebraska, Iowa and Missouri in 1919, becoming one of the oldest University organizations. Doubling its membership, Block and Bridle was the largest departmental club on campus to promote the field of animal husbandry. Club responsibilities included sponsoring meat, wool and livestock judging contests, dinners for livestock conferences and annual banquets to honor prominent livestockmen. At the annual Barnwarmer Dance, Nancy Atkinson was chosen Miss Agriculture from candidates promoted by campus living groups. Working with Chaparajos, Block and Bridle also co-sponsored the Little American Royal.

Chaparajos sponsor University rodeo, trail drive

Nationally sanctioned member of the Great Plains region of the National Intercollegiate Rodeo Association (NIRA), Chaparajos worked with the national organization in promoting and sponsoring the campus rodeo club. Its teams participated in NIRA sponsored events throughout the midwest, including the University spring rodeo directly sponsored by Chaparajos. Club members worked with Block and Bridle Club to sponsor dinners for area livestock men. The dinners honored prominent men in the field. Another club activity was the spring weekend trail drive.

Cadet Ladies package goods for servicemen

Baking cookies and making candy to be sent to servicemen in Vietnam, the Cadet Ladies Club prepared 32 boxes of goods in January. The group, which increased more than 50 per cent, also toured Forbes Air Force Base in Topeka, where they talked with personnel and discussed responsibilities required of them as future Air Force officers' wives. In the spring, the group organized a Tupperware party and gave a pizza party for their husbands.

Campus Christian group attends missionary meet

Attending the eighth annual International Missionary Conference at the University of Illinois, 26 members of the Christian Fellowship heard representatives of world-wide missionary societies tell about their groups' work. Fellowship members also attended the Billy Graham crusade in Kansas City. For Christmas, the organization sponsored an International party, at which members discussed the true meaning of the season with 20 foreign students.

Bloodmobile's success assures total coverage

For the fifth year, Circle K Club established a total blood coverage for students, faculty, staff and their immediate families by sponsoring the Bloodmobile. The University filled a request for more than 1,300 pints of blood during the Bloodmobile's two visits. A new club service project was begun during the spring semester. Two foreign students were invited to attend weekly meetings and be guests at a dinner sponsored by the Manhattan Kiwanis Club. Circle K members also helped with the judging of the Kiwanis Club's annual children's pet and hobby show.

Clinic Club hears talks about heart transplants

Pre-medicine and pre-dentistry students in the Clinic Club discussed the controversial abortion laws and how abortions affect the medical field. They also saw a movie about abortion and brought several speakers from the University of Kansas Medical Center to lecture on the subject.

Other doctors spoke to the club on the advantages of specialization in medicine and of being a general practitioner. Speakers were invited to talk on the heart transplant operations, citing successes and further developments in the field. Club discussions centered around requirements for acceptance into medical centers and financial assistance available for medical study.

Chi Epsilon helps KU in establishing chapter

Installation of a new chapter at the University of Kansas occupied members of a delegation from the University chapter of Chi Epsilon, civil engineering organization. Chi Epsilon members contributed material and information to the national magazine, the "Transit," and assisted in laying out the course for rowing team meets. Members also participated in extensive work on the Civil Engineering library and started a program of assistance to freshman civil engineers in basic engineering courses. A delegation also attended the national conclave in December.

Collegiate 4-H helps, establishes four clubs

Helping to organize new college 4-H clubs was one service project of the 250-member Collegiate 4-H Club. Campuses throughout Kansas that showed an interest in such a club were contacted and members helped with organizational meetings. New clubs were formed at Emporia State, Pittsburg College, Fort Hays State College and Ottawa. The group raised funds for their service projects by selling concessions during the week of the State Fair in Hutchinson. Members also helped surrounding counties 4-H groups by judging speeches and demonstrations.

Young Democrats win top national club award

Highlighting the year for Collegiate Young Democrats was its selection as the top college Democratic club in the nation. The club won the John F. Kennedy award at the Young Democratic convention in Florida during November.

With the Riley County Democrats, the club planned a fund-raising dinner in the spring for Gov. Robert Docking and presented him with an honorary membership in the collegiate club. When Sen. Robert Kennedy of New York spoke on campus in March, he was also presented a membership. During the spring, club members canvassed Riley County registering eligible voters and planned a trip to the national convention.

Community Sisters hear Negro history program

With the aim of helping young Negro girls in Manhattan culturally and to unify and provide social activities for Negro women on campus, the Community Sisters was organized in 1967. During the spring semester, a Negro history program and talent show were presented and the group travelled to Abilene. The organization planned a Homecoming party for members, and treated their adopted little sisters to a Christmas tea.

Cosmopolitan Club sees Russian, English films

Re-organized this year, the Cosmopolitan Club met early in the fall and sang favorite songs from each member's native country. Later in the fall, Yuri Ispolov spoke to the club and showed films on life in Russia. An English couple also spoke to the group about England and showed films of living in their native country. The club participated in the Feast of Nations and took part in International Week in the spring.

Eta Kappa Nu designs grads' composit picture

Producing a composite picture of all recent electrical engineering graduates, and coordinating the department's projects at the Engineers' and Architects' Open House were two projects of Eta Kappa Nu, electrical engineering honorary. President Terry Phillips headed the group's 39 members, which sponsored slide rule instruction classes. The organization sponsored an initiation banquet in December for 25 new members.

Dames send supplies to soldiers in Vietnam

During April, Dames Club members filled 20 boxes with life savers, gum, canned meats and magazines to be shipped to servicemen in Vietnam. This was the second year Dames mailed supplies overseas. The club also helped in the door-to-door drive for the March of Dimes. In October, club members organized a hayrack ride and hot dog roast for their husbands and families and, in December, attended a Christmas tea.

Methodist women mend, give clothes to orphans

Programs at weekly meetings of Kappa Phi, Methodist women's group, included speeches by Associate Dean of Students Walt Friesen and several campus ministers. Kappa Phis caroled and decorated the wards at Irwin Army Hospital while visiting patients there and donated and mended sweaters to send to orphans in Korea. In the spring, the women organized a banquet with the women's guild from the Wesley Foundation.

Radio program explains Latin American system

Sponsoring a radio program on station KSAC, the Latin American Association discussed school systems in South and Central American and Caribean countries. At club meetings, the group showed educational films on Latin America and discussed governmental developments in education in South and Central America. The association presented an exhibit at the United Nations carnival and had a picnic in April.

Light Brigade organizes projects to buy uniforms

Newly organized on campus in the spring of 1967, Light Brigade, women's drill team affiliated with Scabbard and Blade, organized a series of money-raising projects to pay for new uniforms. In the fall, members organized a bake sale and sold a liquid cleanser in Mahattan and their home towns. The group also sold nametags to ROTC cadets on campus. In the fall, the women were the official hostesses for the annual Invitational International Rifle Tournament.

Throughout the year, Light Brigade members concentrated on rushing and pledging new members. A minimum 2.0 grade point average and sophomore standing were required.

Mennonite fellowship tutors Manhattan youth

Christmas vacation found members of the Mennonite Fellowship discussing current issues at a graduate seminar in North Carolina. Later, they went to the Mennonite Biblical Seminary in Indiana to discuss the topic "Why Should You Study Theology?" As part of the Friendship Tutoring Program, members helped local grade and high school children with their school work and took them on excursions into the country.

Grain Science students hear series of seminars

"What is New in Research in the Department of Grain Science and Industry" was the topic of William Hoover, department head, at one of six seminars of the Milling Association. Members of the organization, all students in the grain science department, also heard Wendell Clithero, from the IBM Corporation in Chicago, discuss nutrient economics at a meeting. They later sponsored a club picnic in the spring.

Newman Club sponsors weekday guitar Masses

Providing guitar players for masses on Sunday mornings and throughout the week at the Catholic student center, members of the Newman Club worked to develop a more meaningful and modern liturgy. The club was also responsible for providing educational speakers for communion breakfasts and Sunday evening programs.

In addition to assisting with the Friendship Tutoring project, club members presented special programs for local nursing homes and Christmas caroled for soldiers at the Ft. Riley hospital.

Coeds entertain soldiers during Christmas season

At a spring tea, Off-Campus Women entertained potential women students. The group also heard June Heftner speak at a special meeting on "Today's Modern Fashions." Members participated in the AWS exchange dinner in November and, at Christmas time, went caroling in the Manhattan area with the men of Straube scholarship house. The group visited Irwin Army Hospital at Ft. Riley to entertain soldiers at Halloween, and sponsored a dance in the spring to acquaint high school seniors with the University.

After Halloween and Christmas trips to visit soldiers in Ft. Riley's Irwin Army Hospital, the 44 Off-Campus Women prepare valentines greetings to later deliver and distribute to the Vietnam veterans.

Composed of undergraduate students interested in economics and maintaining a minimum B average in at least 12 hours of economics courses, Omicron Delta Epsilon met twice monthly to hear speakers from the field. The group furnished guest speakers for fall and spring economics professional meetings, including Vernon Ruttan from Purdue University, and Dean Carroll Hess from the College of Agriculture.

Presided over by George Johnson, the group prepared a picture index of all economics graduate students for use by the faculty.

Omicron Nu promotes Home Ec achievements

Promoting recognition within the University, Omicron Nu, home economics honorary, held spring tapping ceremonies for the first time during classroom periods. Early in the fall, members spoke to freshman home economics classes to tell them about their functions. The group kept a bulletin board in Justin hall to recognize sophomore honor students in home economics, and worked with Mortar Board to produce a Graduate School booklet. With Miriam Moore as president, the society sent a delegate to its national conclave in Lincoln, Neb.

Pre-Vet Club awards two $50 scholarships

Two $50 scholarships were awarded to freshmen in the College of Veterinary Medicine by the Pre-Veterinary Club. The group participated in the Veterinary Medicine Open House with the display, "A Pre-Vet is the First Step to Becoming a Vet." At monthly meetings, professors discussed opportunities and requirements for veterinary professions in the military, research, small and large animal hospitals and government fields.

Putnam Scholars hear McCain at fall banquet

President James McCain and Dwight Nesmith, associate professor of engineering, addressed members of the Putnam Scholars Association at their fall banquet. New members were introduced and presented membership pins. Other group activities included a chili feed in the fall and a picnic in the spring. Members were selected on the basis of special test scores and their rank in their high school graduating classes.

Urban study programs attract Baptist students

Each Sunday morning, members of the Roger Williams Fellowship, with Darnell Hawkins as president, met at the Baptist Campus Center for study groups and discussions about their personal involvement with their religion. Sunday evenings, members again met for dinner and a program presented by students or guest speakers. They also participated in two discussion-study groups, Freshman Forum and Faith and Life studies during the week. Other activities included an annual retreat in the spring, a Christmas party and a Valentines party. Several group members also went to Chicago and Kansas City, where they participated in urban studies.

Military honorary trains pledges in field tactics

Before becoming active members of Scabbard and Blade, military honorary, pledges were given tactical problems in the field. Training was at night in order to teach pledges how to conduct night attacks. The group collected and distributed information about draft laws and requirements to schools. Each member also contributed to the Red Cross Bloodmobile. Annual activities included the Military Ball and a military review.

Therapist group repairs speech clinic facilities

Sigma Alpha Eta, national professional society for prospective speech and hearing therapists, was represented at the organization's national convention in Chicago in the fall. Convention speakers stressed a change from academic interest to professional and graduate work. Club projects included cleaning and repairing the speech clinic and its therapeutical aids, and a field trip to the University of Kansas Medical Center.

S.E.A. members hear blind students' program

Students and teachers from the Kansas State School for the Blind demonstrated methods for teaching the visually handicapped at a meeting of the Student Education Association. At another meeting, Allen Cohen from the University of California at Berkeley spoke to members about narcotics. Other program topics included first aid, sex education and a mock interview for a teaching position. Small discussion groups were planned, each led by an education student. In the spring, an awards banquet was given at which outstanding students in education were recognized and new officers were announced.

Education majors heard performances by sightless students from the Kansas State School for the Blind.

Theta Sigma Phis train during college weekend

At a Kansas City College Weekend for future journalists, several members of Theta Sigma Phi, women's professional journalism society, received on-the-job training in journalistic positions. Group members sponsored a publicity clinic for all organization and living group publicity chairmen to help them obtain better publicity for the groups. The society announced the Manhattan Civic Leader and Kansas Presswoman of the Year at its annual Matrix Table banquet in the spring.

Agronomy club enters booths at Science Day

Soil erosion by rain, flowering response to daylight and the pathway to certified seed production were subjects of the Wheat State Agronomy Club's displays at Ag Science Day. The group's principle money-making project was again the selling of crop judging samples to 4-H clubs as teaching aids. Other events were a speech and essay contest, conducted through the American Society of Agronomy, a student-faculty picnic and a spring recognition banquet.

Wildlife Society publishes Kansas game book

Extra help for a weekend at a deer check station, operated by the Kansas Forestry, Fish and Game Department, was provided by the 45 members of the Wildlife Society. Bob McWhorter, area land manager of Kansas for the Forestry, Fish and Game Department spoke to the group on the management of federal lands around the state's reservoirs. Other group activities included publication of a book, "Game Birds of Kansas." They also participated in the Western Student Wildlife Conclave and the Wildlife Bowl. The annual banquet was in April.

HOUSING

Mud fights during Derby Day, the excitement of a bid to pledge or a bed race during Spring Fling are experiences that develop students in University living groups. Freshmen, living in residence halls for the first year, find companionship and diversity in the people around them. Hours spent together in studying, eating or just talking develop into friendships that continue after pledges move into Greek houses or upperclassmen into apartments. Although new responsibilities are added to their daily schedules, students find a means of identity and communication with others in the group through service, competition and recreation. Painting the house during work week, decorating for Homecoming or winning an intramurals play-off creates a spirit of pride in belonging to the group that remains after the student has graduated.

Weary expressions turn to smiles as racers cool off under the spray of a nearby fire hydrant. Competing teams pushed beds from a starting place in front of the Union, around campus to All Faiths Chapel.

Gathered around their second place float, Goodnow and West hall residents await the judges' decision.

Independents compete in Spring Fling games

Crowning of the Wildcat and Wildkitten, a tug-of-war, street and dorm dances, a bed race and an afternoon picnic highlighted Spring Fling 1967. At the residence hall awards banquet Tuesday evening, Sherry Spillman of Goodnow hall and George Shupe of Marlatt hall were named Spring Fling royalty. Independent students chose the pair from 10 contestants representing their living groups during voting in individual halls Monday. Also at the banquet, Ron Lundquist was selected most outstanding independent man and Mary Southard was named outstanding independent woman.

Saturday morning's bed decorations winners were Ford hall and Straube scholarship house, who jointly designed a "Mod Bed by Ford." The Ford and Straube team also placed first in the bed race which followed the judging.

After the bed race and before more games, students enjoy a picnic lunch served near All-Faith Chapel.

Greek groups organize song program for charity

Several extra-curricular activities especially designed for Greek living groups kept fraternity and sorority members busy throughout the year.

Greek Sing, organized after the annual IF Sing was cancelled for lack of participation, donated its proceeds to a local charity. Ten of 11 sororities and 20 of 24 fraternities entered Homecoming house decorations with Delta Delta Delta and Sigma Nu emerging as grand prize winners.

Sigma Chi and Lambda Chi Alpha each invited all Greeks to participate in Derby Day and the Chariot Relays. Four sorority-fraternity groups produced 25-minute skits for Harlequinade, in which Kappa Alpha Theta and Phi Delta Theta took top honors in 1967 and Kappa Delta and Phi Kappa Tau were victors in 1968.

Singing "Mame" and "It's a Big, Wide, Wonderful World," the women of Alpha Chi Omega were one of three sororities in the first Greek Sing, sponsored as a benefit for the city's children's zoo.

Pulling sorority riders, fraternity teams race for the finish line in the annual Lambda Chi Alpha Chariot Relays. Delta Upsilon unseated Beta Theta Pi as champion of the contest in the spring of 1967.

Lambda Chis, KDs win Greek Week competition

Launched by a United Fund drive, netting $118, Greek Week activities included fraternity-sorority exchange dinners, Greek games, dances and a housemothers' bridge party. With each Greek house participating in four events, Lambda Chi Alpha and Kappa Delta took first places in game competition. The coronation of a king and queen and a reorganized Greek Sing culminated the celebration. Working to unite sororities, Panhellenic Council, consisting of representatives from each house, discussed the fair housing resolution and evaluated formal rush. Junior Panhellenic, the pledge equivalent of the senior group, reviewed pledge scholarship programs.

Culminating Greek Week festivities, Greeks dance to music by the Midnight Workers at the Delta Tau Delta house, one of the three houses providing Friday night entertainment following the Greek games.

Togas, sandals and beards typify the competitors for Greek royalty each fall. Dennis Culley, number seven, representing Delta Upsilon, was crowned Greek king, while Mary Lou Grosko, a Chi Omega, was queen.

Rain greets rushees going to parties on Sunday afternoon, the first day of rush week. Rushees went in designated groups to initial open house parties at each of the 11 sororities the first two days.

On Tuesday, the third day of rush week, rushees are shown through their choice of eight sorority houses.

After opening their bids Friday afternoon, two new pledge sisters congratulate each other.

Sororities rush freshmen in new informal system

Usually limited to upperclass women, informal rush was temporarily opened to freshmen in the fall. Sororities invited rushees for informal get-togethers and to their houses for dinner. Twenty-six freshmen pledged informally and with those who pledged during formal rush the 11 houses gained 306 members.

During summer rush, the 22 fraternities and two colonies sponsored parties for potential members throughout the state. A record number of 315 men pledged 22 houses during that time. In the fall, formal rush week activities resulted in an additional 149 fraternity pledges, pushing the total number of new fraternity members to 464, well above the record set during first semester in 1966-67 of 374 men.

Carne Bagley, Panhellenic president, greets anxious rushees as they begin formal rush week activities.

Fraternity members welcome prospective pledges during men's rush week in September. After formal dinners and informal evening get-togethers, a total of 149 men pledged the 24 fraternity houses.

During work week, Tri-Delta women practice a skit based on "Oklahoma" to present during formal rush.

Before parties start, rushees gather in floor lobbies to receive, accept and decline invitations each day.

Prospective pledges watch Delta Zeta actives perform a rush week skit with the theme "Music Man."

Activities at rush parties included skits, informal talks about Greek life and tours of the houses.

Plans were completed for a new Delta Zeta chapter house to replace the one located at 1803 Laramie. The new house will feature contemporary styling and a third floor lounge with skylight and terrace.

DZs earn state award for individual scholarship

At Delta Zeta State Day in Topeka, the chapter received the State Day award for the highest individual scholarship among DZ actives and pledges in Kansas during 1966-67. The women adopted a needy Manhattan family at Christmas and pumped gasoline at a local filling station as a money-raising project. DZ social functions included a neighborhood block party, mothers' and fathers' weekends, a Christmas party and the spring formal. The sorority expanded plans and acquired the lot for construction of a new chapter house, scheduled for completion in 1969.

Homecoming title goes to Alpha Delta Pi coed

For their outstanding correspondence with national officers, Alpha Delta Pi was awarded a silver serving dish at the sorority's national convention in Vancouver, Canada. An ADPi was elected Homecoming queen and Miss Agriculture. The women joined with Lambda Chi Alpha at Christmas to invite local children to the houses for dinner, games and gifts.

Participating in the Multiple Schlerosis drive, ADPis also Christmas caroled at Irwin Army Hospital. The women's social events included a Halloween costume party, a chile supper served by pledges and a spring formal. The ADPis also captured second place in the 1968 Harlequinade.

Pi Phis send presents to children in Vietnam

Celebrating their national centennial anniversary, the Kansas Beta chapter of Pi Beta Phi received a national standards award at their national convention during the summer. Pi Phis worked to redecorate their basement into an informal living room and, at Christmas, had a clothing and toy exchange at their house party for orphans in Vietnam. Socially, the women organized the Monmouth Duo with Kappa Kappa Gamma, a Christmas party and the annual formal in the spring. Individual Pi Phi honors included Cannonball queen and first runner-up to Miss K-State-Manhattan.

Actives and rushees serve themselves at the Pi Phi's buffet dinner during fall informal rush.

IFC named outstanding for scholarship, projects

Recipient of the "Iron Man Award," Interfraternity Council was named the outstanding IFC group in the nation. The award was based on six points, including fraternity scholarship, membership increase, charity projects, evaluation programs and membership and rushing rules. Fraternities recorded 16 per cent increase in membership, with scholastic averages still considerably above the all men's average. For the first time, IFC removed all restrictions on rushing, allowing fraternities to open rush throughout the year. The group also anticipated an increase of three national fraternities in the next five years.

Delta Sigs win award from national convention

As a result of a nationally planned leadership program, the men of Delta Sigma Phi were recognized for their progressive ideas at their national convention. The men also worked with women of Ford hall to sponsor an Easter egg hunt for underprivileged children. Delta Sigs placed first in the intramural fraternity bowling league and participated in football, basketball, swimming and tennis. House social events included a Homecoming party for alumni, the Founder's Day Ball, the Carnation Ball, Sailors' Ball and a costume party with a French underground theme.

In the fall, the men of Delta Sigma Phi, residing at 1100 Fremont, welcomed their new housemother, Mrs. Leland Keefer. Alumni donations made the purchase of a color television for the house possible.

Fijis petition for charter, buy new chapter house

With the purchase of a house during the summer, Delta Colony of Phi Gamma Delta remodeled, painted, carpeted and furnished their newly acquired residence before moving into it during the fall. The colony also contracted a petition for a national charter, to be presented at the Ekklesia in the Grand Bahamas in August.

Socially, Fijis had a three-day Fiji Island Party, consisting of a formal and picnic banquet. A Purple Garter Party was also organized in the fall with a roaring 20's theme and the traditional Norris Pig Dinner, in honor of author Frank Norris, was conducted the evening before pledge initiation. The men participated in all intramurals and, with Kappa Alpha Theta, entered a Harlequinade skit. Outstanding Fijis were members of Student Senate and edited the IFC rush book.

During the year, Triangle members remodeled the entrance way to their chapter house at 221 N. Delaware.

Triangle takes second in fraternity scholarship

Collecting old clothing in the fall, the men of Triangle fraternity donated them to Boys' Town in Nebraska. During several house social hours, the men heard campus minister Don Fallon speak on the subjects of morals and dating. Dean Walter Friesen and Vice-president Chester Peters also spoke on the fraternity system and the University judicial system. In the spring of 1967, Triangle men placed second in fraternity scholastic honors and were recognized as sixth out of 24 national chapters in fraternity performance.

Needy children get toys from Acacia exchange

Working through the Manhattan Fire Department, men of Acacia organized their annual Christmas gift exchange and donated toys to needy children as a community project. The men also organized a group to help in the United Fund Drive, which spent several Sunday afternoons calling door-to-door for contributions. In intramurals, Acacia men took champion bowling team honors. Raising funds by hiring themselves out for manual labor, Acacia pledges built a $300 tool shed for the house. Social activities included the Night on the Nile costume party with an Egyptian theme and the Playboy Club Party.

AKL members attend KU leadership college

Representing the chapter at the National Leadership College, 15 members of Alpha Kappa Lambda went to the University of Kansas conference in September. During the year, the men also initiated a service project in which members made weekly visits to elderly residents of Wharton Manor. AKLs discussed current events at Thursday night forums at the house and represented Arizona in the Mock Political Convention. The men worked as presidents of Commerce Council, Alpha Kappa Psi and Social Coordinating Council. AKLs were also members of Arnold Air Society, Pershing Rifles, Scabbard and Blade, Sigma Tau and Phi Kappa Phi and participated in all intramurals.

ATO chapter receives scholarship recognition

Men of Alpha Tau Omega were recipients of a national scholarship award at their national convention at Syracuse University. As service projects they worked with their auxiliary organization, the Sisters of the Maltese Cross, in entertaining 15 children at a Halloween party and preparing Easter baskets for children in hospitals.

Refurnishing their living room and housemother's quarters, ATOs continued plans for a new house, to be completed in 1970. An annual pledge-active day, consisting of a football game, picnic and dance and the White Tea Rose Formal marked the men's social events. Alumni visitors to the house included Assistant Coach Don Powell and Coach Vince Gibson, who addressed ATO mothers at the mothers' weekend dinner. Members belonged to Student Senate, Blue Key, Phi Kappa Phi, Madrigals and Pershing Rifles.

Betas organize Greeks in fund-raising program

As a major campus project, the men of Beta Theta Pi worked with Interfraternity Council to organize Greek Sing when the annual Interfraternity Sing was discontinued for lack of participation. Four fraternities and three sororities sang in the non-competitive event at City Auditorium to raise money for the Manhattan Children's Zoo.

Teams from the Beta house won the University Quiz Bowl competition in the spring of 1967 and placed first in the fraternity division of intramural basketball. Three fraternity members also placed in the top four finishers in the fraternity intramural handball singles.

Betas were members of Student Senate and were in the starting line-ups in varsity basketball and football. One member was listed among the top three national steeplechase runners.

Betas, 500 Sunset, organized a Hippie party, the annual Pig Formal and a barbecue party in the spring.

Admiring nightshirt favors to be given to dates, Delts prepare for their Pajama Party in February.

Delta Tau Delta plans anniversary celebration

Men of Delta Tau Delta began plans for their 50th anniversary, to be celebrated in the fall of 1969. Mailing lists were organized for invitations to the alumni reunion. During the fall semester, Delts planned a paddle party, western party and a Christmas tree decorating party. A barbecue and a pajama party were in the spring and the Rainbow Formal was in April.

Delts were represented in six intramural sports and were members of Steel Ring, Student Revue Board, Sigma Tau, Eta Kappa Nu and Alpha Kappa Psi. Two Union committee chairmen and five subcommittee chairmen were Delts.

DUs win national merit for outstanding chapter

Outstanding scholarship and chapter activities brought Delta Upsilon national recognition as the most outstanding Delta Upsilon chapter. The fraternity also received the DU international scholarship achievement award for the best scholastic record nationally and the Kansas City DU Alumni Club Cup for the most outstanding scholarship among DU chapters in the Big Eight Conference.

Adding new living room furniture, the fraternity also purchased new beds and planned an addition to the housemother's quarters. At Christmas, chapter members decorated Wharton Manor.

Clovia women give tea to show modern house

With the completion of their new house and its dedication in October, women of Clovia 4-H House sponsored a tea, luncheon and open house for all campus housemothers. House alumnae attended Thanksgiving and Christmas reunions and a senior dinner was planned in May.

Two parties, a Crystal Ball Formal at Christmas and a semi-formal in the spring were also organized. As a service project, Clovia women sent toys and clothing to children in Vietnam. Represented in Chimes, Sparks and Alpha Lambda Delta, they also participated in intramurals.

Two Clovia women welcome a visitor to their new house northeast of campus. The structure was completed in August and accommodates 45 women, double the number of residents in the previous house.

Housing 4-H members attending Home Economics Hospitality Day, Clovia also loaned their new home at 1200 Pioneer Lane for tours sponsored by the Home Ec Extension program during semester break.

Smurthwaite residents adopt Manhattan family

Women of Smurthwaite Scholarship House adopted a Manhattan family of eight as a special project. Other activities included a semi-formal Christmas party, a spring formal and dinner exchanges with residence halls and scholarship houses. Each semester a scholarship dinner honored Smurthwaite women with outstanding scholastic achievement. A traveling scholarship trophy with Smith and Straube Scholarship Houses was awarded to Smurthwaite women during the fall for high grades.

Smurthwaite women were active as a Homecoming queen finalist, Home Economics Council president, officers in College Republican Club and members of Mortar Board, Light Brigade and Madrigal singers.

During an evening song practice, the women harmonize to "The Smurthwaite Song" and show tunes.

For Smurthwaite women at 1500 N. Manhattan, activities included a football game with men from Straube and a Valentine's party. During the year, the house's laundry room facilities were remodeled.

Smith decorations win in independent division

Men of Smith Scholarship House took first place in the independent men's division for Homecoming decorations with a purple sun rising over their silhouette of the University campus. Other house activities included an annual Christmas semi-formal, a spring formal, a Christmas stag party and a Friday the 13th Party. House members, who were selected from applications when registering at the University, belonged to Social Coordinating Council, the Collegian staff, University swim team and the University Activities Board. Smith men received first place in men's independent intramurals and placed second in overall golf competition with individual medalists.

Straube residents attend Penn State convention

Highlighting social activities of Straube Scholarship House was a formal in March at the Ft. Riley Officers' Club. Other activities included an informal Christmas party with a Scandanavian theme and mixers with women's residence halls. Fourth in the independent men's division in intramurals, Straube men won the swimming relay and placed first in wrestling competition. In February, two Straube men attended the Kansas Residence Hall convention at Pittsburg State College and in March Straube sent representatives to the National Association of Residence Hall convention at Pennsylvania State University. As a special project, the men repainted the inside of their house. Straube men belonged to Alpha Mu, Scabbard and Blade and Arnold Air Society.

Men of Straube, a cooperative scholarship house, 1221 Thurston, must maintain a minimum 2.5 grade point average. The house was originally organized for men in the fields of grain science and industry.

Six women's dormitories house more than 1,800

Accommodating more than 1,800 women students, six residence halls provided educational films, opportunities to discuss issues such as drug usage and the Vietnam war and the services of a campus minister. Freshman women honors students, participating in the first honors living program, occupied one wing of Goodnow hall. Attending special meetings and classes, the students planned the governing of Van Zile hall, the future site of the honors program. Graduate students were granted an option to live on the ninth floor of Ford hall. Dormitory projects included aiding in the Friendship Tutoring program and interdormitory tutoring projects.

Honoring Mamie Boyd, for whom their hall on Petticoat Lane was named, Boyd hall women treated her to a birthday party in December. They presented her with a record collection at the celebration.

Boyd hall takes second in Homecoming contest

Willie the Wildcat painted the white Sooner tornado with "purple pride paint" and won second place for Boyd hall in the women's dormitory division of Homecoming decorations. For the Christmas formal December 8, the women chose the theme of "Noel Soiree" and decorated the living room and hall like a hotel. Men were permitted to call for their dates at their rooms.

Other hall social events included a fall and a spring party and a scholarship banquet. A tea for faculty members was in March. In intramurals, Boyd women placed first in swimming and third in volleyball. The coeds had members in Alpha Lambda Delta, Sparks and the University Choir.

Ford women plan hunt for Head Start children

Working with men from Moore hall, Ford hall coeds entertained children from Project Head Start with an Easter egg hunt, followed by a party at Ford. The women sponsored open houses in the fall at the two-year-old dorm for Homecoming and Parents' Day, participated in the Homecoming decorations contest and served refreshments to friends and families after the game.

During Mothers' and Fathers' weekends in the spring, parents were invited to stay in rooms at the dorms. At Christmas, residents planned a candlelighting service, at which the dorm chorus sang. Ford women participated in Spring Fling and organized a winter formal, "Lollipops and Roses," and a scholarship dinner, at which residents with a 3.0 grade point were honored.

Goodnow hall contest recognizes coeds' talent

For the second consecutive year, the women of Goodnow hall organized a Miss Canary Stomper contest to recognize talented coeds in the dorm. Other University students also performed at informal hall coffee hours, at which bridge and guitar lessons were given. A Thursday film series featured educational films and two full-length movies and a Question-of-the-Week program polled student opinion about controversial issues.

At Christmas, the women prepared and presented a satirical show about Bob Hope's USO tours to patients at Irwin Army Hospital.

Living adjacent to Marlatt, Goodnow hall residents welcomed visitors with a plywood mascot, "Goodie." In March, residents celebrated the birthday anniversary of Isaac Goodnow, for whom the hall was named.

Constructing a "Purple Power" fountain, Putnam hall women placed first in the independent women's Homecoming decorations. Putnam coeds also added new books, furniture and carpeting to the library.

Putnam coeds win cup for top dorm scholarship

Recording the highest grades for the previous semester among women's residence halls, women of Putnam hall were awarded the traveling scholarship cup in the fall. The women sponsored an annual spring tea in March for faculty and administrative heads. They also entertained representatives from the Peace Corps, the Red Cross and Vista, who later spoke to hall residents.

At Christmas, the women served Cornish hens at a special dinner for faculty and other guests. They also organized a Christmas formal and decorated Irwin Army Hospital. Residents were in Angel Flight and Mortar Board, a Homecoming queen semi-finalist and an Engin-dear.

Located on the northeast corner of campus, Bessie B. West hall was opened in 1962. The women residents celebrated Christmas by making tree ornaments and decorating the doors of their rooms.

West hall adopts family, old folks for Christmas

Housing 304 students, West hall was again transformed into a women's dormitory, having housed men in 1966-67. The hall was operated completely by individual corridor governments, with activities including corridor birthday parties and candlelightings to announce pinnings.

Dorm activities were the "Love Inn" formal in February and the open house in December, organized around the theme "Go West." Fathers' and Mothers' weekends were planned for the spring semester. Adopting residents of the Parkview Manor rest home, West coeds sponsored the annual Christmas party and a birthday party in the spring. The women also adopted a local family of 10. They were taken out for a Christmas dinner and given gifts of clothing and toys, donated by individual corridors.

Spring fever affects both students and instructors as a history class assembles informally outside.

Breaking up the monotonous hours of study in their rooms, dorm residents frequently retreat to the floor lobby for a spontaneous card game. Gin rummy and bridge games often extend late into the night.

Men's residence halls expand to house 2,280

Completion of Haymaker hall, the last dormitory planned for the northeast campus complex, increased the University housing capacity for men to 2,280. In order to utilize available housing, freshman men were required to live in University housing unless living at home, with a relative or in a fraternity house. As part of continuing housing development, basketball and tennis courts, libraries and tutorial programs were among necessary additions. Homecoming decorations and intramurals were sources of competition for all men's residence halls, while Haymaker sponsored a finalist candidate in the Favorite Man on Campus contest by serenading women's living groups the week of elections. Functions, exchange dinners, a whip cream fight and Spring Fling activities with women's dormitories also occupied leisure time for residence hall men.

Many students rely on the daily newspapers delivered to their dorms for keeping tab on world events.

Haymaker construction completes dorm complex

With the completion of Haymaker hall, the four dorm complex at the northeast corner of campus was dedicated in September. Ceremonies were conducted in Derby Food Center, followed by a seated service dinner. Guests included Florence Haymaker, for whom the dorm was named.

Haymaker residents set up a ham radio station in the dorm from which they contacted operators as far away as Formosa. The men also organized a wrestling and weight room in the basement and equipped it with mats, weights and gym equipment. At Christmas, they organized floor parties and a dorm tree decorating party and donated trees to several Manhattan families.

Haymaker hall, at the corner of Claflin and N. Manhattan, was completed and used for the first time this year. The nine-story dormitory houses approximately 600 men when filled to capacity.

Combined efforts of Marlatt and Goodnow honor students produced the New Jersey delegation to the Mock Political Convention. Other Marlatt members represented New York at the minority party caucus.

Marlatt wins men's dormitory intramural division

Receiving first place intramural honors in the men's dormitory division, residents of Marlatt hall also participated with Goodnow hall women in a Headstart project to entertain Manhattan underprivileged children at Easter. Filled to a capacity of 600, the hall organized tennis court dances and a Christmas dance during the fall semester. In the spring, a Casino party, formal and an open house were planned.

As part of the University's program for housing development, a dark-room for photographers was added to the Marlatt basement in the fall. The hall housed the president and secretary of Blue Key and the presidents of K-Club and Statesmen.

Moore hall experiments with open door parties

Organizing the leadership banquet during Spring Fling activities, the 500 men of Moore hall invited Charles McAtee, Kansas prison director, to be the guest speaker. Also during the spring semester, experiments were begun with open door floor parties, at which the men were permitted to invite their dates to their rooms. Second floor also participated in an experiment to collect data about a college student's needs.

Fall activities included a semi-formal and open house for Parents' Day and a whipped cream fight with West hall women. In November, Dean John Chalmers of the College of Arts and Sciences headed discussions at a leadership conference with the executive council. Hall additions included a basketball court behind the dorm.

Peering through windows bedecked with shaving cream, a Moore hall resident calls for a weekend date.

Decorations for Moore hall's spring formal, "Up, Up and Away," were suspended from helium balloons from the ceiling. The dorm, on the northeast corner of campus, provides accommodations for 500.

Offering an added attraction to prospective athletes, the Athletic dorm at 1710 Denison was completed in September at a cost of $750,000. The brick structure houses men in all athletic sports.

Athletic dorm provides modern comforts for 177

Completion of the Athletic Residence hall in the fall provided accommodations for 177 men in all sports, most of whom were on athletic scholarships. The men enjoyed wall-to-wall carpeting and individual heating and air-conditioning units in their two-man rooms. Other facilities included private lavatories, a swimming pool, sauna bath and a recreation room with pool tables and ping-pong tables. Men were served training table meals throughout the year in the dorm's two dining rooms, which were completed in October.

In April, a formal open house was organized at the dorm. Social events were a Christmas tree-trimming party and a Valentines party.

Breaking the study routine, married students role dice in an evening game with their children. Student-parents often find it necessary to coordinate their work and study schedules with babysitting.

Children become fascinated by textbook pictures and charts as their parents complete reading assignments.

Married students operate Jardine activities center

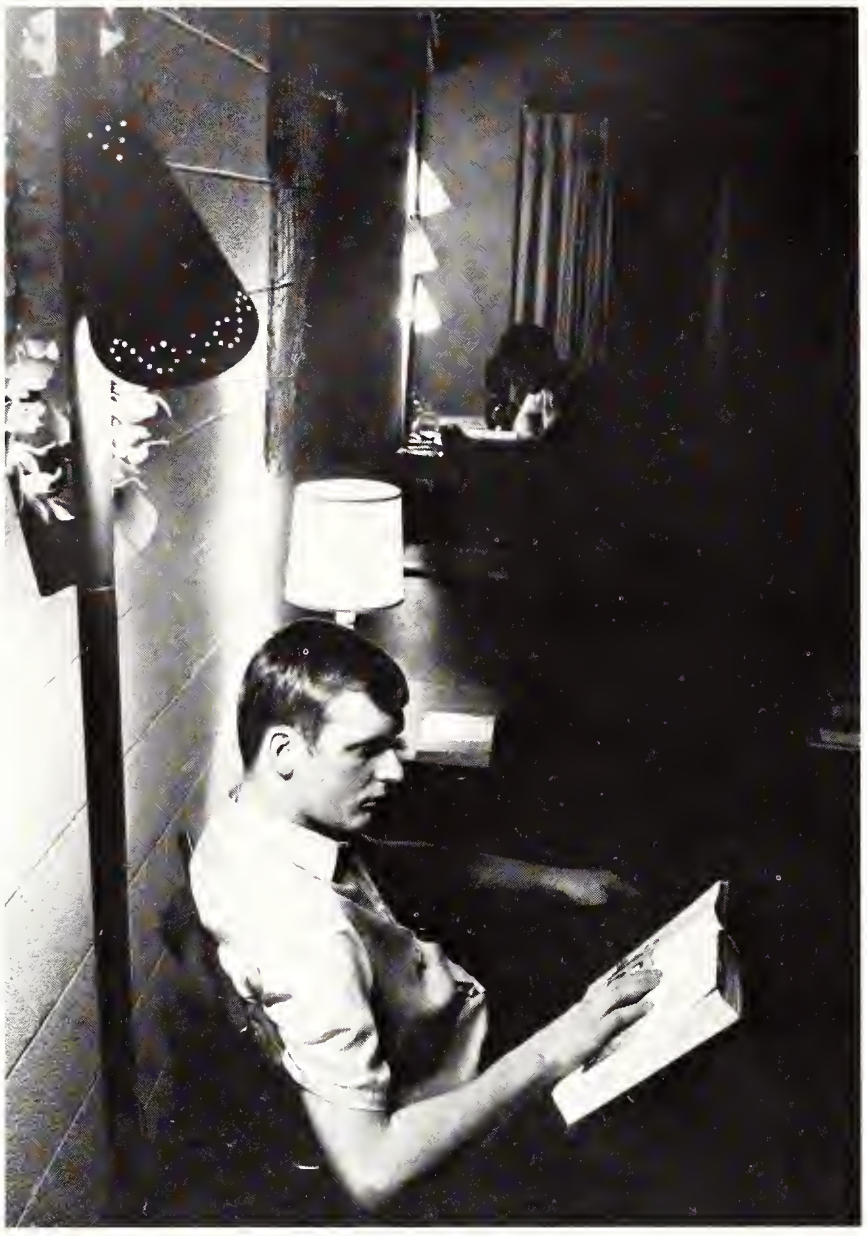
Cooperating with the Office of Student Affairs, the Housing Office and the Department of Family and Child Development, student government representatives from Jardine Terrace established an activities center. The center featured programs, lectures and films discussing the needs and concerns of the married student. Married students with children were provided with child care service and, in the evening, the center functioned as a study area for the 565 residents.

Speakers at the center included Sheldon Edelman, assistant director of the Counseling Office, and Beverly Schmalzried and Steve Bollman from the Department of Family and Child Development. In the fall, residents hosted an open house at the center of the 24-building complex.

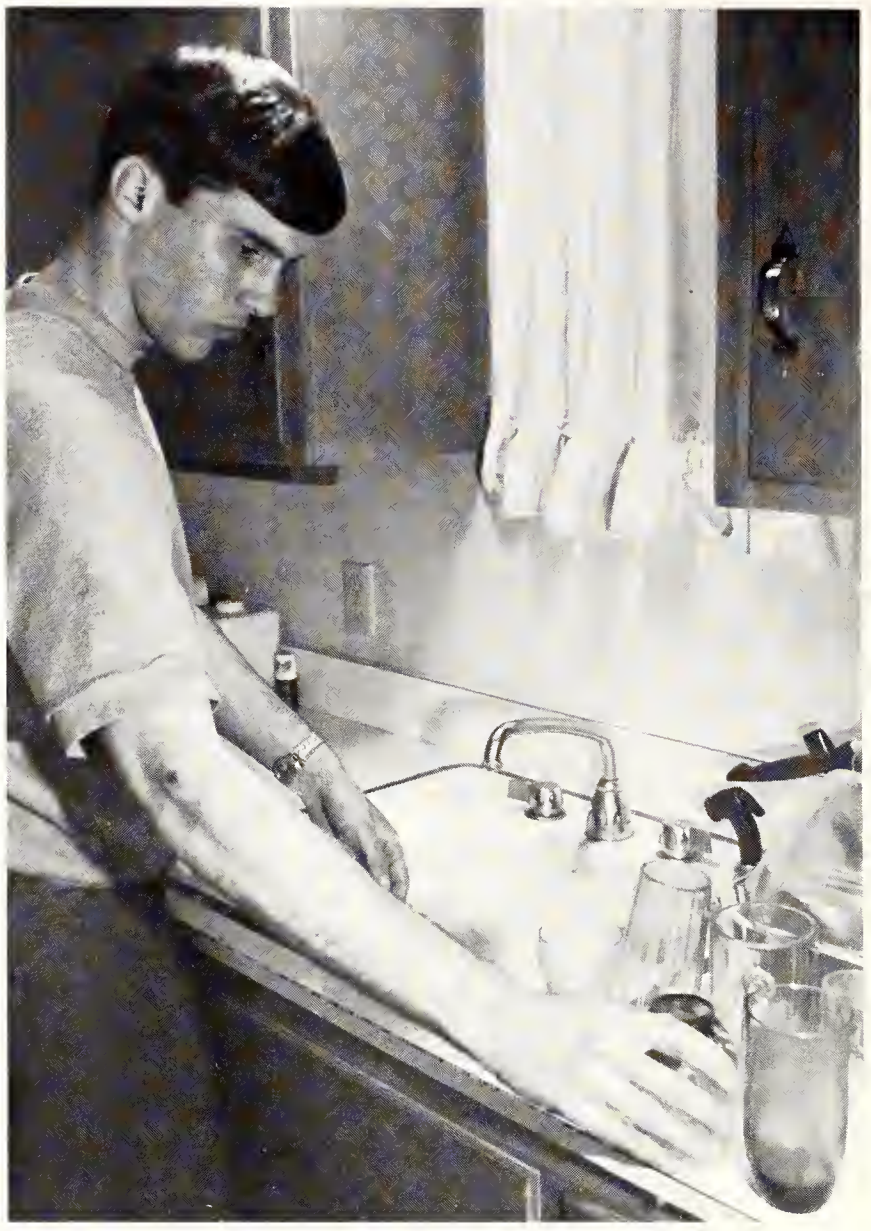
After dinner, doing the dishes together can afford additional conversation time for married students.

Apartment closets are not always restricted to the storage of clothes when couples need extra space.

Television often provides married students with an inexpensive evening's entertainment following study and household chores. Married couples in Jardine benefit from reduced rates for cable television.



Students in apartments must discipline themselves to good study habits amid often noisy surroundings.



Men seeking independent off-campus living find dishwashing and cleaning a part of the daily routine.

Saturday morning means cleaning for most apartment residents, although free from "room checks" imposed in dorms. Off-campus residents generally enjoy far fewer restrictions than in organized housing.

Apartment roommates get together for a quick game of cards before returning to studies after supper.

Students living in apartments must budget time to include shopping, cooking and cleaning chores.

Off-campus apartments attract 4,750 students

Appealing to an increasing number of both single and married students, off-campus housing drew 40 per cent of the student body, or more than 4,750 persons during the fall semester. Single undergraduate men headed the list of those living off-campus with 2,150. Single undergraduate women followed with 748. Nearly 400 single graduate male students and 400 graduate married men lived in off-campus apartments. The lowest figures were of single graduate women with 86.

Restrictions on off-campus living were placed only on the single undergraduate student under 21. Planning a program of better apartment living for students, the University approved only those apartments which met the city building code. Several new apartment complexes were either in the planning stage or already under construction to meet the growing demands.

Although far from a favorite job, making beds is one chore every apartment resident cannot escape.

Away from campus life, a townee coed takes an opportunity to help her brother wash the family car.

Living at home presents problems and advantages

Attending college in their home town, Manhattan students discovered their unique situation brought special problems and needs. The advantages of good food, inexpensive laundry facilities, quiet study places and less restrictive curfew hours were offset by the increasing difficulty in finding a parking place on campus, more frequent arguments with parents and a feeling of isolation from campus activities usually organized through living groups. Townees readily discovered that to be included on campus, they had to take the initiative, which resulted in record numbers signing for Greek rush, joining Off-Campus Women and searching for ties through various University organizations.

Home cooked meals, close family contacts and a room of their own are valued refuges for Manhattan students, as academic and campus activities create normal college pressures and frustrations.

Babysitting and helping a younger sister with homework constitute added responsibility for the townee.

After a Saturday night game, a townee and his date prepare for an evening at home with his family.

ATHLETICS

Sports are a developer of pride — pride in the performance of a gymnast swinging high on the rings, pride in the colors of the University as students turn out in purple blazers and white hats to cheer the Wildcats, pride in the building of a new football stadium and athletic dormitory. For the individual, sports build pride in the mastery of muscles and skills; for the spectators, sports build pride in the image of the University as a competitor and victor. Hours spent working out in practice slowly develop the body and spirit until pride in excelling drives the student to achievement. Competition creates a bond between fans and athletes — a bond that continues through moments of frustration to moments of elation. And spectators, whether students or alumni, feel a special pride in being part of the University.

Athletic Council directs stadium dedication plans

As chairman of Athletic Council, C. Clyde Jones called a committee which worked toward the dedication of the new football stadium. The stadium was scheduled to be completed by the opening football game, Sept. 21, 1968. The athletic fund-raising drive set a goal of $1.6 million for the stadium and received a boost from the Kansas Board of Regents, who passed a revenue bond of $1,450,000.

Living facilities for athletes were completed in October with the opening of the two dining areas. The new dorm featured carpeted rooms, private telephones, outdoor swimming pool and sauna baths. Athletic Council members included two students and 10 appointed faculty members.

Gridiron season begins with new outlook, spirit

K-State opened the 1967 grid season with a new spirit, a new outlook on football.

The change was a result of a new coaching staff, a completely revamped offensive attack and several outstanding individual players.

At the end of the season some were disheartened, others discouraged; but the fact remained that K-State had ended its 21 game drought, beating CSU and barely missing victory in two other games.

Grid men break string, begin season victorious

To the surprise of many skeptical fans, K-State's 21 game losing streak came to an end at the season opener at Colorado State. The 'Cats returned to Manhattan with a 17-7 victory, the first since 1964.

Danny Lankas and the defensive squad put up tough resistance for the Rams, while Bill Nossek launched an offensive attack centered around running backs Corny Davis and Ossie Cain.

Two weeks later, a wind whipped and rain soaked crowd watched Corny Davis carry the ball in for two first quarter touchdowns, in what appeared to be the making of an upset over the seventh ranked Nebraska Cornhuskers.

The 'Cats held on for nearly 59 minutes before a 31-yard Nebraska field goal gave the 'Huskers the deciding 16-14 edge with a minute and 11 seconds left in the game.

KU ruins victory hopes; field goal provides edge

Two K-State fumbles and an intercepted pass set Iowa State up for a disappointing 17-0 shutout at Ames. The following week, 19,000 fans watched nationally ranked Oklahoma rout the Wildcats in a 46-7 Homecoming defeat. The Sooners held K-State scoreless until the fourth quarter, when Corny Davis carried the ball across the line on a 14-yard run.

The annual intra-state rivalry between K-State and KU, however, became the one everyone watched. The Jayhawks opened with an early touchdown and, although the 'Cats scored several plays later, they failed to make the extra point, leaving the 'Hawks with a 7-6 lead. KU kept the lead until the third quarter, when Art Strozier leaped over a would-be tackler, made a one-handed catch and ran 67 yards for the score. The 'Cats held the lead until a fourth quarter field goal gave KU the edge for a 17-16 victory.

Freshmen Wildcats fall, lose first three games

Former head coach at Dodge City Juco, Leroy Montgomery completed his first year as freshman coach.

After a highly successful season of recruiting, K-State had what appeared to be some of the best high school players in the state. In the season opener at Missouri, however, the highly touted freshmen could not come up with the winning combination, losing 12-7.

The young 'Cats second outing proved to be no more encouraging than the first. Meeting the Nebraska frosh at home, they played to a 24-0 shutout. Traveling then to Lawrence to face KU, the freshmen dropped their third game, in what appeared to be a replay of the varsity bout. A late game field goal gave the Jayhawk freshmen a 3-0 edge for the victory.

The only bright spot in the frosh season came in the final game when the Wildcat yearlings organized their offensive attack to down O-State, 23-13 at Stillwater.

With a four and three record, the Wildcat roundballers headed into the annual pre-season Big Eight Tourney. Dropping the last game of the tournament to Nebraska, 62-66, K-State finished in second place, bettering its 1966 ranking by one. The Wildcats opened play with a victory over Missouri. The following night K-State downed Colorado, 74-69 to assure the 'Cats a shot at the championship.

Starting off regular Big Eight competition, K-State traveled to Stillwater to face third place tourney finisher, Oklahoma State. After trailing at halftime, the 'Cats rallied to win 56-46. K-State then downed Nebraska 78-62 before losing to the Iowa State Cyclones, 79-74.

Winter resigns coaching position after 15 years

Big Eight Coach of the Year Tex Winter led his Wildcat roundballers to the 1968 conference title, his eighth such feat in his fifteen-year tenure at K-State. After returning from the NCAA Regional Tournament, Winter made the surprise announcement of his resignation to take the head coaching position at the University of Washington. Hailed as the eighth winningest coach in the nation, Winter compiled a record of 262 victories and 177 losses. Winter was to be succeeded by Cotton Fitzsimmons, who served as his assistant.

'Cats ignore predictions; capture Big Eight title

Overlooked in pre-season picks, the 'Cats surprised and delighted fans as they racked up a 19-9 season's record and captured the Big Eight title with an 11-3 mark in loop tilts. Led by the efforts of All Big Eight guard Steve Honeycutt, the 'Cats downed nationally ranked KU for the second time of the season, to put K-State in sight of the conference crown. With the consistent rebounding of Gene Williams, K-State beat Missouri and CU before facing second place Iowa State. A Williams tip-in at the final gun gave the Wildcats a 63-61 victory over the Cyclones, assuring them of no less than a tie for the crown. The 'Cats, unwilling to share the title, finished the regular season with a 49-47 victory over Oklahoma State.

After opening the season with two victories, the Wildcat yearlings lost three straight before finding the winning mark again, to post a 4-4 record for the year. Led by the Pueblo, Colo. duo of Terry Snider and Eddie Smith, the young 'Cats downed Kansas City Juco, Nebraska, Ft. Scott Juco and Parsons Juco, but couldn't manage a victory over the KU frosh. Plagued by a lack of heighth, the 'Cats dropped two games to the young Kansas Jayhawks.

Stickmen get big start; slump ruins high hopes

Despite an apparent abundance of inexperienced sophomores, Wildcat stickmen opened the season on an optimistic note. Coach Bob Brasher fielded a young squad, with only seven returning lettermen, in a highly successful southern swing, which resulted in a 6-4 record.

Squaring off against Big Eight foes, the 'Cats made a three game sweep of the Nebraska series and captured two of three games at Missouri. The K-State team headed into the Colorado series in a tie for first place with Oklahoma State. But the CU match proved to be the start of a disasterous fall for the 'Cats, dropping two games to the Buffalos, followed by two losses to Iowa State. Hoping to redeem themselves against Oklahoma State, the Wildcats' enthusiasm was dampened when the three game series was rained out.

The 'Cats continued their downward plunge, dropping two to Oklahoma and one to Kansas, ending up the season in fourth place.

Plagued with injuries and poor weather, Bob Brasher's young baseball team finished fourth in the conference after holding an early league lead. The Wildcat hurlers had four games rained out, posting a 16 and 13 overall mark and finishing with a 9 and 8 record in Big Eight competition.

Charles Harper, running the second three mile race of his career, finished in the number two spot at the Big Eight meet, nine seconds under the old record. Conrad Nightingale, defending Big Eight mile champion, surprised many by turning his attention from the mile to the steeplechase; a move which proved successful. Competing in the Compton Coliseum Relays at Los Angeles, he posted an 8:45.6 to set a new conference mark. Running a week later, the Wildcat senior placed first at the United States Track Federation Meet. With second place marks at the NCAA and AAU meets, Nightingale won a birth on the U.S. team, taking a silver medal at the Pan-American Games.

Colorado won the Big Eight championship, followed by Iowa State, Oklahoma, Kansas, Nebraska and K-State.

Team captain Jack Ayres excels in competition on the high bar, the trampoline and the long horse.

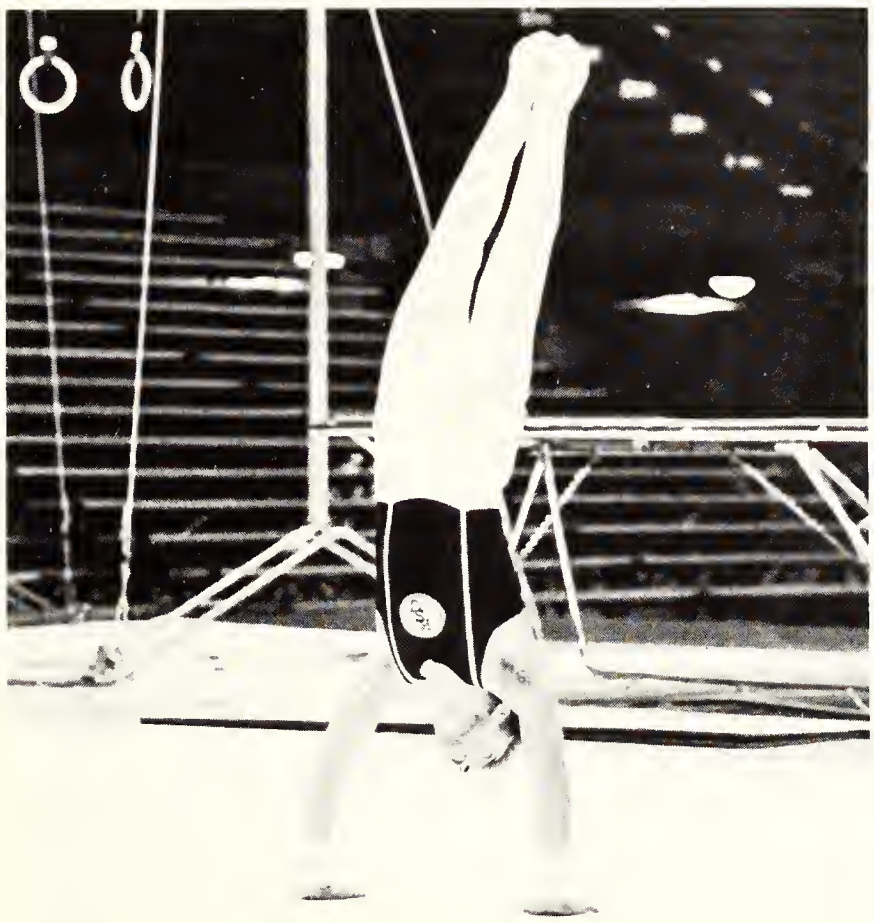
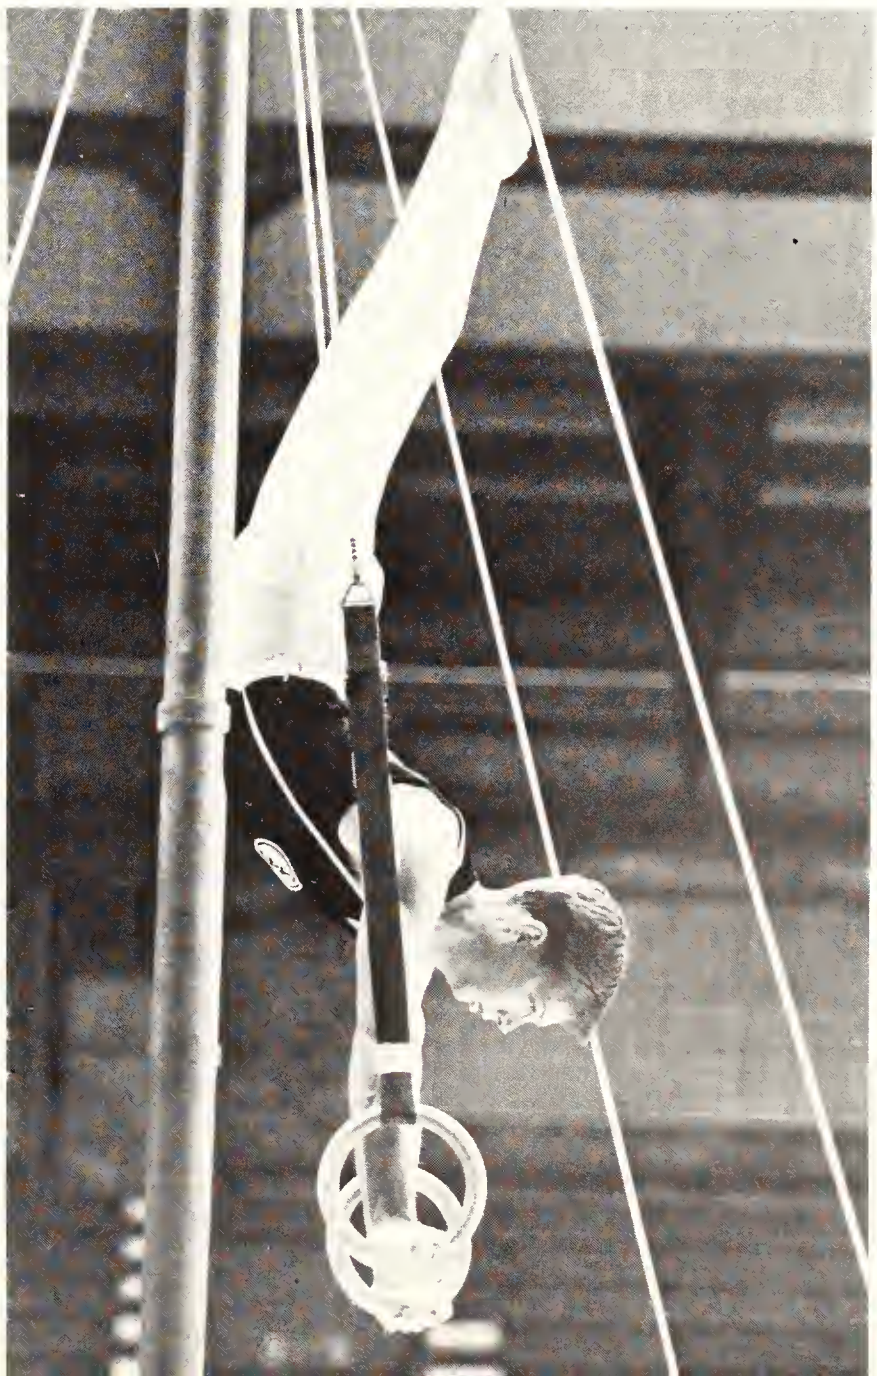
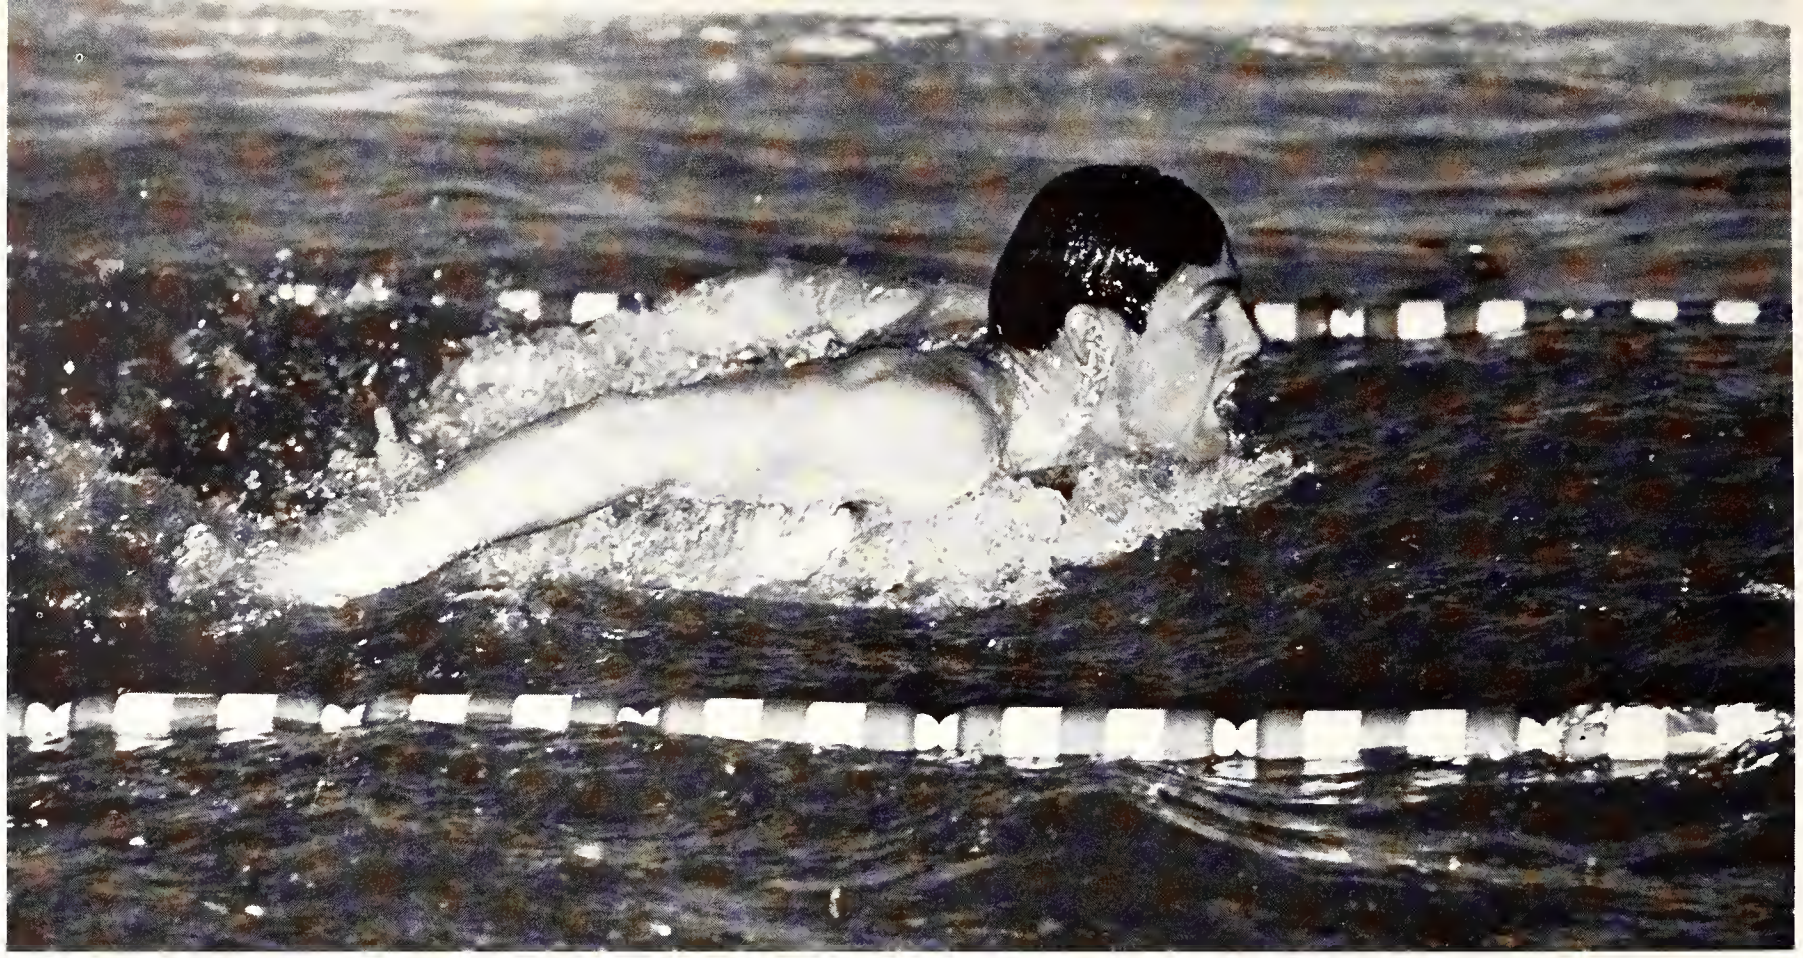
Holding a handstand, Steve Kinder shows his form in free exercise, an event requiring grace and balance.



Demonstrating strength and agility, letterman Colin Campbell performs a handstand on the still rings.





With a look of determination, sophomore Steve Betton fights to maintain a lead in the 200-yard butterfly. Betton was one of six sophomore swimmers to win team positions, while only four seniors returned.

Team captain Craig Ridenour passes his opponent to score a K-State victory in the 1,000-yard freestyle.

Tankers win 2, lose 9, finish in seventh place

Wildcat swimmers opened the 1968 season with a victory over Arkansas, but were to see only one more win for the year, finishing with a two win and nine loss record for the season. The 'Cats downed Colorado to take the number seven spot in the Big Eight. Junior Dick Rivera, conference champion in the freestyle and backstroke, and senior Craig Ridenour, swimming the 500 and 1,000 yard freestyle, were the two most consistent performers for the 'Cats. Freshman swimmers showed promise for the future when they were barely defeated by the varsity, 55-49.

Successful golf season ends with 14-2-1 record

A highly successful golf season ended on a disappointing note. After establishing a 14-2-1 overall record, the 'Cats managed only a fifth place finish in the Big Eight tournament. In the Shawnee Intercollegiate, Wildcat linksman Ron Schmedemann led K-State to a fourth place tie with the University of Kansas.

Wildcat netmen record 10 shutouts for season

Posting 10 shutouts for the season, the Wildcat netmen finished with an impressive 13-4 record, but could secure no more than a third place berth in the Big Eight tournament. Conference dual victories came over Colorado, Oklahoma State, Nebraska, Missouri and Iowa State. The Wildcats lost to Oklahoma City University twice to tally a 7-2 record on the non-conference slate, while they downed Wichita and Washburn twice, Oklahoma Baptist, Bethany and Luther College.

Rowers win top honors in Kansas City regatta

K-State rowers, in their fifth year of competition, placed eighth in a field of ten crews in the Mid-America Spring Championships. The 'Cats fared better at the Heart of America Rowing Regatta in Kansas City, however, capturing top honors by edging out Alabama and Brock University of Ontario, Canada, for the sweep.

Highlighting the season, the Wildcats traveled to Mexico City to meet three top Mexican crews. Competing against teams from the Mexican Army and Navy and a private rowing club, the 'Cats finished third. The international meet marked a first for K-State and collegiate rowing. The Wildcat crew was the first K-State athletic team to compete outside the United States and the first American college crew to race in Mexico.

An addition planned for the rowing program was a new boat house, scheduled for completion in the spring. The facility was financed through personal donations and a fund-raising drive from students, faculty and alumni.

Men's varsity rifle team earns second in Big Eight

Men's varsity rifle team ended their season by placing second in the Big Eight meet, losing to Oklahoma State by only one point and breaking the previous record. The women's team topped their season by capturing third in the nation.

Out of 33 teams, K-State captured second place in the Mississippi Valley tournament. The rifle team took fourth out of a field of 53 teams at the invitational meet in Stillwater, Oklahoma. Later in December, K-State hosted the largest rifle meet in the nation, which consisted of more than fifty teams. Coached by Sergeant George Wilkins, the varsity team placed fifth in the Turkey Shoot. Kansas State won over Iowa State in an individual meet and planned for their next meet at the Big Sky tournament. Both teams entered competition outside the Big Eight and engaged in various tournaments.

Bowlers finish second in state traveling league

Led by Larry Weyer, with a 181 average, the K-State men's bowling team captured second place in the men's traveling league. The 'Cats rolled against bowlers from Kansas, Emporia and Wichita State. The K-State women's squad, although not in competition in the traveling league, out-did the men in the postal league. The Wildcat girls fared exceptionally well after only three years in competition, taking top honors in the six-team league. The men were forced to settle for a disappointing sixth place finish. Competition in the postal league included representatives from K-State, Iowa State, Kansas, Oklahoma, Oklahoma State and Wichita State.

KDs win WAA trophy in women's intramurals

Kappa Delta sorority won the 1967 Women's Athletic Association trophy, awarded to the living group with the largest number of girls participating in intramural sports. Goodnow hall captured both the kickball and volleyball titles, while Boyd hall dominated the swimming competition, ending Kappa Kappa Gamma's four-year reign. Coeducational volleyball competiton was won by a group of independent students. Due to lack of facilities, softball intramurals were not held during the 1967 season.

Sandra Hick, women's intramural director, also coached the women's basketball team to a five win, three loss record. Highlighting the season was the Emporia sports day, where the basketball team played in the championship round. Although losing to Emporia, the team later claimed a victory over the team in Manhattan.

Directing women's intramurals, Sandra Hick set up programs in six sports for almost 1,000 coeds.

With typical feminine enthusiasm, a coed attempts in vain to score during an early season kickball game.

Coeds in the women's intramural tennis tournament played singles games from the last week of March to the second week of May. The winner was chosen by single eliminations from 32 original players.

Betas, AVMA, Marlatt lead men's intramurals

With 10 sports completed, the intramural race remained close. Beta Theta Pi outpointed Sigma Alpha Epsilon in the fraternity division, AVMA edged out PEM for the independent lead and Marlatt 6 led the dormitory competition.

With wins in basketball, badminton and volleyball, the Betas earned 729 points. The Sig Alphs, with championships in swimming, wrestling and freethrows and second place in basketball totaled 601, followed by Phi Delta Theta with 512 points.

AVMA, with titles in horse shoes and handball, had 462 points, followed by PEM with 447, placing first in football. Marlatt 6 captured the basketball crown to total 416 points. Haymaker was second with 335, winning football. Third place was held by Marlatt 4, with 325 and fourth went to Moore 4, with 320 points.

Students reflect University development in intellectual and personal growth. As freshmen, they are immersed into an environment of lectures, midnight study sessions with friends and meetings. Opinions are shaped by exposure to new cultures and philosophies, and minds are trained to analyze, experiment and communicate. Although the signs of intellectual growth are apparent in scholastic achievement, students may be unaware of personal growth. A leisurely walk to classes in the beauty of a spring morning, solitude in Danforth Chapel or the contentment of silent companionship blends imperceptibly into the student's personality. And to a senior at graduation these memories of college years are part of the realization that the University is an inseparable part of his development. He has grown with the University.

Seniors collect $1,500 for campus map project

To aid campus visitors, the class of 1968 suggested construction of a campus map based on a design by a landscape architecture student. The project was postponed after consultation with the University's Long-Range Planning Committee until a main campus entrance could be constructed in the future. Nearly $1,500 in funds for the map were raised by the sale of 650 senior activity cards. Class membership totalled 1,894. Seniors entertained during the year at several keg parties, a dance and a beach outing. Sitting in reserved sections at home football and basketball games, seniors cheered the Wildcats for the last times before spring graduation exercises.

Senior class officers Rich Massieon, vice-president, Mike Jackson, president, Greg Hanson, treasurer, and Jan Miller, secretary, proposed the construction of a campus directory for their class project.

Staff recognizes seniors for outstanding service

In order to recognize those graduates who served the University community in an outstanding manner during their years as students, the Royal Purple staff has again selected 30 outstanding seniors. This continues a tradition revived by the 1967 staff. These students were selected from a list of 100 candidates nominated by their respective college councils. Criteria considered in the selections were overall satisfactory scholarship, display of leadership and outstanding University service, with service considered as most important. Final decisions were made by a committee of RP editors and advisers after reviewing the applications submitted by the candidates. Those selected are pictured informally throughout the senior section.

As Commerce Council members Rita Vodraska and Les Longberg both served as officers. President of Phi Chi Theta, Rita was also editor of "The Commerce Student." Les, recipient of a KSU Honor Scholarship, was president of Alpha Kappa Lambda and an area administrative officer for Arnold Air Society.

Lingering at the dorm entrance, a couple says goodnight just before the hall's doors are locked.

Leaving the closed quarters of their dorm rooms, coeds find the early warm weather of the spring semester inviting, as they pack up their books, blankets and radios for a serious attempt to study.

Taking advantage of an unexpected snowfall, students try to prove their strength in a lively snow fight.

Freshmen number 3,010 among 9,707 undergrads

Included in the University's growing number of students were 3,010 freshmen who arrived in the fall. Although the overall ratio of men to women remained approximately two to one, in the freshman division there were only 558 more males than females. Sophomores, totaling 2,584, comprised the largest number of returning students, with juniors accounting for 2,219. Because of a relatively small number of academic dismissals at the end of the first semester, most undergraduates returned for spring classes.

Fifty states and more than a dozen countries were represented by the 9,707 underclassmen. Both Kansas residents and out-of-state students faced a tuition hike.

Record numbers enroll in Grad School courses

Due, in part, to a cutback in graduate deferments enacted in February, an estimated 300 men completing their first year of studies on the graduate level became eligible for the draft at the end of the academic year. A record number, 335 coeds and 1,125 men, constituted the Graduate School enrollment in the spring. Of the total, 330 were international students.

National Defense Education Act fellowships partially offset the rising cost of tuition for graduate students in the humanities and social science curriculums. National Science Foundation and National Aeronautics and Space Administration traineeships aided physical science and engineering enrollees. An additional 260 graduate students were awarded full and part-time teach-assistantships in their respective fields.

In retrospect . . .

It has been a difficult task to compile the history of 1968 while that history is being made. We have tried to capture the changes, spirit and mood of this particular year, and, at the same time, create a treasured and valuable memory book for the future. I am sure there will be many different opinions concerning this year's book — I have tried to incorporate new ideas and meet the pre-established criteria and my personal satisfaction. It has been a difficult task. But, despite the problems, doubts, tears and headaches, it has been a rewarding experience.

I would like to express my thanks to those who have contributed to the production of the 1968 Royal Purple. First, to my dedicated staff who spent many hours working on this book when they could have been out having fun or studying. And, to the trio that became the "Top Three in Command," Vic Shalkoski, Diana Barton and Gerri Smith.

Special thanks to Del Brinkman, Royal Purple adviser; C.J. (Chief) Medlin; Jack Backer and Sue Brandner for their advice and suggestions. Recognition is due Frank Wright, John Sayler and Steve Maxwell of the American Yearbook Company and Bob Merriman of the Durand Cover Company. Also, to Liz Conner for her opening and division pages' copy. Finally, my greatest appreciation to my parents and understanding and patient friends who have made editing the RP possible and enjoyable.
