Come to the Fair

By Glenn M. Busset State 4-H Leader

Coming from the Latin word feria, meaning a holiday or feast day, the fair has always been a special kind of gathering of people. The elements of buying and selling are implied in the familiar words of the song,

- "All the stalls on the green are as fine as can be,
- With trinkets and tokens so pretty to see,
- So it's come then, maidens and men,
- To the fair in the pride of the morning."

The other aspects of fairs, such as the holding of contests and just having a good time are mentioned in the verses,

"The drums are all beating, away let us go,

Heigh ho, Come to the Fair There'll be racing and chasing from morning till night And round abouts turning to

When we prepare and go to the fair, we are following a tradition that goes back into man's early attempts to communicate and obtain goods and services to make his life easier and more interesting. Fairs began as a means of carrying on trade between different tribes or regions, often at war. They came together to exchange goods (salt, spices, furs, metals, weapons, jewels, medicines, pottery, textiles, etc.) at certain spots known as a 'fair meeting ground'. Fighting, quarreling and cheating were temporarily suspended in order that the desired trade could take place. Eventually the 'fair meeting place' became a holy place, and the gods would punish anyone who fought or cheated. It was all right to attack and rob a caravan enroute to or from the 'fair', but there were severe penalties for clobbering them on the fair grounds. Perhaps those of you who have tried to win from the merchants of chance on the Mid Way aren't so sure the gods are watching out as well as they should for cheating.

Fairs in early America were always oriented to the farm. Corn huskings, horse races, pulling contests, quilting bees, and exhibits of farm and garden produce were a major part of colonial America. Farm societies offered prizes for the best examples of farm products in a drive to improve the quality of farm and home production. Fairs spread across the nation until nearly every county had one or more, then there appeared a period of decline. Many fairs had a difficult time 'making ends meet' and attracting crowds. In Kansas, at least, the advent of 4-H work marked the reactivation of many fairs. Boys and girls with projects to show were taken to the fairs by their parents. Many fairs have 4-H as part of the name, indicating a major source of support.

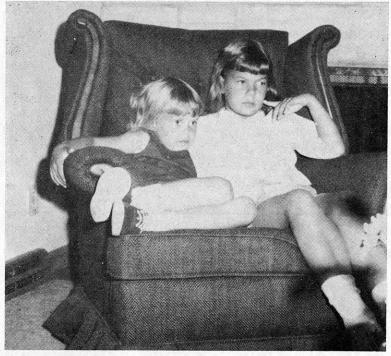

So, when you take your project to the fair this fall, you are following a long line of ancestors who also went to the fair, but with changing purposes. You attend the fair to have a good time, but also you have a personal interest in the exhibits (some of them are yours) and the contests (you take part in the judging, the demonstrations, the fitting and showing, the competitions for booths). Competition is a part of our life, a part of our middleclass American society, and we'll discuss competition in another editorial. But for the present, get your projects ready and have a good time at the fair! It's a great American tradition.

These rather unusual groups of numbers, when read by automatic equipment, help speed the checks you write through the Federal Reserve System and bank clearing houses. It's automation, and it's progress, so, the number representing your bank must appear on every check and draft written by you or become subject to delays and handling charges. Be sure that the check you write bears the number of your Full Service Kansas bank.

Starting Sept. 1st, this new Federal Reserve ruling will be in effect throughout the United States. Visit with your banker about it.

"I Sent In One Before But I Didn't Get It."

By Jon A. Brake 4-H Journal Editor

Some boys and girls are a little disenchanted with Kansas 4-H. I'm sure this is the case with the Kansas City boy trying to join the TV Action Club last March. On a plain sheet of paper, without a return address came this letter: "I sent in one before but I didn't get it. So I send in this one. It is all right though. (No name)

Last March Kansas 4-H tried something new for recruiting new members. A 10 week TV program, supplied by the National 4-H Office in Washington D.C., was telecast by three Eastern Kansas TV stations. More than 27,000 boys and girls responded to the call for membership. County Agents worked with school officials and teachers to get the enrollment cards to all students in the viewing area. The overwhelming results brought an avalanche of mail requesting the free membership cards, pins and program material. Extra long tables were hurriedly thrown together for work benches in the State Office. Reams of paper, stacks of envelopes, stamps and boxes of cards and pins lined the walls.

After the storm came the calm and a four page office memorandum compiled by Mrs. Phyllis Mentgen. The memorandum listed a few letters from smaller children enrolling or like the Kansas City boy trying to enroll in the newly formed club. These youngsters, although too young to join a 4-H Club at home, were able to join and learn from the TV programs. Kansas 4-H will gain many new members because these youngsters were able to be a part of the TV Action Club.

A person can not help but find enjoyment in letters like these: Dear Sir:

I don't have a enroll card. My friend telled me about it, may I join with out a card? I will write down the details. I am copying off his. Love Reggie.

I'm sorry I can't join, said a Pottawatomie boy, "I live on a county road, no mailing address." A Nemaha County youngster wrote he would join only if its free.

From Riley County came a letter from a girl saying: I want to—but can't—TV broken.

State 4-H Leader, Dr. Glenn Busset, may have a little competition in starting new 4-H Clubs from this next girl.

Dear President John,

I am writing to you to say I am making a 4-H Club, I need some aquitement for me to start.

I need some books, 4-H cards we do not need because our teacher gave us one, but their is one that did not got to join and please send her a card and pen she would like to join. Love Bobbie.

On October 14 many boys and girls will take to their TV sets to watch President John and the 4-H TB Action Club.

You know how fast a TV announcer can run through a commercial. Maybe we should ask them to slow down just a little when announcing our program. This next letter illustrates what I mean:

Dear 4-H Act Club,

I wood like to jon the 4-H TB Acting Club. But I will not be able to atend the club. I watch every meeting. I think they are nice. Your Friend Glenda.

The 30 minute programs are designed to help young persons deal with emergency situations. Any boy or girl can join the Club. Starting in September, central and western Kansas will be seeing the programs for the time. Associate first State Leader, Dr. Dale Apel, is anticipating another mail rush. Teachers and County Agents will have enrollment cards. To get membership cards, pins and material, write 4-H TV Action Club, Umberegr Hall, Kansas State University, Manhattan, Kansas 66502.

Six stations will carry the 4-H TV Action Club. They are: Garden City KGLD Channel 11; Great Bend KCKT Channel 2; Oberlin KOMO Channel 8; Pittsburg KOAM Channel 7; Superior, Neb., KHTL Channel 4; and Wichita KARD Channel 3. The programs will start on October 14 on all six stations. With the rush of mail, hopefully will come another office memorandum from Phyllis.

CLUB PROJECT

The Town and Country Clovers, of Butler County, recently had a scrap-iron drive for its money - making project. The members went around to the various neighbors, and collected all the scrap iron they had. Some of the older boys took a truck and junked some old automobiles. They also took an old combine apart. Altogether they gathered over three tons of scrap iron. They sold it for over fifty dollars to a salvage yard.

KANSAS 4-H JOURNAL

by Sally D. Jarrott

The shy, terrified sorrel colt with a red ribbon bow on his whiskbroom tail was delivered to us on Christmas Day, 1965. As he stood trembling with fright in this, his first separation from his mother and from the farm which had reared him. he didn't look as if he would every turn into the magnificant creature that he is now. His big brown eyes beeched us to love him and we loved him immediately, Walt Disney eyelashes and all. The card on his halter said "Merry Christmas, Linda, from your friends the Blanks."

And this was the way Prince Valiant joined our family. For the first few days we kept him shut up in the minute little barn where we had always kept Linda's Shetland pony. Then, as he became more accustomed to us and to being alone, we turned him loose in the pen. It was days before Linda could touch him without cornering him first, but gradually her love for him and the daily care she gave him won him over. In the beginning he was shy and hesitant, but in a matter of weeks she was leading him with a rope halter, backing him up, stretching him out on his wobbly little legs and grooming him.

By the time that the first winter rolled around a few months later, he was much like an outsized dog. He had grown quite a bit, his knees were still knobby, but no longer wobbly. He allowed himself to be combed and braided and sleeked up in preparation for showing him the next fall.

Daddy, who had been just a little hesitant about our having an American Saddle horse in town, small colt or not, was completely won over. We no longer heard the moaning and groaning of "The neighbors will have a fit!" or "That thing is going to cost to much to keep in town!" He was just as proud as we were.

Valiant spent his days eating, playing and growing. His favorite friends were our Doberman Pinscher, Nick, and the little Sheltie collie, Shelley. Separated by a length of chainlink fence, these three had a kinship like no other. On the dogs side of the fence is worn a hard path where they romped up and down on their side, barking joyfully, or jumping. There was even more of a path on the other side where Valiant raced with them, throwing his head back and whinnying, his beautiful mane and tail flying in the wind. They had a pact, these three. Whichever woke first at daylight would rouse the other two, and the barking, running and joyful play would begin. We never did figure out who usually tired out first, but whichever one did, the others would cajole and fuss until the play started all over.

When Valiant grew taller he could lean over the fence and start the proceeding by provoking the dogs with a nip or two. For some reason they never minded his biting them, nor did he mind them nipping at him. It was simply all part of the game.

As he grew into his second year Valiant became even more beautiful. He stretched out like a professional, and trotted around the show ring as if he owned it. And he almost did, because he came home from the county 4-H fair with a blue ribbon for his class and was the reserve champion for American Saddle horses at the state fair.

But time galloped on along with the game and soon Valiant was a full grown horse. While he was beautiful to watch as much as to listen to, some people are neither music nor horse lovers, and it became obvious that we would have to take him to the country or have hard feeling with some of the neighbors. So with his two canine friends watching dejectedly. Valiant was loaded into the same pickup truck that brought him to us. They drove off down the street. Valiant's hoofs beating a tattoo against the stock rack in volitile protest of leaving his home and his friends. Nick and Shelley stood at their gate and watched him out of sight, their ears drooping and their usually friendily wagging tails still.

Prince Valiant has been returned to the farm where he was born, to run in the fields while he waits a few months until Linda breaks him to ride. Then once again they will be united for brief periods of time. But for the dogs and for me an era is over. It will be lonesome without seeing his beautiful head hung over the fence to beg weeds as I work in my flower beds, reminding me with a gentle nudge when I wait too long between tidbits. And the dogs . . . well, their alarm clock is gone, and so, as a result, is mine.

The Purpose Of Exhibiting

Cecil L. Eyestone State 4-H Specialist

"Gee, Ma! Look I've got a red ribbon!" Haven't you heard this remark made by a boy or girl as they view the judge's decision regarding their first exhibit at a 4-H show? It isn't the color that is important (unless some adult has placed too much emphasis here) but that their product has been reviewed by a judge and deemed worth of a ribbon. This is recognition for the boy or girl of having done something worthwhile.

Are you helping the boys and girls with whom you work or lead to have this feeling of accomplishment?

Each year during the state fairs there are several violations of a common sense rule; that adults are not to assist in the fitting and showing of livestock. It shouldn't even be necessary for this rule to appear in the premium list, if adults really appreciated the learning experiences that are offered their children. What true worth to the individual is recognition that someone else earned for them? If a boy or girl is not physically capable of caring for or properly grooming his own animal, then perhaps they aren't ready for state competition. Do we adults sometimes push our children into competition because we feel that this calf, or pig may be a winner? (Who is it that wants the recognition?)

Although 4-H shows have set minimum ages for youth to participate, it should be the parents' decision as to whether their child is ready for this kind of competition. Can the children handle the responsibilities so they feel it's their efforts that have earned the ribbon?

As I have observed adults and hired professional groomers work on animals about to enter the show ring, I have often wondered what are we teaching here? Isn't 4-H an educational program for children, where they can learn by doing and sharing with other youth their own ages. (As adults they will face all the professional competition they will ever want.) Why cannot adults permit children to have this educational experience without interference? The judge will still pick the "right" animal even though several hairs of the animal are out of place.

Exhibiting in 4-H can be a worthwhile learning experience, if adults will think about the boy or girl rather than winning that first prize!

Clean Up Hazard

The Home City Hustlers, in conjunction with the Health project, receive cans for collecting harmful items. Members keep their eyes open during the summer months collecting nails, wire, broken glass and etc. This keeps our yards and those of our friends and neighbors free of these hazards which could cause serious accidents. You may be surprised at the amount collected at the end of summer. We have collected several years now and there is always more.

TURN DOWN THE BURNER - NOW !

We are now in an inflationary situation which calls for a reduction in government spending. Deficit spending by the federal government is a prime cause of inflation. If the government continually spends beyond its income or engages in other policies which expand the supply of money and credit faster than production, inflation cannot be avoided.

Under present conditions of high economic activity a reduction in federal expenditures for non-defense programs is imperative if inflationary trends are to be moderated.

Annual expenditures for non-defense purposes are $19 billion a year higher than in 1960. We urge the Executive Branch to make significant reductions in expenditures and budget requests for the many new and less essential non-defense programs.

We urge the Congress to take effective means to bring federal spending under control. Now is the opportune time to re-evaluate the worth and effectiveness of the many new centralized spending programs.
