HOW HAPPY I'LL BE.

A little one played among the flowers, In the blush and bloom of summer hours; She twined the buds in a garland fair, And bound them up in her shining hair. "Ah me," said she, "How happy I'll be When ten years more have gone over me And I am a maiden, with youth's bright glow Player my phose and lighting my brow!" Flushing my cheeks and lighting my brow!'

A maiden mused in a pleasant room, Where the air was filled with soft perfume; Vases were near, of antique mould, Vases were near, of antique mound,
Beautiful pictures rare and old,
And she, of all the loveliness there,
Was by far the loveliest and most fair.
"Ah me!" sighed she, "how happy I'll be
When my heart's true love comes home to me
Light of my life, my spirit's pride,
I count the days till thou reach my side."

A mother bent over a cradle nest, A mother bent over a cradic nest,
Where she soothed her babe to his smiling rest.
"Sleep well," she murmured soft and low,
And she pressed her kisses on his brow;
"Oh child, sweet child! how happy I'll be
If the good God let thee stay with me
Till later on, in life's evening hour,
Thy strength shall be my strength and tower." Thy strength shall be my strength and tower.

An aged one sat by the glowing hearth, Almost ready to leave the earth; Feeble and frail, the race she has run Had bore her along to the setting sun.
"Ah me!" sighed she, in an undertone,
"How happy I'll be when life is done!
When the world fades out with its weary strife,
And I soar away to a better life."

'Tis thus we journey from youth to age,
Longing to turn to another page,
Striving to hasten the years away,
Lighting our hearts with the future ray;
Hoping in earth till its visions fade,
Wishing and waiting, through sun and shade;
Turning, when earth's last tie is riven,
To the Deautiful rest that remains in Heaven.

STORY OF A POOR SCHOLAR.

BY SYLVANUS COBB, JR.

It was in 1869 that Andrew Hammond made his magnificent gift to Jackson University, providing for the bestowment of a certain number of scholarships upon indigent orphans, born and reared within a given section of the state, and in addition to tuition, for a stated number the entire expense of living was provided. He wished to see his wealth produce good fruits while he lived; and, in turning over the fond hones he stipulated that, while he had life and sense, he should have a part in the examination of candidates for the scholarship he had provided for. He wished to enjoy it thoroughly.

In a small hamlet, not more than a dozen miles from Jackson, lived a poor farmer named Trueman, who, in addition to his own large family of children, had given a home to an orphan nephew-George Trueman-a lad of fifteen, whose only opportunities of education had been such as he had been enabled to grasp at one of the humblest homes in the country. He had inherited from his mother a love of knowledge, and in her death he had lost the only intellectually gifted friend he could call his own. And now he turned his thoughts to the "poor scholarships," so called, of the Jackson University, but his uncle cried:

"Bless my soul! there'll be forty thousand applicants for every one o' them scholarships, now you mark my words."

"Oh, no, uncle, not so many as that," said George. "I know there are likely to be a great many; but I have been told that the examination is fair and honorable, and that there is no petty favoritism shown."

"Ah, my boy, you don't know the world so well as I do. It'll be the influence of friends, and a hundred and one things that I couldn't tell you of now, but which you'll find out for yerself if you ever make the trial."

But the boy was not to be put off. So, when the appointed day had arrived, Uncle Benjamin harnessed up old Dobbin, and set forth, bright and early, for Jackson, with his nephew by his side. They had secured the necessary affidavits avouching for the applicant's birthplace and orphanage, so that they were ready for appearance before the examining board.

Uncle Benjamin was as anxious for success as was the boy, but he could not believe success possible. "Don't build your hopes too high, George," was his final caution, as they made ready to set forth. "I can't help believin' that you'll have to be satisfied to be a farmer, as your father was afore you."

"Dear uncle," the bright-faced hero cried. with impetuous ardor, "I trust you do not

But a farmer may be a better farmer for being educated. Education is a blessing that brightens and ennobles all stations! Remember, if I am to be a farmer, I wish to be one of the very best."

Uncle Benjamin had something to think of as he drove onward.

Arrived at Jackson, it was found that the examination was set to commence at 2 o'clock precisely, in the afternoon. The keeper of the principal hotel of the place-a Mr. Jaqueswas an old friend, and aforetime play-tellow of Uncle Ben, and the good host took pleasure in ent visit. making the old farmer feel at home in the strange place; and, of course, the uncle and nephew were both invited to dinner.

"Sakes alive! exclaimed old Trueman, as he entered the grand dining-room, where two hundred people were already seated. "George, can you manage it, d'you think, in such a crowd?"

The boy smiled, and replied that he would

But they were put at their ease by the host himself, who had followed them into the room, and who led them to a far corner, where was a small table, with only four plates set upon it. Uncle and nephew were seated upon one side of the table, the other two plates being reserved for guests yet to arrive. Being seated, Mr. Jaques waited upon them to such dishes as they chose, and then said to George:

"Look, my boy; you see that side-board, with meats and pies, and so on, upon it?" pointing to a broad side-table loaded with edibles of all kinds. "If you or your uncle want anything more, just go and help yourself, and him also. Don't be backward. I shall be here, but my waiters are likely to be overtaxed."

It was a great feast for the good old farmer. George did not let him want. For himself the boy might not have visited the side-board at all, but he was determined that his good uncle should not miss a single possible good thing under the present opportunity.

They had about finished their dinner-or George had finished his-when an old gentleman and lady came, and took the two seats upon the opposite side of their table. They were white-haired and bent; both evidently beyond the bound of three-score-and-ten, and their garbs would seem to indicate a station in life on a level with Uncle Ben's. The old man had taken his seat, and made his wife comfortable, and then he leoked around for a waiter. He appeared to be uneasy-probably but loud enough for George to hear :

"They'll come by'm by. You see they're busy. There's lots of folks here, aint there?" The good wife nodded; and again the old man looked around after a waiter. Our hero could not bear to see the aged couple suffer; so, with a polite bow and a pleasant smile, he said to the man:

"My good sir, I have been waiting upon my uncle, and if you will permit me to wait upon you it will afford me great pleasure."

The aged tace shone instantly; and he accepted the proffered service most gratefully. George had watched the waiters at their work of carving, and he knew the various kinds of meat—flesh and towl—so he furnished the hungry pair as well and as handily as the best waiter of them all could have done.

Once, while the boy was gone in quest of a plate of roast turkey for the old lady, the husband addressed Uncle Benjamin:

"The boy is your nephew, sir?" "Yes, sir." And then as the old man's look seemed to ask further, Trueman added: "His father was my brother, sir; and was one o' them unfortunate men who went under when the big railroad was put through his farm. He took stock—I can't just exactly tell you how 'twas done-but I can tell you this: They got him to take lots o' their stock-almost give it to him, they said-and then, by'm by, they come down on him for assessments. They assessed him till they'd taken his farm, and his oxen: and I don't know what would have come next, if poor Tom hadn't 'ave died. Yes, the calamity was more'n he could bear." In the distance, the landlord saw that Trueman's boy was making himself useful, so he left the aged couple to his ministrations; and old gentleman and his wife until they had finished their meal.

The old man listened with interest to the story of George's father, and at its conclusion | fessors he said : he said that he knew all about it. The projectors of the railroad had come to him, and think I have a pride above farming. No, no! had sought to intice him with the same offers; but he had been too wide awake for them. However, he said a bit of the stock had fallen into his hands since the road had been completed, and he hoped, in time, it might be a paying concern.

to hope too much."

"Don't you think the boy qualified?" the old man asked.

"Bless you, sir! I'll ventur' to say 'at ther' aint a better qualified boy in the world-I don't most of it. And he did. Andrew Hammond care whether you take him in his studies or in had made no mistake in his reading of the boy's his right up an' down manhood! But-what character. Very likely the charity scholar can that signify to a poor boy without the in- might have made a lawyer, or a doctor, or a fluence of friends? Ah! I know how these leading politician; but those who were first to things are done."

neard his uncle's last words, but he understood services; so that he is now a leading professor their import; and he quickly said, cheerfully and hopefully:

"No, no, uncle, I wouldn't say that. A man who has been so good, and so generous, and him as a son of his own; and he loves to tell so kind as Mr. Hammond has been, would not the story of the orphan boy who waited upon be content to leave his grand benefaction to the him at the hotel table to all boys who are seeksport and chance of favortism."

"You are right, my boy," the old man said, with considerable energy. "I know Mr. Hammond very well, and 1 do not believe he would allow any undue influence to be used any where."

"Ah! you know him?" cried Uncle Ben, eagerly. "Yes. He is one of my best friends." "O, sir! If you could speak a good word for the boy-you know what-" George put out his hand and stopped further speech in that direction.

"No, no, Uncle Benjamin! That would be the very kind of influence you are afraid of. If the examination is fair and honorable, I am content to stand upon my own merits."

"Sartin, my boy-and so you may," responded the uncle. "Yet, George, if a friend should just speak a good word for you-"

"The boy is right," said the old man opposite. "I don't believe he needs to fear. Keep angry. To his aged companion he whispered, up a good heart my lad. And I may say this: If ever my word could do you any good, I shouldn't hesitate to speak it in your behalf." With this he arose from the table, and having said to Uncle Ben that he hoped he might see him again before he left town, he gave his arm to his wife and left. Half an hour later, directed by a little son of the landlord, Ben Trueman and his nephew made their way to the office of the academy, where they found the board of examination already in sessien, only waiting the arrival of Mr. Hammond, who had sent word that he would be there in time. Applicants for scholarships were plenty. Poor George Trueman's heart quivered when he counted them; certainly ten times as many as could be accepted! At length one of the professors rapped upon the table, and said:

"Arise, gentlemen! MR. ANDREW HAM-

His heart throbbed and his lip quivered; and he was glad when he was permitted to sit down. What was to be the result? Mr. Hammond then arose, and to the pro-

And so George Trueman had been admitted into the university, and he meant to make the gain a knowledge of his superior qualifications George had resumed his seat, and not only of head and heart were the first to enlist his and teacher in the university where he gained his education; and Andrew Hammond, promising to see his hundredth year of life, claims ing their way upward in life.

Upon the orchard rain must fall, And soak from branch to root; And blossoms bloom and fall withal, Before the fruit is fruit.

The farmer needs must sow and till, And wait the wheaten bread, Then cradie, thresh, and go to mill, Before the bread is bread.

Swift heels may get the early shout, But, spite of all the din, It is the patient holding out That makes the winner win.

A Thoughtful Philosopher.

A good story is told of King George III., of England, who, in eating apple dumplings in a peasant's house, was puzzled to know how the apples could have got inside. A Virginia philosopher had a similar difficulty in understanding a tanner's sign, on which a calf's tail hung through an auger hole.

After a while, the tanner noticed a gravelooking personage standing near the door, with his spectacles, gazing intently on the sign. And there he continued to stand, dumbly absorbed, gazing and gazing, until the curiosity of the hide dealer was greatly excited in turn. He stepped out and addressed the individual:

"Good morning," said he. "Morning," said the other, without moving his eyes from the sign. "You want to buy leather?" said the storekeeper.

"Do you want to sell hides?" "No."

"Perhaps you are a farmer?" "No."

"A merchant, maybe ?" "No."

"Are you a doctor?"

"No." "What are you then?"

"I'm a philosopher. I have been standing here for an hour, trying to see if I could ascertain how that calf got through that auger hole."

The Grange Defined.

A. T. S , in Illinois Grange News. There exists now, and did at the time the grange was organized, immense combinations, which, by a system of co-operation, are enabled to control the price paid for and sold tor, and manipulate every minutia of trade, transportation and distribution of the world's products with perfect ease and harmony.

These are great examples of co-operation to which no one would object if they did not digress from their own legitimate spheres of action. But all experience proves that where the power of co-operation is applied by one great class, all other classes in any way connected with them must apply the same power, or else the natural laws are subverted into personal uses.

The farmer, as a class, is connected with all other classes, while all classes but the farmers pairs of fencing, etc., to say nothing about the are applying this great power of co-operation, which as a natural sequence operates to their gain and the detriment of the farmer.

These combinations are communes, dividing the profits on the farmer's labor among themselves as may suit their interests or fancy. This is co-operation used for oppression, but nevertheless proves that it possesses a power when applied to any enterprise. The founders of the grange were fully aware that the great natural law of "demand and supply" was crippled by the co-operation of boards of plished so much, and our work has been so trade and corporate associations, and wisely determined to make the grange the means of placing the producer on an equal footing with those who were controlling both consumption and production, by offering them an organization through which as perfect and complete a system of co-operation may be operated as has been by corporations and stock companies. boards of trade and exchanges, for many years.

.The grange, therefore, is a co-operative as well as a social institution. It could not be less and accomplish anything of importance. No social, educational or business enterprise can be successfully prosecuted without cooperation. And aside from the grange, to-day the farmers of America have absolutely no organization or means of applying the power of co-operation.

The benefits which have been and are being obtained in this way is in no proportion of the zeal and fidelity to the principles as actually shown by our members. But enough has been accomplished that if the grange was to be instantiv exterminated, the farmers of the country would be amply repaid for all time and labor in the work.

The grange has another important featurething in my next.

Grange Membership.

Correspondence Western Exchange There are a great many men in the United States that have an idea that the whole farming community should be united to the order known as the Patrons of Husbandry. There are a great many objects sought for in the grange, It is a thing impossible to make all men see alike in any one thing. In the first place, this thing of trying to unite the whole farming community into an order, is an impossibility, and I have often thought it is for the benefit of mankind that they see and understand differently. There have been about three out of five of the farming community that have been admitted into the different granges that never ought to have seen the inside of a grange. They have been the cause of crippling the order in a great portion of the United States, and why? Because they did not understand the objects of the grange; and furthermore, they were not competent to learn the workings of the order. Poor men have rushed to the grange with the expecta- any tendency to impress upon the minds of the

the first principle is made a success, then the second principle will naturally exist of itself. But the first principle is the one to be taken into consideration. First, then, it becomes necessary for us to take into consideration whether we are willing to associate ourselves with every one that claims to be a granger who raps loudly at the door for admittance. Every man who claims to be a farmer is not adapted to the order of the Patrons of Husbandry, and when any portion of a community seeks to organize that community as a whole, they are trying to work up something that will sooner or later be detri nental to their interests, socialy and financially. I am a believer in the grange, and I urther believe that it is one of the best insti-ection of the working classes if its principles are understood and strictly adhered to. There is no order that promises as big an income for the benefit of the farmers and at as small an only means to an end. That end is the betteroutlay as the grange. Men have rushed into it madly without thinking what they were doing, the same as they have into all enterprises. Some of them have gone into the order understandingly - men of ability, men of knowledge-and they have made it a success, and today the grange, in portions of the United States, is a living and lasting monument.

The Grange Bulletin gives the following excellent words of advice from Bro. Eshbaugh, worthy lecturer of the National Grange, and if Patrons would follow out the suggestions they would soon discover a wonderful change for the better in their condition:

"Above everything else, in seasons long or short, whether work is crowding or not. do not neglect your grange meetings and your grange reading. Devote sufficient time to reading your grange literature, so that you may know what is going on elsewhere. Be in regular attendance at your grange meetings. Keep the grange prosperous, and it will be more useful as an educator, and a great help to you in short or long seasons. At the end of the year you will notice a larger amount of your credit on the balance sheet than you would have had by neglecting your grange readings and meetings, though you and yours work and toil day and night. For what will it profit you if you raise thousands of dollars worth of produce, and are compelled to pay 40 per cent. for marketing it, and 20 per cent. additional in taxes direct and indirect? You have simply four hundred dollars left out of the thousand, for interest on your investment in the farm, wear and tear of teams and tools, relabor of yourselves and families.

"Rest assured, corporations, schemers and office seekers will not allow themselves to become so much engaged in anything as to deprive themselves of the opportunity of attending their associations and keeping well read up on their side, and yours too. And if we neglect our present advantages, if we become downcast and stand idle, they will advance continually, and gain as rapidly as we lose; and this we cannot afford. We have accomwell established, that our rights are being considered and getting to be recognized. It would be folly-yes, worse than folly, to permit the good work on our part to lag, and we become inactive for even a short period, because the work on the farm is pressing. It is right and necessary to attend closely to every affair on the farm, but to attend to your grange duty is of equal necessity; for it is only through successful efforts in the grange that we will ever be relieved from our burdens of injustice, and save to ourselves a portion of the 40 and 20 per cent. now taxed upon our products.

"Make the grange, then, one of the prime objects of life, and it will accomplish all it has promised to do. The farm will then become more than self-sustaining."

More Granges Wanted. From the Patron of Husbandry. A live grange ought to be organized in every school district. It would do great good. The social, intellectual and material benefit would be very great. Has the grange ever done harm? What harm? Has it done any good? Look at the vast difference between the farmers now and the farmers a dozen years ago. There has been very great, very general the educational-about which I will say some- advancement, and there can be just as much more made in the next tew years if the farmers will only try. Nothing is done without effort. Work, work is the necessity of our lives if we would accomplish anything. In the church, in the grange, in politics they that do the most work are the most successful. Two or three men in any neighborhood can accomplish wonders if they try. They can build up a good grange, erect a good grange hall, put a library of good papers and books in it, have good meetings of the grange, and open meetings where the public are invited, have lectures, discussions, social gatherings, and thus lift up and benefit the community in which they live. Such results are worth striv ing for. Who are the bold spirits that will ac-

"What does this portend? We have but to examine history, the results have been the same; an aristocracy, owning their thousands of acres, and the farmers tenants, subject to the will of the landlord; then where will be the independence of the American farmer? It can

And government, and even society itself, however consequential they may appear to the view of the haughty and superficial observer, are, notwithstanding, ment of the material, moral and intellectual conditions of the individuals composing that society and state; to confer upon them, as far as possible, the greatest amount of happiness. For this society was formed, and for this it is maintained. To protect the individual in his pursuit of happiness governments were instituted, and when they no longer subserve that chief end they become obsolete.

"I Don't Want That Stuff,"

Is what a lady of Boston said to her husband when he brought home some medicine to cure her of sick headache and neuralgia which had made her miserable for fourteen years. At first attack thereafter it was administered to her with such good results that she continued its use until cured, and made so enthusiastic in its praise that she induced twenty-two of the best families in her circle to adopt it as their regular family medicine. That "stuff" is Hop Bitters.

There were 171 Farmers' Alliances organized in Kansas up to April 1st, including fifty-five counties. A strong appeal is being made for these organizations to be kept up, so that in time, by united action, they may become powerful in their efforts to promote the interests of the farmer.

Business for 1876 over three million ($3,000,000) dollars. An Unknown Woman's Suicide.

Last evening about dark a strange woman about thirty-five years of age, neatly but plain- morning near Two Mile Creek, about one hunfore Mr. Martin's family were attracted to the room again by the most violent screams and groans. Upon entering the room the poor woman was found lying on the floor, with her shawl for a pillow, and suffering the most excruciating agony. She refused to give any intelligent cause for the frightful pains, and be- Lynch, the coroner, will please accept our fore a physician could be summoned she was thanks for the account of the inquest. dead. The following is a fair description of the woman: She was about thirty-five years of age, of medium height, rather heavy set, dark hair, healthy appearance and rather prepossessing looking, She had no baggage of any description, and wore a shawl and plain calico dress. Further information can be obtained by addressing Dr. Martin, at Efflingham.

Dr. J. F. Martin was called in and he found in the room a small bottle of laudanum, and an empty powder paper that was believed to contain arsenic, although it had no label. The lable on the bottle show to have originally come from McPike & roa, Atchison, but it was probably only wholesaled by them to some country druggist.

There were no papers or letters on her person to indicate who she was or why she had committed suicide, and the whole affair seems wrapped in a most impenetrable mystery.

Temperance at Fort Scott-Sam Kidd Arrested.

Fort Scott Monitor.

Twenty boxes of beer were distributed in the city yesterday by the express companies. The beer was shipped here from Nevada, Mo., to parties who ordered it from there. This is the most objectionable feature of the temperance law, and one which is hard to stop.

For some time past information has been coming to the revenue officials that Sam Kidd, who is known as the proprietor of that seething hot-bed of corruption, appropriately called "Shoo Fly," was systematically violating the law by the sale of manufactured tobacco. Having collected sufficient evidence to warrant an arrest, Deputy_United States Marshal Forbes, accompanied by Marshal Newberry, proceeded down to "Shoo Fly's" yesterday morning and arrested Kidd upon a warrant sworn out by Deputy United States Marshal Forbes. Kide stoutly denied having violated the law in any respect, and alleged that he had only given away a few cigars. The officers were inexorable, however, and he was taken before United States Commissioner Ware, and his bond fixed and set at $600. After hunting over town for some friend to go on his bond, Kidd at last sponsibility, after having transferred to him $300 in school bonds and other collateral sufficient to cover the amount of the bond. The final hearing of the case before the United States commissioner is set for the 21st inst. For the present this completely disposes of "Shoo Fly," all of the inmates having left.

A Sad Accident.

Fort Scott Monitor.

On yesterday a week ago, Dr. J. B. Britton's little girl, aged eight years, was kicked in the the wound, and says that had the knife gone head by a vicious horse. The animal's hoof straight in it would have killed him but as struck her on the temple and cheek, cutting is he is getting along all right. Bingaman is in quite an ugly gash. The wound, however, was the 'boose. not considered dangerous, and seemed to be healing nicely until Friday last. Since that day she constantly grew worse, and died, after suffering terrible pain, on Monday at 2 o'clock in the afternoon, and was buried yesterday. The deceased was an nnusually brilliant child and an only daughter. The doctor is the father of four boys, the oldest of which is going to the State University, and is not, even yet, informed of his sister's death. We deeply sympathize with the doctor and his amiable lady in their terrible bereavement.

Arrested for Forgery.

Wichita Eagle.

A very aged man by the name of John Morris, said to be between eighty and ninety years old, was arrested for forgery last Wednesday morning. He cashed one note with forged indorsement at the savings bank, and was attempting to negotiate another of like amount and indorsements at the state bank when arrested. Later we learn that his right name is George Mann, and his home in Harper county. He tried to get thirty dollars from the First Arkansas Valley Bank. It seems he used the money to prove up a piece of land.

Tipsy Passengers.

Wichita Eagle.

Hon. R. L. Walker came in from the west the other evening. When the train halted at the station on the state line between Kansas and Calorado, a person appeared on the rear platform with a large tray basket filled with pint and quart bottles of whisky. He sung ou': "Gentlemen, this is the last chance you will have to get a drink this side of Kansas City." Mr, Walker says that in less than two minutes every bottle was sold, and the drunkest crowd he ever saw was that train load that night.

Fatal Quarrel-Railroad Bonds.

Alma Herald. On Thursday evening of last week at the Indian dance near Newbury, a troublesome half breed by the name of Jackson began a quarrel with the drummer boy, when another Indian interfered and hit Jackson on the head with a club, killing him almost instantly. He was chucked in the hind end of a lumber wagon and taken home. The dance continued until Saturday morning, just as though nothing unusual had occurred.

The commissioners met Tuesday and ordered another bond election in Wilmington township, on the 11th of June to vote aid in the sum of $11,000 to the Topeka and Salina railroad. Also an election in Misission Creek towship on the same day for the same purpose, but for the sum of $12,000.

Forgot it was Sunday.

Conyers, (Ga.) Weekly. Last Sunday morning an old farmer friend of ours, who has lost much time out of his farm, awoke bright and early, and, forgetting it was the day of rest, soon had his horses hitched and in the field tickling old mother earth. He plowed on till noon, when he went to the house, ate his dinner gathered up all his barter, hitched his horses to the little spring wagon, and he and his wife were soon on the way to Conyers to do some trading. Before reaching town, however, he was met by a friend, who explained to him that it was the Sabbath and all the stores were closed, so he returned home, and early Monday morning sent in an order for a gross of almanaes.

Crops at Burr-Oak Bottom,

There will probably be no crops raised in Burr-Oak bottom this season. It will not be in condition to plow until too late to raise corn or potatoes; and the uncertainty about the June rise would deter farmers from the work, if it could be done. Most of them have secured places for the season on the up-lands. Almost all the fences and cord-wood are gone out of the bottom; but the whole space overflowed is said to be so thickly covered with drift-wood persuaded Mr. A. Has a Madstone.

Galcua Miner.

Elder Wm. Hardee informs us that a widow ady by the name of Lewis, living on the big road between Joplin and Neosho, has in her possession a madstone, the application of which is said to be an infallible cure for the bits of mad dogs, snakes, and other poisonous things. It extracts the poison, and leaves the blood in a purified condition. It is certainly a much needed blessing in this land of hydrophobia stricken canines.

Fruit Near Oskaloosa.

Independent. There in quite a sprinkle of peach blossoms after all, in this vicinity. We noticed some trees in the country with enough blossoms to make a fair crop. Apple, cherry, pear and plum trees are literally loaded with blossoms, and the prospects for an abondant yield of these standard fruits is all that could be desired.

Johnson County Crops.

Kansas Herald. Of the farmers with whom we have talked upon the crop prospects of the season, none expressed any belief that the harvests will be lighter this year than they were last. All seem to be in excellent spirits and feel good. They all have money, and we feel to rejoice with them, for all of us are soon to get some of it.

Severe Storm in Chase County.

Cottonwood Falls Courant. Last Friday night a severe rain and hail storm visited this locality, breaking window panes in different parts of the county, and doing much damage to the fruit crop on South Fork and Buck creek. Some of the hail stones were as large as a man's fist.

Every Farmer at 1 Stock Raiser is convinced that an impure state of the blood originates the variety of discases that afflict a lumals, such as Founder, Distemper, Fistula, Poll-Evil, Hille-Bound, Inward Straina, Scratches, Mange, Xellow Water, Heaves, Loss of Appetite, Inflammation of the Eyes, Swelled Legs, Fatigue from Hard Labor, and Rheumatism (by some called Stiff Complaint), proving fatal to so many valuable Horses. The blood is the fountain of life itself, and if you wish to restore health, you must first purify the blood; and to insure health, must keep it pure. In doing this you infuse into the debilitated, broken-down animal, action and spirit the debilitated, broken-down animal, action and spirit halso promoting digestion, &c. The farmer can see the marvelous effect of LEIS CONDITION POWDER, by the loosening of the skin and smoothness of the hair.

Certificates from leading veterinary surgeons, stage companies, livery men and stock raisers, prove that LEIS POWDER stands pre-eminently at the head of the list of Horse and Cattle Medicines.

LETS' POWDER being both Tonic and Laxative, puri-fies the blood, removes bad humors, and will be found most excellent in promoting the condition of Sheep. Sheep require only one-eighth the desc given to cattle.

In all new countries we hear of fatal discuses among Fowls, styled Chicken Cholera, Gapes, Blind 1988, Glanders, Megrims or Giddiness, &c. LEIS POV. UER will eradicate these diseases. In severe attacks, mix a small quantity with corn meal, moistened, and feed twice a day. When these discases prevail, use a little in their feed onco or twice a week, and your poultry will be kept free from all disease. In severe attacks oftentimes they do not eat; it will then be necessary to administer the Powder tit will then be necessary to administer the Powder with deugh to form Pills.

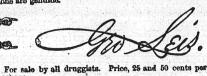

Cows require an abundance of nutritions food, not to make them fat, but to keep up a regular secretion of milk. Farmers and dairymen attest the fact that by judicious use of Leis' Condition Powder it flow of milk is greatly increased, and quality vastly it. proved. All gross humous and impurities of the blood aratonce removed. For Sore teats, apply Leis' Chemical Healing Salve—will heal in one or two applications. Your Calves also require an alterative aperient and stimulant. Using this Powder will expel all grub worms, with which young stock are infested in the spring of the year; promotes fattening, prevents scouring. &c.

Leis' Powder is an excellent remedy for Hogs.
The farmer will rejoice to know that a prompt and efficient remedy for the various diseases to which these animals are subject, is found in Leis' Condition

THE SPIRIT OF KANSAS.

LAWRENCE, WEDNESDAY, MAY 18, 1881.

VALEDICTORY.

With the last issue, we closed our connection with THE SPIRIT OF KAN-

In bidding adieu to our many friends and patrous who have stood by us through all the years that we have been publishing THE SPIRIT, it seems almost like surrendering family ties, and in this farewell we extend our hearty thanks to our many warm friends all over the state who have extended to us many acts of courtesy and hospitality as we have traveled from place to place through the state. But we are happy to say to our friends everywhere that we leave THE SPIRIT awake young men, both of whom are practical newspaper men.

Although we did our best to make a first-class farm and family paper, they doubtless will make it much better, and we bespeak for them a hearty and cordial support from our friends throughout the state.

The business of THE SPIRIT OF me. I will send a statement to each incompetency and disorganization of one in arrears, showing how much they owe on back subscription, which we trust they will promptly forward to the undersigned.

We now bid you a kind farewell hoping that peace, plenty and prosperity may attend you all.

J. T. STEVENS.

SALUTATORY.

With this issue we take possession of THE SPIRIT OF KANSAS, and according to the general custom of incoming editors, it is perhaps necessary to briefly outline the course we intend to pursue. It is natural that our readers what to expect from us. In the first paid-up subscriptions, which we will treaty. The motion was tabled. do, leaving those unpaid to be collected by Mr. J. T. Stevens, as he has indicated in his valedictory. THE SPIRIT will be conducted under the same general plan as heretofore, with the addition of whatever may occur to us as improvements. Our determination is to make it a paper, which will be well worthy of the support of every intelligent farmer in Kansas, and furthermore, we firmly believe that before many years have passed, THE SPIRIT OF KANSAS will be in the hands of every farmer in the state who seeks his own and neighbors' interests. Our sentiments are for the right and justice in everything. We bow to no clique, we are under obligations to no party, farming community, and everyone who desires for himself a good, live home journal, devoted to the uplifting of those who are downtrodden and opposing the monopolies and all the combinations designed to hold in subjection all those who can offer but feeble defense. However, all that we desire and intend to make THE SPIRIT can not be achieved in a day, and nothing but disappointment awaits those who are unwise enough to expect it, so we would ask your indulgence for a short time, till we have every thing in such shape as we desire. Lastly, we would carnestly ask of every patron of THE SPIRIT his undivided support, in order that we may be able to bring the paper up to the fulfilment of our expectations.

TAX LAW MAKERS.

Under the above heading the Prairie Farmer has the following:

"The railroads seem to have the inside track in two states in whose Legislatures bills against pooling and for other regulative purposes are pending. In New York a very stringent but reasonable railroad law passed the general assembly by a vote of 73 to 33, but nothing has been heard of it since it was sent to the Senate. If the act is strangled in committee of the Senate it will be only a repetition of what happened at the last session of the wonderful body that meets at Albany. The railroad men for security and economy sometime ago abondoned the task of corrupting the lower house of the New York Legislature, and of late have Louis, which will be completed and in confined their attentions to the so-called upper house. The silence of the Senate on this bill is ominous. Three men were resents the state, while the House contains the representatives of the people at large. This is not the case in the state Senates, which merely represent the people of the state in a different manuer, or in a different ratio from that which prevails in the lower house. Hence the state Senate is an artificial body, a superfluous institution, a fifth wheel to the coach.

We might, with justice, make a similar charge against our own Senate for their failure, at the last session, to take decisive action on the bill to regulate the tariff on the railroads in Kansas.

FORT SCOTT, Kans., May 14.-It appears that a publication has been made in the Illinois State Zeitung and leading papers of New York with reference to the prohibitory amendment to the state constitution of Kansas. It is stated in said publication that the law is driving out large numbers of the inhabitants of our state, depopulating it of German citizens and keeping a large proportion of emigrants, espec-cially German emigration, from locat-ing here. This is distributed by interested parties among the emigrants at Castle Garden, and at various railroad depots in Chicago and perhaps other cities. Since the intelligence was received here great indignation has been expressed by all classes of citizens and especially the Germans. We desire to announce to the world that this publication was conceived in iniquity and ten by those in constant association born in wickedness. The trouble in the Chickasaw nation is said to have grown out of a was carrying a child and walking the refusal of Texas raisers to pay more floor, and they mistaking him for Knox than 12 1-2 cents per head for grazing cattle therein, Governor Overton demanding 25 cents per head. In the Choctaw nation the trouble is chiefly in regard to the law allowing white a posse. In attempting to capture the men to live in that country, the Indipopulation are there without proper authority.

> OMAHA, NEB., May 13.—A strange cattle disease, which has made its appearance in the vicinity of Omaha and Council Bluffs, has carried off nearly two hundred cattle, distributed as follows: About seventy-five milk cows at Council Bluffs, sixty-two cattle in Cass county, Neb., and forty-three in the western part of Douglas county, Neb., and some scattering cattle along the Missouri river bottoms in Iowa and Nebraska. These deaths have all occurred in sections that have been inundated by overflowing streams. It is now thought to be dying out, although it is pronounced contagious. Cattle that have been kept in high and dry regions have not been affected in any way by the disease, and but little fears are now entertained.

CHICAGO, May 14.—The Tribune's crop reports indicate that the growing crops have made great strides. During the last three weeks, in almost uninterrupted sunshine, winter wheat has improved immensely. The prospects are good for three-fourths of a crop, while a month ago only 40 per cent. was expected. Corn planting is being vigorously pushed, and a large area will be put in and an immense crop is predicted. Fruit, except peaches, promises an abundant yield. As a rule the prospects of the growing season are fully up to the average of fifteen years. The American bottom will be planted to corn, and no great damage will be found to have resulted from the overflow.

CHEYENNE, May 14.—A Leader special from Fort Niobrara, Neb., says that Lieut. A Shotgan and Pitchfork Battle-

WE have an account of a semewhat sanguinary conflict between a colored man by the name of John Carson and John G. Schaich, the latter living on the farm owned by J. E. McCoy. The particulars, as given by Mr. Schaich, who gave himself up to Sheriff Asher, are principally as follows: Carson having cut and stacked some hay on his (Schaich's) place in the fall, he had left it there ever since; and Schaich, wishing to burn over the ground on which it stood, asked Carson to remove it. Carson failing to comply, Schaich succeeded, a good wheat crop is not excellent. While the by a great deal of trouble, in saving the hay. early-sown wheat looks passably well, that When Carson came for the hay he was presown later in the fall appears to be making but sented by Schaich with a bill for seventy-five cents for the work in saving the hay, which Carson refused to pay. A quarrel ensued, and Carson was ordered off the premis Schaich went after his shot-gun to enforce his order, and took up his stand on one of the the stacks to keep Carson away from it. Schaich claims that Carson attempted to strike him with a pitchfork, and that he then fired and struck him in the breast, inflicting a severe wound. After a pitched battle between shot-gun and fork, in which Schaich fired again, but missed, the latter retreated. Carson was brought to town and his wounds dressed. He swore out a warrant for the arrest of Schaich, who, after giving himself up, gave bail tor his appearance. This is, of course, but one side of the story, and we will have to wait further developments before we can ascertain the exact truth in regard to the matter.

Timber Planting a National Necessity. A. H. Gaston, in Colman's Rural.

The Chicago Lumberman's Exchange, at its last meeting at Chicago, revealed the startling statement that owing to the enormous growth of the lumber business it will take only twenty years to exhaust the pine forests of the hope that a large per cent. of our en-United States of America. If the present rate of depletion continues, in the course of five years all of the black walnut timber large enough for logs will be used up; also, the way our oak timbers are being used up for railroad ties, cooperage and other purposes, in the course of forty years our forests of oak will be consumed. Other varieties of timber are disappearing in proportion to the above named varieties.

It becomes every American philanthropist, male or female, old or young, to commence forest tree planting im-

It is said that every tree planted is a living monument to the planter. Let us all have some living forest tree monuments to let future generations know that we are here and have done something in our day and generation for our country's good. The leading question now is what variety of timber to plant, that will make the quickest returns, is the easiest grown and will be worth the most money.

Catalpa speciosa, or Western Catalpa is decidedly the best. Indigenous to Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Missouri, Iowa and Wisconsin, there are trees being found in the forests as large as our largest oaks or walnuts. The timber has been known to last from 50 to 100 years, without rotting in the least, set in the ground for stockades, gate posts, bar posts, fence posts, foot logs, etc. Its growth is more rapid than soft maple. One tree forty years old, planted by A. Bryant, Sr., of Princeton, Bureau county, Ill., is three feet in diameter and fifty or more feet in height, standing on his front lawn. It is a beautiful flowering tree, very fragrant when in blossom. The foliage is as large as the sunflower, and like the sunflower has a tendency to draw the impurities from the atmosphere and make the general health of the people better in the community where it is extensively grown. It will succeed well on any sissippi, Missouri, Illinois, Ohio, or any of the high prairies of the West. Any lands where soft maple or cottonwood will grow successfully the Catalpa can be grown. The Catalpa timber being imperishable under or lying on the ground, it can be used for the following purposes, to wit: Railroad near the surface in the fall, and if they ties, telegraph poles, fence posts, grapebridges, piles, the manufacture of rail- has the same effect. road cars, lumber for sidewalks, pump stocks, undertakers' stock, etc. Instructions to planters: plow as Strawberries for Market.

M. Crawford says, in the Ohio Farmer: After preparing the land, mark it out in straight rows four feet apart, and set the plants two feet apart in the row. This will require between five and six thousand plants to the acre. In taking up plants, use only last year's runners, rejecting those with black Trim off the dead leaves and runners, shorten the roots to three or four inches, and wash all the dirt off, lest the larvæ of the crown borer or other injurious insects be carried to the new bed. Set the plants so that the crown will be level with the surface, but not covered, and press the earth firmly about the roots. It is important that the plants be kept from drying while out of the ground. When taking them to the field to plant, put them in a pail with water sufficient to cover the roots, taking each one out as needed. The soil adheres to the wet roots, and no further watering is necessary. Every one should raise his own plants if possible, so as to have them when wanted.

At the proper time, plant sweet or early corn in the rows with the plants; the hills four feet apart. This will injure the plants little or none, and the shade will be beneficial rather than otherwise, in the summer. The corn will pay all the expenses the first year. All runners and blossoms should be cut off as soon as they appear, so as to let the plants get strong before any draft is made on them. About the last of July, when the plants have gained strength, and are sending out several runners at a time, they may be allowed to grow and cover the ground. Cultivation with a horse must then be discontinued. and if it has been well done up to this of the bottom lands of the great Mis- btime, but few weeds will appear afterward. When the weather becomes cool and moist in the fall, the whole bed may be gone over with a hoe, and all weeds removed, after which the ground should not be disturbed to any depth.

> Early in the winter cover the whole surface to the depth of an inch or two with litter of some kind. Horse manure with plenty of straw in it, is first rate. Cut straw is excellent, and need not be removed in the spring. Evergreen boughs, corn stalks, swamp hay, rotted sawdust, tanbark or leaves, if they can be kept on-anything that will shade the ground, and prevent it from thawing every bright day, will answer.

When growth commences in the spring, and the freezing nights are past, the bed may be uncovered, if the covering is such that the plants can not push through it. Paths eighteen inches wide should be made between the rows. If plants are needed, they should be taken up in narrow strips, and those on each side shaved off with the hoe. so as not to injure the roots of those crowd, and 187 trees must be cut out, left to bear. As soon as the last of the berries are picked, plow up the bed and plant some late crop. In this way three crops can be taken from the soil in two years, and the enemies of the strawberry are destroyed, instead of being left to multiply in an old, neglected bed. It will cost less, in this way, to raise a new bed every year, than to clean out an old one and put it in proper bearing.

In the Orchard and Garden. From the Prairie Farmer.

Young trees should have the soil kept free from weeds and mellow among them, and a mulch before dry weather sets in is important.

Those who practice thinning the fruit the most successfully, begin as soon as the crop is set. Let any one who doubts the importance of thinning test the matter with two similar trees side by side. The one that ripens all its fruit does the poorest in every way.

This is a time when insects abound. The tent caterpillars will hatch and the worms begin to feed, and weave their 'tents." These are best seen when the dew is on them in early morning, at which time remove them with the hand, using a pole and swab for those out of reach. The borers in apple trees, etc., are easily detected by their sawdust. They should be killed by using a knife and a wire probe; cut only enough to insert the probe. The curculio begins its work as soon as the fruit is set. Jarring the tree and catching the insects on a cloth is the best remedy. If plant lice are abundant on young twigs | nice little door is open for a dispute over the of cherry or other trees, give them a going. Sometimes, too, the father says "boys, washing with strong soap-suds or to- one of you bring in some coal" or some other bacco-water. The current worm will be destructive if not guarded against. White hellebore is the efficient remedy. It may be sifted upon the bushes, but it with a syringe or sprinkling-pot.

Mulching is of great benefit to many of the small fruits; it prevents evaporation, overheating of the soil, beating of the rains against the mellow soil, etc. Bog hay, straw, chips, tan bark, and mulching. in a few of the earlier vegetables. Sowings of all such made now will do excellently well. Do not fail to sow because it is a trifle late. The importance of succession crops need special mention. It is not enough to have one sowing of radishes, peas, beans, corn, etc., but there should be several at intervals of a week or ten days. This gives a continuous supply of all these articles for the table. The tender sorts of vegetables, such as equashes, melons, beans, etc., should not be planted until the soil is warm—"about corn-plantin time." The person who cuts the asparagus should be careful to not injure the plants under ground. Let no small shoots mature until later in the season. Do not delay bushing the peas until they fall over. A mixture of unleached lime and plaster, or slacked lime, is not only good as a fertilizer, but will keep away the flea beetle and other small insects from the cabbages, turnips, squashes, etc. The root crops of the garden are generally grown too thick; thin them, using the young plants, as in the case of beets, etc., for greens.

All farmers should have a lawn, small or large, and keep it neat and attractive. Lawn mowers are so perfect in their action and inexpensive, that they should be very generally used. The writer is a great admirer of climbers, live on from year to year. An ordinary looking dwelling can be made very atpasser-by.

The Household.

The Family Relation.

NO. XII. FLOWERS.

I have but little doubt that all the sisters of The Household" will soon have their flower gardens ready to gladden the eyes of every beholder of nature no matter whether they are members of "The Household" or not.

The kitchen garden, too, I feel well assured, will also have its attractions. Many, too, will be the walks of friends and relatives to admire all these beauties of nature. They will be fine, very fine, all imbedded and supported by the generous soil, sun and showers of Kansas. These flowers, however, are only at most but half perennial and many not even that, no matter whether exotic or not. In nearly every household there are plants of beauty and of kin to our own natures; plants that should unite husband and wife in perpetual love and affection.

Plants to outlive all the foliage and beauties of the vegetable kingdem. These are little plants that bloom in nearly every family. Upon the training and culture of these very plants depend, to a very great extent, our enjoyment, admiration and delight; yet how sad, how very sad, in passing up and down through all the walks and talks of life to see so many of these little plants of ours, so much neglected, so much uncared for, and so much unadmired from our own improper care and training.

If perishing plants that last but a few weeks at most are attractive, how much more so our own children, when well taught and well cultivated by the master hand of a proficient parent. And here, again, we must insist that in the proper culture of these little immortal flowers the mother has more influence than the father in shaping their destiny for time and eternity. It makes but little, very little, difference how well a child may be dressed, if illmannerly and rude in speech and behavior all all is spoiled.

Parents sometimes unintentionally commit errors in making requests of children. If an errand is to be made and it is intended for one of the girls to perform it, and the mother says one of you go, instead of saying which one, a errand, without saying which, and then often a dispute among the boys which will, shall or must go.

Parents should never be partial with their children. To always insure prompt obedience is best to mix a tablespoonful of the name the child intended to move. Divide the powder with a pail of water and apply pleasures and the burdens in such a way that there can be no chance for disputes among themselves. Children should always have full faith in their parents and parents should always well merit the full confidence of their children.

But in nothing do children exhibit more beauty and are more appreciated by the good even small stones can be used for and polite of all than in respectful, courteous and polite language. It is really of very little use to have children learn the rules of language unless they are required to practice what they have learned. It is also of little use to reprimand children for ill-mannerly talk and behavior to strangers unless they are at all May will be a little late with their times taught courtesy and good manners in the vegetable garden, but the loss is mostly family relation. I always admire a courteous, kind and mannerly child more than the brightest rose or sweetest pink that ever grew out of old mother earth, and in this I think I am not alone.

I said in a former number that an fountain cannot yield pure water. A child ill-mannerly and discourteously raised is ruined socially, and that is not all, it may have in the rags must be brightly colored and sewed future the power, and will, too, to ruin the happiness of another in many respects much better 'educated.

Daughterly Obedience.

Frances Power Cobbe, in N. Y. Evening Post. The great difficulty in the lives of hundreds of daughters of the upper ranks just now lies in this : that they find themselves torn between two opposing impulses, and know not which they ought to follow. On one side are the habits of a child, and the assurance of everybody that the same habits of quiesence and submission ought to be maintained into womanhood. On the other hand there is the same instinct which we see in a baby's limbs, to stir, to change its position, to climb, to run; to use, in short, the muscles and faculties it possesses. Every young bird flutters away from its nest, however soft; every little rabbit quits the comfortable hole in which it was born; and we take it as fit and right that they should do so, even when there are hawks and weasels all around. Only when a young girl wants to do anything of the analogous kind her instinct is treated as a sort of sin. She is asked, "Cannot she be contented, having so nice a home and luxuries provided in abundance?" Keble's fine but misused lines about "room to deny ourselves" and the "common task" and "daily round" being all we ought to both the annual sorts and those that require, are sure to be quoted against her; and, in short, she feels herself a culprit, and probably at least once a week has a fit of penitence for her incorrigible "discontent." I tractive by a half-dozen well-trained have known this kind of thing to go on for plants of Clematis, Trumpet creeper, years, and it is repeated in hundreds, in Akebia, Dutchman's pipe and honey- thousands, of families. I have known suckle. They cost but very little, and it where there were seven miserable are a source of much comfort to both big young women in one little house! Rag Carpets.

From the Prairie Farmer In the days when it was deemed advisable or expedient that a conglomeration of "rainbow stripes" and "feather stripes," and startling contrasts, should form the striking features of rag carpeting, I used to thing that prettiness was an impossibility. Since this dazzling gaudiness has succumbed to the spirit of the age, I have become a sincere admirer of the various kinds, which are not only tasteful, bu substantial, and greatly to be preferred to the cheap and worthless hemp, and cotton ingrain carpeting with which the market abounds. In this matter, as well as in many others, there is a special theory for almost every interested individual. Some use all woolen rags, others prefer cotton, and the same difference of opinion exists in regard to the chain. Cotton wears the longest, woolen keeps the color best; it is therefore advisable to use wool for all black or bright colors that fade easily, and cotton in white and light colors. The economy of the business consists, however, in utilizing wornout and faded garments, and scraps that are good for nothing else. The question then, is, how to do it to the best ad-

All garments should be ripped to pieces and washed perfectly clean. All coloring should be done before cutting the rags. It is much better to cut than to tear them. A small piece that is too short for strips can be cut round and round so as to make a good length. Care should be taken, in using a variety of materials, to cut them in proportion to their texture, otherwise the carpet will neither look well or wear evenly. A filling of all white rags, or light calico, with a chain woven in stripes of different colors, makes a pretty and durable carpet. It is about as cheap, and a great saving of trouble, to let the weaver furnish the warp. Allow a pound and a half of cut rags for each yard of carpeting.

Some housekeepers consider it best to bind each breath of carpeting by itself, and tack them down without sewing, letting the breaths lap an inch. It is then taken up frequently and shaken, and turned, and kept fresh and whole much longer than if swept to pieces. A great deal of thick cloth makes a carpet too heavy for convenient handling, especially if the breaths are to be sewed together. The most desirable plan for a sitting-room or dining-room is, I think, to paint or stain the floor, and make a rug of suitable size, with a border woven in bright colors.

Where all sorts of superannuated clothing is to be used, most people sew the rags together, hit-or-miss, in lengths of from one to four yards. A prettier carpet can be made by cutting the colored rags into short lengths about an eight of a yard, and piecing them together with a white strip of double the length after every one. The result will be a kind of checker-work, unobtrusive, neat, and last, but not least, fashionable.

If this is too much trouble, the next best plan is to piece all the light and dark rags separately, then wind a ball of each kind into one, and re-wind several times in order to twist them together. This makes a chene pattern, prettier, I think, than when the same plan is carried out with a predominating color. Still you may prefer to color all the white and light colors a good yellow, and twist them with black, or with a variety of dark colors. Of course, to make a nice, fine carpet in this way, the rags must be cut very narrow.

A beautiful carpet can be made by using four threads alternately of green and gold. with a shaded green stripe and filling of all light or white cotton rags. If any of these ideas do not meet your approval, and you want to make a striped carpet, all the light separately. Crosswise stripes are to be woven of these about once in half a yard. For instance, four threads of red for the center, three of light gray on either side, and two of twisted black and yellow each side of the gray, which makes a feather stripe. Between the stripes the rags are to be hit-and-miss, bright colored, and not too light. The lengthwise center stripe might be four inches wide, of orange and brown, three threads of each alternately. Then one inch of white, three of blue, two of orange, one of white, and the balance of brown, and the same on the other side of the breadth. the breadth. Good as this combination may be in the eyes. Good as this combination may be in the eyes of some, it certainly is not "stylish" so long as the present fashion reigns, which demands that floor coverings should be unobtrusive both in coloring and design.

From the American agriculturist. A cow that kicks while being milked is a source of great discomfort, and any simple contrivance that will break her of the habit, is worthy of notice. Mr. Kans., writes that he prevents a cow frow kicking in the following manner: of the udder, and back of the hip bones on the back; draw it tight enough to be pretty snug. I make a loop in one end, pass the other through it, and after drawing up as close as wanted, twist the end under, and the work is done. With a rope thus adjusted, it is difficult to induce a cow to kick.

Periodic Ophthalmia. From the Prairie Farmer.

We have a mare that was sick last fall, and according to Dr. Dadd's description in his book, we judge the disease to be what he calls "pink eye and horse ail." She recovered; but is now for the third time afflicted with hed every one are the time awalls and bad eyes; one eye at a time swells and closes, and she becomes blind. Now, I would ask you to please tell me what really ails her and what to do for her.

ANSWER.-The disease is no doubt what is commonly called moon blindness, on the appearance of which the horse should be freed from work and placed in a darkened stall, and after a meal or two of bran mash have been fed, she should be given a physic ball, comsweet corn two to three feet apart in posed of five drachms of Barbadoes the row, three stalks to the hill, and as aloes, one drachm of podephyllin, two drachms of saltneter, and one drachm fodder is the result. The mistake is of capsicum, all powdered and mixed often made of planting the crop all at with a sufficiency of mufcilage. Bathe one time. I plant as soen as the ground the eyes twice daily with warm water, by means of a soft sponge, and apply between the lips, with the aid of a table use and drying, the evergreen is small camel's hair pencil, a portion of a mixture of half an ounce of Goulard's extract, one ounce of fluid extract of belladonna, and twenty-four ounces of rainwater, or soft water. Besides this, apply to the hollow space over the orbit of the eye, once daily, a small portion of weak mercurial ointment. Give loosening food in limited quantities. This disease is not permanently curable; it is apt to return again and again, and finally ends in cataract, or a complication of pathological changes

Is a compound of the virtues of sarsaparilla, stillingia, mandrake, yellow dock, with the jodide of potash and iron, all powerful blood-making, blood-cleansing, and life-sustaining elements. It is the purest, safest, and most effectual alterative medicine known or available to the public. The sciences of medicine and chemistry have never produced so valuable a remedy, nor one so potent to cure all diseases resulting from impure blood. It cures Scrofula and all scrofulous diseases, Erysipelas, Rose, or St. Anthony's Fire, Pimples and Face-grubs, Pustules, Blotches, Boils, Tumors, Tetter, Humors, Salt Rheum, Scald-head, Ring-worm, Ulcers, Sores, Rheumatism, Mercurial Disease, Neuralgia, Female Weaknesses and Irregularities, Jaundice, Affections of the Liver, Dyspepsia, Emaciation, and General Debility.

SARSAPARILLA a fair trial.

It is folly to experiment with the numerous low-priced mixtures, of cheap materials, and without medicinal virtues, offered as blood-purifiers, while disease becomes more firmly seated. AYER'S SARSAPARILLA is a medicine of such concentrated curative power, that it is by far the best, cheapest, and most reliable blood-purifier known. Physicians know its composition, and prescribe it. It has been widely used for forty years; and has won the unqualified confidence of millions whom it has benefited.

Foo Choo's Ealsam of Shark's Oil Positively Restores the Hearing, and is the only absolute cure for Deafness known. absolute cure for Deafness known.

This oil is extracted from a peculiar species of small White Shark, caught in the Yellow Sea, known as Carcharodon Rondeletii. Every Chinese fisherman knows it. Its virtues as a restorative of hearing were discovered by a Buddhist priest about the year 1410. Its cures were so numerous and so seemingly miraculous, that the remedy was officially proclaimed over the entire empire. Its use became so universal that for over 300 years no deafness has existed among the Chinese people. Sent, charges prepaid, to any address at $1 per bottle.

Its virtues are unquestionable and its curative character absolute, as the writer can personally testify, both from experience and observation.

Among the many readers of the Review in one part and another of the country, it is probable that numbers are afflicted with deafness, and to such it may be said: "Write at once to Haylock & Co., 7 Dey street, New York, enclosing $1, and you will receive by return a remedy that will enable you to hear like anybody else, and whose curative effects will be permanent. You will never regret doing so."—Editor of New York Mercantile Review, Sept. 25, 1880.
