Some of the Best At Area Livestock Day

Showing some of the bulls at the Better Livestock Day near Chapman last week are (from right) Chuck Munson, Junction City; Wayne Sellin, Chapman; Duane Lewis, Wakefield; and Leon Geisert, Hope.

Record Rates Despite Slow Bluestem Growth

Bluestem pastures in the Flint Hills of Kansas were rapidly being leased by April 1 with lease rates setting new records high this year, according to the Kansas Crop and Livestock Reporting Service.

The condition of grass in the area, at 65 per cent of normal, compared to the all-time low for this date of 64 per cent in 1937 and with 92 per cent last year and the 1961-65 average of 90 per cent.

Native grasses in the 14-county area made little growth during March because of cool temperatures.

Warmer weather and widespread rains over the eastern and central areas at the end of the month rapidly improved pasture prospects.

The amount of available grassland leased on April 1 was less than last year but more than the 1961-65 average. Reports received for April 1 indicated that 82 per cent of the available acreage was under contract compared to 95 per cent last year and 88 per cent for the 1961-65 average.

The spring and early summer outlook for grazing was much improved following the precipitation over most of the Flint Hills area at the end of March.

Bluestem leasing prices for the season gained a new high in 1967. Leasing rates per cow were at a record average of $37.00 per head, up 70 cents from a year earlier.

The bulk of the rates for cows fell in the $28.00 to $45.00 range on a per head basis.

Rates for young cattle at $23.10 were at a new record, exceeding last year's average by 70 cents per head.

Leasing rates for young cattle ranged mostly between $15.00 and $28.00 per head.

Pasturing an aged steer for the season ranged from $20.00 to $35.00 with an average of $28.00 per head, up 60 cents from last year.

Lease prices for pasture by the acre for the season ranged mostly from $5.00 to $6.50 with an average of $5.60 per acre. The price is the same as the record high set last year.

While pasture prices were higher, the guaranteed acreage also has increased. The bulk of the reports received indicated 4 acres for young stock, a little over 5 acres for steers and 6.6 acres for cows compared with 3.8 acres for young stock last year and 4.9 and 6.3 acres for steers and cows, respectively.

Pasture prospects were much improved in Northeast Kansas by precipitation on March 26-27 and over the eastern half of the state by substantial rains during the period of March 31-April 2. In the western one-third of the state, March precipitation was light and scattered with lack of moisture a serious deterrent to the start of pasture grasses in that area.

This herd is now twenty-six years old, without ever straying from the original aim of breeding cattle with SIZE, BONE and MILKING ABILITY.

I believe these three characteristics should be of primary consideration to anyone buying bulls or replacement females:

What's The Best Size Cattle Operation?

If you're in the cattle business, you probably have asked yourself many times, "Just how big should I try to be?" You know that you can't stand still. Either you're growing or you're losing ground.

Now there are two ways to grow. You can grow in size and in efficiency. If you are operating as efficiently as possible, then growth in size may be the direction you should take. That kind of growth may require more cash.

We Have A Man Who Can Work With You

Frank A. Mosier, assistant vice-president of The First National, is a qualified agricultural representative of this bank. Mr. Mosier is from a farming family in Western Kansas. He holds a master's degree in Agricultural Economics, Kansas State University. Come in and meet him.

The First National of Manhattan often makes loans to help producers in the cattle and dairy industries. These loans are made at the easiest terms possible. They are made to help you purchase replacement stock, improve or expand your physical facilities ... almost any reason you can think of. If you need cash, stop in at the First National. We're here to help work out your financing.

Countdown 4%-Maybe

and federal departments — uses a mailbox survey for its initial report of livestock numbers. Later in the year, after abstracts of county assessors' reports have been completed, the figures are changed.

Sometimes these adjustments are considerable, especially county-by-county figures, altho the adjustment for the entire state usually is less than 1%. Ordinarily major county changes tend to balance one another out. The January 1, 1965, preliminary count turned out to be right on the button when the final figures were tabulated.

But the 4% increase in the 1966 figure has upset cattlemen considerably, and the impact of the current preliminary estimate on a stockman's planning will doubtless be diluted by the mis-guess in the past year.

The tide flows most unevenly in western Kansas, always the first to react to drouth or to build up herds when grass and wheat pasture are available. The wheat pasture factor especially is important, for when fall moisture has started wheat off well and the winter is open, western Kansas may play host to tens of thousands of cattle from out-of-state.

Wheat pasture of course was almost nonexistent in western Kansas last fall, and the counts of cattle show it. About 80% of the counties in the far west

Mis-Guess Hurts Stockmen

A study of livestock inventories year to year indicates that cattlemen move their cattle back and forth a good deal.

The rise and fall of numbers of cattle in each county reflect something more than current market and stability of cow herds. Condition of wheat pasture and availability of feed to feedlots vary, and cattle are moved accordingly.

Two counties in which large acreages of grass continue across county lines, Chase and Morris as they join, illustrate this movement. One year Morris County may show a loss of 10,000 and Chase will show a similar gain; the next year, the changes may be just reversed.

Statisticians can move cattle rather easily too. The State Reporting Service makes some giant adjustments in its preliminary figures. Last year, for example, there were changes of more than one-third in some county's original estimates. The figures were reduced downward by 15,000 or more cattle each in Clark, Ford and Greenwood counties.

But on the other side of the guess, final figures showed some 72,000 more cattle in four contiguous Flint Hills counties — Marion, Morris, Lyon and Chase — than had originally been estimated.

Usually such errors tend to balance each other out. There's a 10,000 plus to balance a 10,000 minus.

Such was not the case in 1966. The preliminary figures — which cattlemen study to influence their own planning — were off by 4% — some 180,000 cattle. Cattlemen agree that's too much. The current figures will get their usual perusal. They're all a cattlemen has. But he'll be pardoned if he is a little more skeptical than usual.

showed declines, and there were no significant gains save one.

To further illustrate the rapid shift of western Kansas in and out of the cattle market, all but two of the counties west of US81 had increases a year ago and all but two had decreases the year before.

For the state as a whole, about 65% of the counties west of US81 had increases a year ago and all but two had decreases the year before.

For the state as a whole, about 65% of the counties showed decreases last year. Sixty-four counties showed declines, 38 had gains in cattle numbers, and three stayed even.

Two areas — the northcentral and the southeast — showed modest gains in the past years. All other districts were down. Largest decrease was in the area southwest of Wichita.

Butler County (El Dorado) again led the state in cattle numbers, as it has for the past three decades. Butler has nearly 600,000 acres of pasture, far more than any other county in the state.

Butler's total beef cattle count was 146,700. Lyon County was the only other county to number more than 100,000, to place second.

Another Flint Hills county, Cowley, ranked third. The only western Kansas entry in the top 10 was Finney (Garden City) which ranked 4th on a 97,500 count. Finney's cattle numbers jumped 18,000 in one year, reflecting its status as a major feedlot area.

Rounding out the top 10, all with 80,000 or more cattle, were Washington, Marion, Greenwood, Reno, Pottawatomie and Chase counties.

Normally, because of wheat pasture concentrations, western Kansas shows the most cattle on the January 1 date which the Reporting Service uses as its counting date. If the count were taken on May 15, when cattle are moved into the Flint Hills and to a lesser tho still significant degree, the Smoky Hills, counties in these areas would show major gains in cattle numbers.

Cycles, Yes — But Farm's Most Stable

While cattle numbers definitely move in cycles, records show that cattle are the most stable of livestock operations. A basic reason, of course, is the longer period from birth to market, making the cattle industry slower to respond to the market than, say, poultry or hog raisers.

Year-By-Year —

This graph shows the regularity of cycles of cattle numbers in Kansas since statistics were started in 1890. Until past World War II the trend was to approach peaks of four million cattle in high tides, then ebb back to around 2½ million when supplies forced prices down. Following a shorter drop after World War II, cattle inventories grew as stockmen prospered in the early 1950's. A drastic decline came in 1957 as dry pastures and heavy supplies devastated prices. The buildup started back the next year, however, and there was a steady increase from 1958 until 1965. The figure dropped then, shot back to a record in 1966, and shows a 4% decline this year. Figures here include milkcows.

Mrs. Quentin Willhof, Green,

Winner Of Contest Prize

Mrs. Quentin Willhof, Green: "Here is my recipe for Peanut Butter Brownies. It is very good. Hope Mrs. John Lind of Manhattan likes it also as she is wanting this recipe. We sure enjoy Grass & Grain. Best birthday present I ever gave my husband."

PEANUT BUTTER BROWNIES

- 1/2 cup butter
- 1 cup peanut butter
- 1 cup sugar
- 1/4 cup firmly packed brown sugar
- 2 eggs
- 1 cup sifted flour
- 1 teaspoon baking powder
- 1/4 teaspoon salt
- 1 package semi-sweet chocolate bits (6-ounce size)
- 1/2 teaspoon vanilla

Beat butter and peanut butter together until light. Gradually add sugar and brown sugar, creaming well. Add eggs, one at a time, beating well after each. Add flour, baking powder and salt, mixing well. Add chocolate bits and vanilla. Spread mixture in well-greased 9-inch pan. Bake at 350 degrees for 25-30 minutes. Cool and cut into squares.

The following recipe is from Mrs. Ray Feather, Longford:

PECAN CREAM CHEESE PIE

- 2 packages (each 3 ounces) cream cheese
- 1/4 cup sugar
- 1 egg
- 1 teaspoon vanilla
- 1/4 teaspoon salt
- 3 eggs
- 3/4 cup light or dark corn syrup
- 2 tablespoons sugar
- 1 teaspoon vanilla
- 1 unbaked 9-inch pie crust
- 1 1/4 cups chopped pecans

In a small bowl, beat together the cream cheese, 1/4 cup sugar, 1 egg, 1 teaspoon vanilla and the salt until thick, creamy and smooth, reserve. In another small bowl, beat 3 eggs just until yolks and whites are combined. Add the corn syrup, 2 tablespoons sugar and 1 teaspoon vanilla. Beat gently only until blended. Spread reserved cream mixture in the bottom of the unbaked pie shell. Sprinkle with pecans. Gently pour the syrup mixture over the pecans. Bake in a moderate (375-degree) oven until the center is firm to the touch — about 35 to 40 minutes. NOTE: Bake this pie on the low rack so the pie crust will brown.

The next recipe was sent by Mrs. Wayne Reinhart, Vermilion:

ORANGE FLUFF SALAD

- Cook:
- 1/2 cup sugar
- 2 tablespoons cornstarch
- Dash salt
- 1 cup orange and pineapple juice

When thick, remove from fire and cool. Dissolve 1/2 package orange gelatin in 1/2 cup boiling water then add 1/2 cup cold water.

er. When gelatin begins to thicken, whip the gelatin then add:

- 1 package Dream Whip, whipped
 - 1 can crushed pineapple
 - 3 cups small marshmallows
 - 1 cup grated American cheese
- Combine with cooked mixture and chill. For color, drain some maraschino cherries and roll in sugar, then place on top of salad.

Mrs. Rozell Moser, Hollenberg: "We like the paper, fine, enjoy every page of it."

CHERRY CHEESE CAKE

Cream 1 6-ounce package Philadelphia cream cheese. Add 1 cup powdered sugar, 1/2 cup melted butter, 1/2 cup sugar. Whip all together, then fold in 1 cup whipped cream or 1 envelope Dream Whip (whipped). Spread over graham cracker crumbs in 11x7-inch pan. Pour over this 1 can cherry pie filling. Graham cracker crumbs may be spread over top if desired. This is much better if made the day before it is to be used.

The next recipe is from Mrs. Bob Breen of Miltonvale.

BANANA NUT BREAD

- 1/2 cup shortening
- 1/2 cup sugar
- 2 eggs
- 1/2 cup nuts
- 2 cups flour
- 1/2 teaspoon soda
- 1 teaspoon baking powder
- 1 cup crushed bananas (2 large or 3 small)

Cream shortening and sugar. Add eggs and rest of ingredients. Bake one hour at 325 degrees. Makes one loaf.

Beef Brisket Has Many Names

Although beef brisket is a familiar cut of meat to most cooks, some of the names applied to it may not be. In some sections of the country it is called deckle, boneless brisket, beef breast, brisket pot roast, "barbecue" beef brisket or corned beef.

Of Interest To Gardeners—

Two Award-winning Vegetables

The chief reason for growing vegetables in the home garden is the difference in flavor between fresh-picked, fully-ripe produce you have grown and that which you buy in the market — picked days before, ripened (or not) en route to be sold.

Another reason is the improved flavor of the newer varieties. Thus the two new vegetables which won awards for 1967 are of special interest to gardeners for the judges decisions to honor them were based partly on superior flavor.

Spring Giant tomato is considered of excellent eating quality. The walls of the seven to eight-ounce fruits are thick, the flesh meaty and bright deep red. Bell Boy pepper not only has good eating qualities but also colors red earlier than many other peppers, thus pleasing the cook of the family.

Both the new varieties are first generation hybrids with the vigorous growth and heavy production that their breeding produces. Spring Giant is exceptionally heavy yielding with scarlet globular fruits maturing early in the tomato season. It is resistant to both of the common "wilt" diseases of tomatoes, verticillium and fusarium.

Bell Boy forms plants from 18-24 inches tall; is a sweet bell pepper with uniform fruits concentrated at the crown of the plant. It, too, is disease-resistant — to the tobacco mosaic virus.

These new vegetables can be grown among your flowers if you do not have a vegetable garden. They are beautiful to look at and a few plants of each occupy but little space.

Into Redwood Garden Shelter

If you want to be sure of a place in the sun in your garden . . . and of a shady spot to sip lemonade and capture cool breezes, why not plan a garden shelter of beautiful, durable, maintenance-free California redwood?

A redwood shelter can make your garden a very special place. It will serve as an entertainment center for Sunday brunch with friends, and as an out-of-doors rumpus room for the children. It becomes another dining room when a barbecue's the order of the day and a secluded study when you want to be alone with a book. A redwood garden shelter will be the focus of all your outdoor activities.

Basic ingredients in a garden shelter include decks, fences, roofs, screens, benches, planter boxes and garden furniture. In the photo above, the architect designed a detached shelter with a solid roof of redwood boards and a raised redwood deck that adds interest to an otherwise perfectly level garden.

While a garden shelter can range from a simple windbreak to a Victorian gazebo to a practical work center, often you can combine attributes of all three to suit your own taste and habits.

Timesaver

To conserve time use a can of condensed cream of celery, chicken or mushroom soup, undiluted, in place of the cream sauce next time you plan to make six-egg souffle.

Add Texture To House Top

High fashion textures and designs which started at the bottom with shoes and hose, have risen to new heights — the top of the house.

Modern asphalt shingle roofing now stresses distinctive textures and shapes. When reroofing, many homeowners use heavyweight asphalt shingles because their extra thickness gives a strong shadow line that adds depth and dimension to the roof surface.

Another way to give the roof a modern look is with more decorative installation. Two of these application methods are:

RIBBON COURSE — This gives a horizontal appearance. Extra thicknesses of shingles are used at equally-spaced rows up the slope of the roof. For example, a triple thickness of shingles every fifth row.

COMPLEMENTARY COLOR COURSE — Contrasting or complementary colored shingles are applied in alternating rows to give the roof a striking striped effect.

Hands Stay Dry

To keep hands warm and dry when defrosting the freezer, wear an old pair of fabric gloves under rubber gloves.

Half-Million In Kansas Feedlots

Cattle and calves on grain feed for slaughter in Kansas on April 1 totaled 521,000 head, a record number for this date and 8 percent more than a year ago, according to the Kansas Crop and Livestock Reporting Service.

Commercial feedlots, with a capacity of 1000 head or more, contained 272,000 head of cattle and calves on April 1.

An additional 249,000 head were being fed in farm lots, 6 percent more than last year and the third highest of record for this date.

Marketings of grain-fed cattle during the January-March quarter totaled 370,000 head compared with 293,000 head for this period in 1966.

Cattle placed on feed during the quarter totaled 305,000 head, 3 percent more than the 297,000 placed during this time a year earlier.

As of April 1 some 296,000 head had been on feed less than 3 months compared with 292,000 head a year ago.

Those on feed 3-6 months totaled 210,000 head, up 14 percent from 1966. Those on feed less than 6 months were estimated at 15,000 head. Steers and steer calves made up 70 percent of the cattle on feed April 1, the same percentage as a year earlier.

Numbers on feed by weight classifications included 33,000 head weighing over 1100 pounds, 151,000 head weighing 900-1099 pounds, 197,000 head between 700-899 pounds, 134,000 head from 500-699 pounds and only 6000 head under 500 pounds.

The average daily ration of farm-fed cattle consisted of 17.5 pounds of grain, 1.7 pounds of high protein feed, 2.9 pounds of hay and 11.4 pounds of silage.

Kansas feeders intended to market 323,000 head of grain-fed cattle during the April-June quarter of this year, or 60 percent of the total number on feed April 1. If realized, this would be 6 percent more than during the same period a year ago.

Major Feeding States

Cattle and calves on feed for slaughter market on April 1, 1967 in 32 major feeding States totaled 10,496,000 head, 3 percent more than a year earlier.

Most of the increase from a year earlier was in cattle weighing over 900 pounds. The number on feed decreased 6 percent from January 1 to April 1 this year compared with a 2 percent decrease during the same quarter last year.

Texas, the leading other cattle feeding state, showed an increase of 23 percent. Florida and Tennessee were on the same level as last year. All other states showed a decrease from the previous year.

There were 4,364,000 cattle and calves placed on feed in January-March in the 32 states, a decrease of 3 percent from the same period in 1966. Marketings of fed cattle for slaughter during the first quarter this year totaled 5,274,000 head in the 32 states, 6 percent higher than in the same period in 1966.

Weight, Kind and Time On Feed

The number on feed in each weight group on April 1 and percentage comparisons with a year earlier are as follows: under 500 pounds, 700,000 head, 86 percent; 500-699 pounds, 3,623,000 head, 103 percent; 700-899 pounds, 3,251,000 head, 98 percent; 900-1099 pounds, 2,442,000 head, 109 percent, 1,100 pounds and over 480,000 head, 135 percent.

Steers and steer calves on feed in the 32 states totaled 7,492,000 head, a 5 percent increase from April 1 a year ago.

There were 2,962,000 heifers and heifer calves on feed April 1, 1967, a decrease of 4 percent from a year ago.

Cows and others on feed totaled 42,000 head, up 8 percent from last year.

Cattle and calves on feed less than 3 months on April 1 totaled 4,467,000 head, 4 percent fewer than a year earlier. Those on feed 3-6 months accounted for 5,349,000 head, up 9 percent, and the over 6-months group, numbering 680,000 head, was up 4 percent.

Marketings

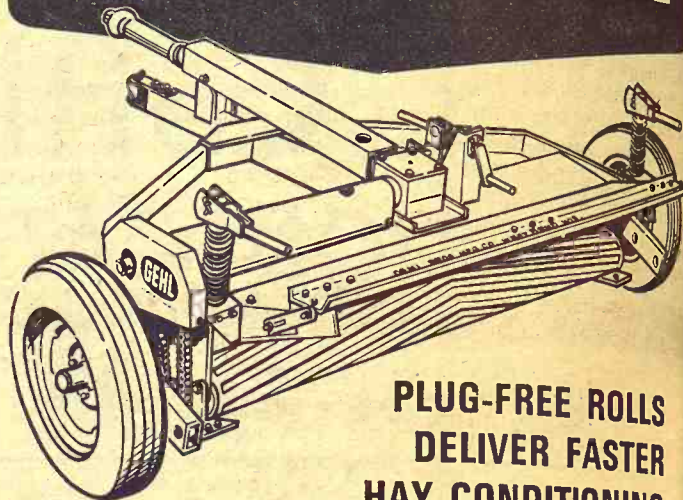

Of the cattle on feed April 1, 5,502,000 head are expected to be marketed during the April-June period. This would be 4 percent higher than comparable marketings for a year earlier.

New Jobs For Extension Livestock Specialists

MANHATTAN — Kansas State University extension livestock specialists have reorganized work assignments to serve the animal industry of Kansas.

Each specialist has educational leadership responsibility for a specific kind, or species, of livestock on a statewide basis.

Dr. Harold E. Jones, director of the Kansas extension service, said that because of the importance of the livestock industry to the state and the large number of farmers engaged in livestock farming, he feels the changes are necessary to meet increased demands for educational services.

Jones gave two advantages of the new organizational structure:

1. There will be a strong and equal educational program on each species of livestock in all parts of the state.

2. Extension will have men at the state level who can concentrate on the latest research and information about a given species of animals.

Wendell A. Moyer will offer leadership to the swine industry on a statewide basis. V. E.

McAdams will travel the state in work with the sheep and wool industry.

Educational work in meats will be handled by George Ahschwede, extension meat specialist.

Because of the size of the Kansas cattle industry, three specialists will work with extension educational programs. Dr. Phillip Phar will work with farm and commercial cattle feeders on nutrition and management problems.

Dr. Keith Zoellner will provide production and performance information in the eastern part of the state (east of Highway 81), and Herman Westmeyer will work in the western counties.

Extension work with the dairy and poultry industries continues on a statewide basis.

"There have been tremendous changes in production, feeding and marketing of livestock in Kansas over the past several years," Jones said.

The cattle industry in particular is experiencing an expansion of cow herds, and calves are staying in Kansas to be finished at lighter weights. Large feedlots are growing in numbers and farmer feeders now feed more cattle than ever before.

At the same time, Kansas producers have not taken full advantage of opportunities to meet growing demand for red meat by expanding swine and sheep operations.

By changing the emphasis in our extension livestock service at this time, we feel that we can plan an important educational role as future adjustments continue in the Kansas livestock industry," Jones said.

In addition to the reorganization of state-level specialists, local extension contact with the livestock industry will intensify through the appointment of livestock specialists in half a dozen areas of the state. Area agronomy specialists are now working in several locations in the state.

Gene Francis, the first area specialist in livestock, began work with 24 southwest counties on April 1. He is stationed at Garden City.

Hereford
Again

The American Hereford Association (AHA) announced at Kansas State University last week that it would hold its joint registration with the American Angus Association (AAA).

The APHA board voted unanimously to accept the offer after negotiations with the AHA failed to secure revisions more favorable to Hereford breeders.

Connolly, of Oaklawn, APHA president, said the APHA directed excessive fees charged by Hereford breeders for processing their registrations and the profits therefrom in the promotion of Herefords, is extremely high.

The move is the result of a conflict between the two associations over registration fees dating back to 1962. Polled Hereford breeders contended that the APHA provides better service to the market than the Hereford breed. The lack of a unified effort has been the only difference between the breeds.

In a letter to the APHA, Connolly said that the APHA's registration fees are "excessive" and that the Hereford breeders are "not getting their money's worth" from the APHA's registration service.

He specifically referred to the APHA pamphlet "Answers to Questions." The APHA will register its own registrations starting January 1, 1968.

He also said the APHA has maintained a complete record on all polled Herefords so there will be no problem in issuing the certificates. The 5-year joint registration contract went into effect on January 1, 1963, after a successful vote by the members of the APHA.

At the time, the APHA's joint registration contract would help polled Hereford breeders by eliminating the necessity to register the cattle with both associations.

Before 1964, when the APHA came a member of the APHA, the APHA's registration fees were $1.00 per head.

A few Hereford breeders also have young bulls 24 months of age or older.

Hereford Groups Split Again Over Registry

The American Polled Hereford Association (APHA) announced at Kansas City last week that it would not renew its joint registration contract with the American Hereford Association (AHA) next year.

The APHA board of directors voted unanimously to drop the contract after negotiations with AHA failed to secure contract revisions more favorable to polled Hereford breeders, R. E. Connolly, of Oakland, Calif., APHA president, said.

"The APHA directors feel the excessive fees charged polled Hereford breeders by the AHA for processing their work, and the profits therefrom being used in the promotion of horned Herefords, is extremely unfair," Connolly said.

The move is the latest in a conflict between the two associations over registry of the breed dating back to 1954.

Polled Hereford breeders have long contended their hornless breed provides better cattle at the market than the horned breed. The lack of horns is virtually the only difference between the breeds.

In a letter to the AHA informing them of the APHA decision yesterday, Connolly charged the AHA with distributing literature derogatory to the polled breed. He said this was in violation of the contract and the charter of the World Hereford conference.

He specifically referred to the AHA pamphlet "Answers to 29 Questions."

The APHA will resume issuing its own registration certificates January 1, 1968, Connolly said. He also said the association has maintained a complete set of records on all polled Herefords so there will be no delays in issuing the certificates.

The 5-year joint registration contract went into effect January 1, 1963, after a suit between factions of the APHA to prevent the signing was dropped.

At the time, the APHA said the joint registration program would help polled Hereford breeders by eliminating the necessity to register the cattle with both associations.

Before 1964, when APHA became a member of the World

Hereford conference, the breeders had to join AHA if they wished to trade outside the United States.

The suit to prevent the signing of the contract was brought against APHA by 35 members in September, 1962, after the board of directors adopted a resolution to sign the contract.

The plaintiffs charged the contract would halt development of the breed, prevent polled Hereford owners from competing with the horned breeders, and cause the breed to lose its separate classification at livestock shows.

The suit was dropped after a majority of the association members voted at a meeting in Jackson, Miss., to execute the contract.

Discussions between the two organizations for a joint registering contract date back to 1954. In 1956, APHA rejected an AHA offer. In 1957 the AHA rejected an APHA proposal, and the discussions were dropped until 1962.

Getting the right kind of yearling ewes for replacing, expanding, or establishing a commercial ewe flock is important.

You need not guess as to the kind of yearling ewes to purchase nor do you need to depend upon unreliable sources of these ewes. Now is the time to place your order if you need yearling ewes.

When you plan your order for yearling ewes, insist that the following specifications are filled: size — the large ones 100 pounds or more (1967 yearling ewes will lack this weight because of feed conditions), smooth, thick conformation, open face, dense and long staple, good bone, sound udder and teeth, fine wool type, and in good health.

How do you want the type of ewes you want? Buy from your favorite commission man. He is well informed on the availability of young quality ewes and can fill your order with the kind of ewes that will work for you.
Orders need to be large enough to fill a car or truck.

The Kansas Quality Ewe Procurement committee sponsors a cooperative pooling and buying service in each county in Kansas. See your county agricultural agent, a representative of Kansas Livestock Association, or your county sheep association for additional details.

Yearling ewes will be purchased through this committee in late April and early May in Texas and delivered in Kansas immediately. Counties are pooling their orders so yearling ewes may be delivered to the lots or by rail as requested. Act now if you can use this service.

The sheep industry has a good outlook and needs the support of more and new producers.
Prices are favorable for good returns and the industry needs more wool and lamb production.

THE LEGEND OF JOHNNY KAW

Johnny Kaw, a legendary character, was discovered during the 1955 Centennial Year of Manhattan, Kansas, by Dr. George A. Filinger.

Johnny Kaw's statue stands over 30 feet tall in the City Park. He is shown holding an authentic hand cradle for harvesting wheat. It was the fore-runner of our modern combine. Minnesota has Paul Bunyan, Texas has Pecos Bill, and Kansas has Johnny Kaw, Pioneer Wheat Farmer. Johnny Kaw's 30 inch model was recently accepted for a prominent place in the Agricultural Hall of Fame at Bonner Springs, Kansas.

Scientists Zeroing-In On Bloat Problems

By Dr. E. E. Bartley
Kansas State University

While there are many things about bloat still mysteries, most scientists agree the primary cause of legume bloat is excessive foaming of the rumen contents.

Kansas State University research has centered on the bloat problem for several years. By 1964, it became obvious that poloxalene, an anti-foaming powder, was effective control for legume bloat. Poloxalene was approved for use as a daily top-dressing on feed by the Food and Drug Administration in March 1966.

When cattle graze legumes at certain stages of maturity or at certain times of the year, the rumen contents will foam and bloat may result.

The foam can keep the animal from belching the gasses foam ed when rumen micro-organisms act on the legumes. Water intake by the animal following legume grazing complicates the situation.

Causes of foam involve plant factors and animal factors. Plants like legumes that are high in nitrogen are more bloat provocative than non-legumes. Kansas work has shown a decrease in bloat incidence with increasing maturity and decreasing protein content of alfalfa plants.

Results of studies suggest that cow saliva may explain in part why certain animals bloat and others do not. The mucin in saliva is an effective antifoaming agent in the rumen. Cows fed alfalfa hay secreted approximately twice as much saliva per feeding as when fed freshly cut alfalfa.

In research studies at Kansas State University, antifoaming agents were sought and tested. Rumen-fistulated, identical twin cattle were used to screen numerous antifoaming agents.

Researchers were looking for an economical and palatable antifoaming agent that would act rapidly and prevent bloat at least 12 hours. They required that the materials have no effect on health, reproduction, rumen function, feed intake, or quality or quantity of milk of the animal. The agent must not be found in body tissues five days after administration.

Poloxalene, the selected compound, met these specifications and was produced for testing at Kansas State by the author and his co-workers.

Poloxalene has been tested at other universities under various climates and environments and against various legumes.

This compound now carries the Bloat Guard trademark of the Smith Kline and French Laboratories, Philadelphia, Pa.

At K-State the compound was placed in the rumen of fistulated cows once daily and also mixed with feed. Animals tested were several pairs of twin dairy cows on new growth alfalfa pasture.

Poloxalene was 100 percent effective in preventing bloat in three Kansas dairy herds in 1964 where cows pastured or ate fresh-cut succulent alfalfa. Cows that did not get the chemical bloated severely.

The Bloat Guard compound was sprinkled on the grain and mixed with it in the case of the farm herds. Tests in three additional herds produced similar results in 1964.

In testing the safety of the compound, extra heavy dosages of poloxalene were given cows at K-State. There was no undesirable effect on milk production, milk fat, body weight, feed consumption, conception rate, or animal health.

Recently several studies have been conducted to test the bloat preventive effect of poloxalene incorporated in 33-pound molasses-salt blocks. Cattle on pasture will consume approximately one half to one pound of block daily. In studies conducted at Mississippi and Louisiana with Hereford steers, the poloxalene-molasses-salt blocks effectively reduced severity and incidence of bloat.

In recent Kansas studies with beef steers, those receiving the blocks without poloxalene suffered severe cases of bloat, and paired animals receiving the blocks with poloxalene were relatively free of bloat. In the latter group, none bloated severely and none required treatment.

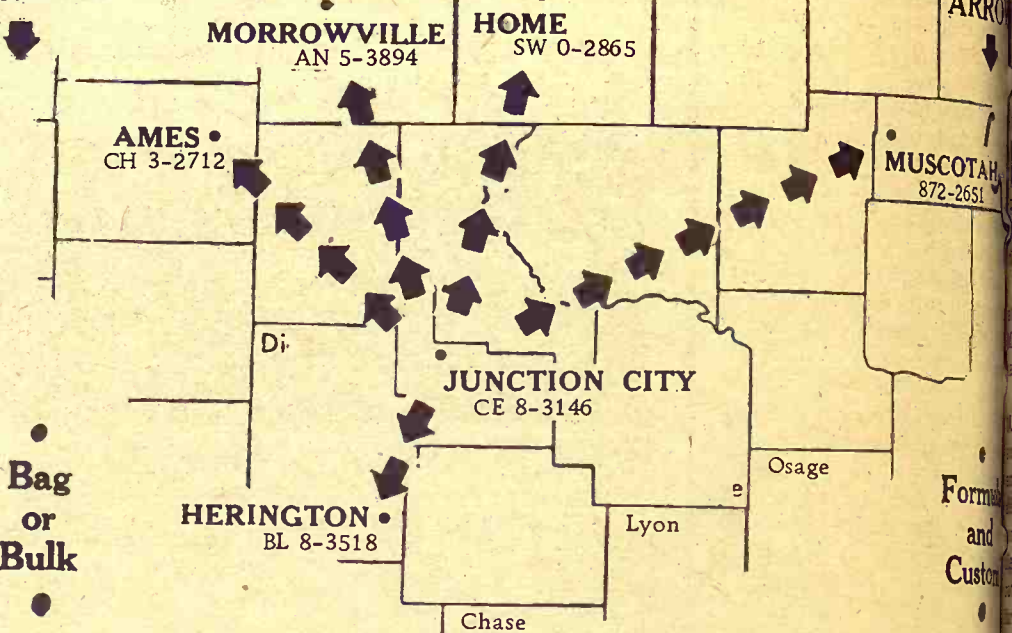

The poloxalene-molasses-salt blocks appear to be an effective method of administering poloxalene, especially for cattle normally receiving a grain ration for poloxalene.

Studies at all three locations emphasized the need for management of the block to insure adequate intake. It is necessary to place the blocks in areas where cattle congregated when not grazing.

Application for approval of the block dosage has been submitted to the Food and Drug Administration. It is hoped that approval will be granted in near future.

Settles 10-Year Dispute About Overplanting

NEW LONDON, Ohio — John Donaldson, who faced possible loss of his farm in a dispute with the government over a penalty for allegedly over-planting his wheat acreage allotment back in 1957, has finally made his peace with Uncle Sam.

Mr. Donaldson was accused of planting 23 acres of wheat when his allotment was only 15 acres. Donaldson maintained he planted only 14 acres, but he refused to let agricultural committee-men charged with enforcing the government acreage control program measure the land. A federal district court set penalties and interest at $583.

After spending "close to $1000 attempting to defend himself," Mr. Donaldson said he finally had no further legal recourse. So this week he went to the U.S. Attorney's office in Toledo and agreed on a settlement amounting to $440.72. Mr. Donaldson still maintains his innocence, but after 10 years of fighting he decided to pay off rather than see his 389-acre farm auctioned off. A group of area residents who agreed with his stand are collecting a fund to help pay the penalties and defray some of the legal expenses, he said.

No other livestock field shows the extreme year-to-year vibrations as does sheep, and this year is no exception.

The January 1 count by the Livestock Reporting Service numbered 452,000 sheep and lambs in the state—down 22% from a year ago and the lowest number ever recorded in Kansas since statistics were first compiled.

To illustrate the vagaries of the sheep business, a year ago the trend was just reversed. There was a 19% increase first reported, altho revised figures later proved the gain only to be a modest 5%. But the year before there was a 19% loss.

As always there were some good-sized variations from county to county. Sheep numbers jump about considerably year-to-year, reflecting the vagaries of the market, the quickness of the breeding season, and the ease of great movements of sheep from one area to another. The latter factor explains how one county may double or triple its sheep numbers from one year to another, and another county may see its sheep census slip to one-half in the same period. Big sheep owners move their flocks quickly from one grazing area to another.

The middle plains continued to dominate the sheep field, with four contiguous counties—Reno, Sedgwick, Harvey and McPherson—son—ranking 1-2-3-4 in the state.

Reno continued at the top with 31,500 sheep to Sedgwick's 21,000. Harvey and McPherson were each figured to have around 17,500 sheep and lambs. Finney and Stanton, two western Kansas counties, were next, and Pottawatomie, Republic, Cowley, and Sumner finished 7-8-9-10.

Only the northcentral, eastcentral and southeast regions of the state showed any increases this year. Losses were great in western Kansas, which takes in lambs in large numbers when winter pasture is available.

Across the state, 66 counties showed decreases, 11 stayed about even, and 28 had gains.

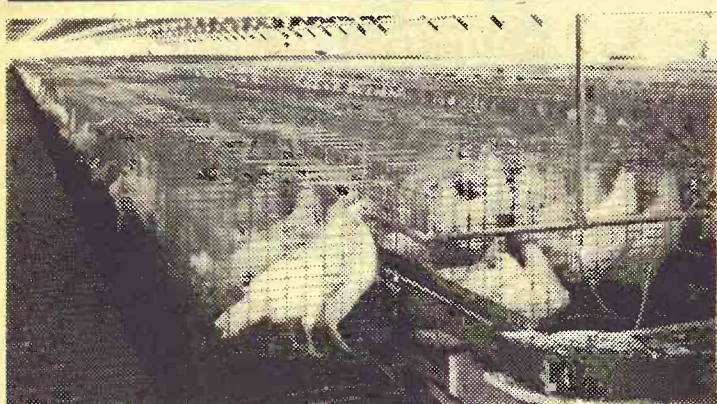

While the total number of sheep is at a record low, that doesn't mean the count won't climb again. The total dropped below 600,000 in 1956 and was nearly 50% greater inside of three years.

The high count since World War II was the 883,000 counted in 1959 but the 1962 census showed 848,000.

But the state's sheep census totals are still a long way from the state's peak. Back in the 1880s, Kansas had over a mil-

Feeding Can Still Be Major Kansas Industry

By Donald B. Erickson
Kansas State University

Only four states led Kansas in cash receipts from cattle production during 1965. Yet the cattle feeding industry is one of this state's most promising areas for future development.

More than two million calves were pastured on winter wheat in Kansas during 1964. Almost half these animals were pastured on wheat during 1964 that were grain fed.

Kansas farmers produced enough grain in 1964 to fatten 2.7 million head of cattle. And 1964 was a below average year for grain production in the state.

The following year, enough grain was produced in this state to fatten about 3.5 million head. Sorghum production totaled 137 million bushels up from 98 million a year earlier. Corn production increased from 46 million to 62 million bushels.

But only 13,000 more cattle were grain fed in 1965 than in 1964. Thus, it's evident that feed grain production is not a limiting factor for feedlot expansion in Kansas.

Future development of the cattle feeding industry will depend in part on regulations concerning location of feedlots in relation to water pollution. Regulations and specifications will be established, especially for commercial or larger feedlots.

These and other factors will determine the future of the livestock feeding industry in the state. Kansas will become either one of the major feeding states in the industry or one of the leading feed grain exporting states.

agricultural marketing economist.

They raised a question about the traditional method of volunteer farmer-reporters mailing in questionnaires, from which nationwide projects are made on various commodities as to production and marketing intentions.

One alternative might be a much smaller and carefully selected group of farmers, representing a statistically valid sample, which could be paid to report correctly and promptly the precise data needed on which to base guidelines for decision-making by farmers and marketing agencies, the NU economists suggested.

Weekly figures on production, marketing and prices collected and reported would need to reflect activity on a wider and more representative basis than today's traditional marketing points, they added.

And improvements in statistical sampling, vast strides in automatic data processing and wider use of air surveys of crops and acres should help close the "information gap" in agricultural marketing.

More sophisticated marketing information is needed not only by the farmer-producer to remain competitive and solvent, but also by processors and marketing groups, which are still undergoing radical changes, the NU speakers pointed out.

"Today, we find most farmers extremely knowledgeable concerning farm production techniques and methods, but less knowledgeable in the skills of marketing," Dr. Kendrick stated.

Poor Counting May Have Kept

The year 1966 was a poor year for the livestock statisticians.

A preliminary estimate of cattle that turned out to be 180,000 short didn't endear the adding machine boys to the cattleman last year.

The preliminary estimate on hog numbers wasn't short, but it helped to confuse hog raisers at least as much. The January 1, 1966, estimate proved to be nearly 100,000 hogs long, the revised figure being 1.190 million compared to the original guess of 1.296 million.

With over five million cattle, the cattle estimate was off 4%. With around one and a quarter million hogs, the preliminary count was 9% off.

Perhaps the error was a good thing. With hogs off $10 from the high of the last up-cycle, hogmen say that prices are at break-even levels now, with good management. Had the 1966 report been more accurate, it is likely that there would have been more pigs now and lower prices.

The new January 1 estimate is 1.321 million hogs and pigs. This is about 11% more than the revised figure of a year ago, and it reflects a general rise in the state, among large and small producers alike. Only 10 counties in the state show decreases from the totals a year ago.

The revision in the census last year indicates something of a problem in analyzing the hog situation. Even if the hog growers can control their extreme pessimistic selling out and uncontrolled zeal for starting again, the hog market apparently has built-in tendencies toward fluctuations.

The size of litters, the steadiness of gestation, the ease of breeding, the quickness of fattening, and the easy relationship of the public's taste for pork with its price, promote quick changes in the market.

For years major hog raisers have been trying to pacify their brethren — to stop them from panic when the market goes sour and to buffer their emotions when prices soar.

Actually the hog growers have done a better job maintaining stability than many economists give them credit for. The inventory in the past six years has strayed only a few percentage points away from 1 1/2 million.

This was the ninth straight year for the state to count over one million hogs, a figure reached after the drastic decline of the middle 1950's when the state's swine inventory dipped to an all-time low of 697,000 in 1954.

The gain this year was almost universal. Only two western Kansas counties showed decreases this year, although they were not a major hog-growing area west of Hutchinson.

Of the top 25 pork producing counties only three showed decreases and these were all small. One which showed a 200% reduction was Nemaha, the perennial state leader. This year Nemaha counted 53,000 hogs.

Washington remained the old ranking hog county and neighboring Marshall was based on an 11,000 jump to 47,000. Rounding out the top were Jewell, Sedgwick, Brown, Republic, Butler, Marion and Pottawatomie. Marion and Pottawatomie returned to the list after one year's absence and Sedgwick jumped all the way to 5th with a 10,000 increase.

First Major Hog Area Cholera Free

Michigan is the first major hog producing state to be declared free of hog cholera. It is also the seventh state to be officially named hog cholera free.

Previously, Vermont, New York, Montana, Alaska, and Idaho were declared free of this costly swine disease.

Sees Area As Feeder Pig Center

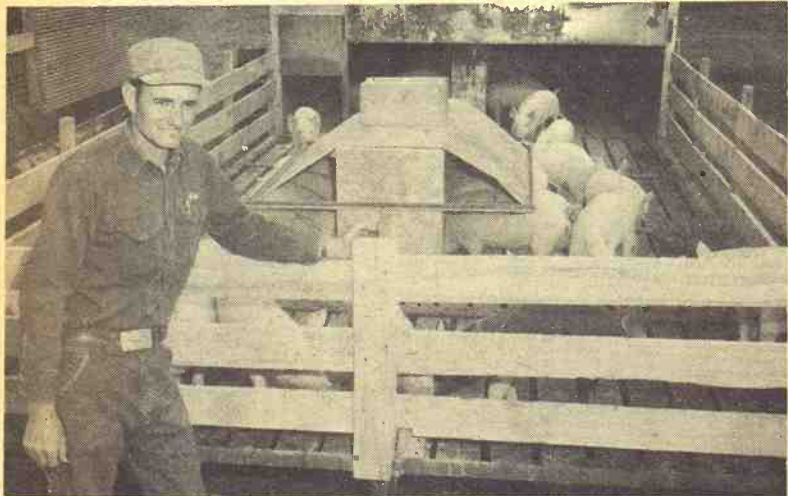

WATERVILLE — A program to establish Marshall county as a pig producing center is under way with the initial pig farm by John and Marc Lamoreaux, south of Waterville.

The second farm is being established west of Waterville with cooperating farmers. The Lamoreaux Bldg. & Construction Co. manufactures and provides all the facilities and the breeding sows and boars. The farm now in the making will start with 100 sows, with plans to increase to 1000.

John Lamoreaux believes that it will be just a matter of months until the area will produce enough feeder pigs to establish a feeder pig market.

Lamoreaux pays half the feed costs at each farm as well as provide the breeding stock and equipment. Cooperating farmers will split the profit from the sale of feeders.

A Lamoreaux nursery, with farm manager Max Day. The farm is disease controlled. Farrowing houses are portable and are moved to another area for cleaning and disinfecting after each farrowing.

Interior view of one of the nurseries, also portable for convenient cleaning. The farm has a catch basin for refuse.

The new design of farrowing houses is shown in this view with John Lamoreaux. Doors are hinged to swing out and up for best ventilation. All buildings are insulated, farrowing houses and nurseries equipped with heat lamps. Operators believe this type of equipment lends itself to a near disease-free operation. Pigs receive both solid and liquid feeds.

Own Remedy In Lower Weights

OMAHA — If history repeats itself, cattle feeders are in the process of providing their own remedies to depressed cattle prices, believes Don Magdanz, executive secretary of the National Livestock Feeders Assn.

"A gradual decline in average weights of slaughter steers at seven major markets has been evident since the week ending March 2. 'The decline hasn't been phenomenal, but it's in the right direction to help cattle prices,'" Magdanz said.

"It appears that the average weight trend is taking a direction similar to 1965 when marketing weights of steers started the year rather high and then began a gradual decline to a September low, he continued.

That year, average steer prices — as might be expected — followed a trend in the opposite direction after beginning the year rather low. In 1965 cattle prices peaked in June and then leveled off with only a slight decline for the remainder of the year, Magdanz stated.

Magdanz encourages feeders to follow the 1965 pattern this year and stay away from a repeat of the 1966 average market weight trend. In '66, the average weight figure was high at the start and declined into March, (while beef prices moved up), then the weight trend reversed and climbed until August, while prices declined.

The marketing weights stayed relatively high on into 1967, and meanwhile, beef prices began a steady decline which has continued on into March of this year.

"The quickest solution to the current cattle price situation is for feeders to bring market weights down, and keep them down," Magdanz concluded.

April 25, 1967

First Poultry Gain In Decade

While everyone was looking the other way, the Kansas poultry industry suddenly made a turnaround and started running the other way.

For the first time in a decade there were more chickens on state farms than there were the year before.

The January 1, 1967, count was 5,696 million chickens. That's 6% more than the revised figure from last year and 11% more than the preliminary figure reported in this G&G special edition a year ago.

Why the increase after an almost steady 5% annual loss in the past 20 years? The decline of the family-sized flock from the farm, lost first as a nuisance to the more prosperous post-war farmer and then as unprofitable as both chicken and egg prices got more and more marginal, made a steady cut in Kansas' chicken numbers after 1945.

The increase apparently comes not from the reappearance of the small flock, but the advent of major poultry operations, involving several thousand chickens each, at various parts of the state.

That explains partly how 14 counties in the state showed increases of more than 10,000 chickens each in the past year, and how one county, Sedgwick, saw its poultry census jump by 81,000.

Perhaps even small flocks have been put back into operation more than has been suspected, for the current enumeration shows 57 of the state's 105 counties had more chickens this year than last. Fourteen more counties were reckoned to be about the same in this count, while 34 showed decreases.

Riding that 81,000 gain, Sedgwick became the state's leading poultry county, replacing Marion which led for 10 years. Both counties showed major gains, but Sedgwick also had a large revision made in its 1966 preliminary count.

Three adjacent counties — Reno, Harvey, and McPherson — finished 3-4-5 in the placings. Reno and Harvey each had large gains, while McPherson held even.

Harber ranked 6th, and Washington fell to 7th, on the only loss among the top counties. Washington led the state in poultry count until 1956, challenged Marion for the leadership in the past decade, but has fallen back in the past two years.

Marshall, Dickinson and Pratt finished out the top 10.

The fact that some of the leading poultry counties are increasing their flocks indicates something about the change in the poultry business. Some of the big poultry farms are getting bigger. That apparently is the only possibility of profit, and chicken farmers in some of the established poultry areas are building flocks in the tens of thousands.

While the Board of Agriculture does not list number of chickens in the state back to 1867 as it does for other farm animals, it does show egg production since 1930. The production for 1965 — latest year for which statistics are available — was 935 million eggs. This egg production figure had never been below one billion until 1963 and had been as high as 1½ billion as recently as 1959. In the middle 1940's Kansas egg production was over 2 billion eggs per year.

While some state poultrymen are in the broiler business rather er than the egg business, the production does indicate the extent to the decline in recent years.

In numbers state chickens decline from 7 million in 1961 to 6.8 million, 5.9 million in 1963, 5.4 million in 1965 to 5.2 million in 1966.

Now the figure moves back up. A temporary thing or indicative of an important change in Kansas livestock industry.

An implement dealership closeout at Salina drew Stanley Thurlow, J. W. Van Camp, and Rod Thurlow of New Cambria as lookers.

PURINA SALES UP, BUT PROFIT DECLINES

ST. LOUIS — Ralston Purina says its sales for the first half of its current fiscal year were up 24% to $643 million, but profits were down 14%, to 18 million. The earnings decline resulted from "broiler prices that were below the cost of production for most of the period and from soybean margins that were considerably less favorable than last year."

HEREFORD BREEDER A. R. SCHLICKAU DIES

HAVEN — Albert R. Schlickau, senior partner in the A. R. Schlickau & Sons registered

Visiting Before The Sale

Richard Anderson and Johnny Gentry, both of near Simpson, visit at a recent G&G area sale.

'Sell Milk And Dump LBJ'

AMES, Iowa — An NFO farm official said last week that if farmers want to get President Johnson "off their back" they should "sell your milk and dump LBJ."

Erhardt Pfingsten of Sergeant Bluff, Iowa, vice president of the National Farmers Organization which staged a milk holding action, was among those greeting Agriculture Secretary Orville L. Freeman.

Freeman came here from Hutchinson, Kans., for the second of three "shirtsleeve" talks with midwest farmers.

More than 1,000 persons jammed an auditorium at Iowa State University to present complaints about declining farm prices while living costs rise.

Farm prices have dipped 8 per cent since August while living costs rose 2 to 3 per cent.

Farmers rose one after another to blast administration farm policy. Most common was the complaint that the government has been dragging its feet on halting imports.

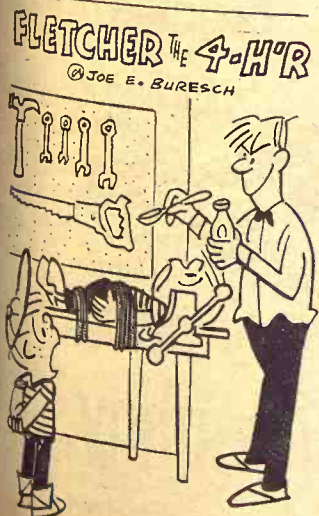

Freeman replied the law does not permit him to curtail dairy imports until prices slip below support levels. He said he was confident action would cut imports within 60 days, but added, "if we'd acted before now it would have been thrown out of the courts."

PICKPOCKETS

Walter Goeppinger of Boone, president of the National Corn Growers Association, told Freeman, "the U. S. ought to be ashamed as a nation that we pick the pockets of farmers to make food cheap to the consumer."

Freeman denied there is a cheap food philosophy. He said that if the President was against the farmers he wouldn't spend $3.5 billion for price support programs, $500 million for government food purchases, $1.5 billion for food for peace."

"ISN'T THAT GOING TO A LOT OF TROUBLE JUST TO GET SOME CASTOR-OIL INTO EDDIE?"

Sees Bean Demand Up

By Leonard W. Schruben
Kansas State University

Soybeans continue to play an increasingly important role in the agricultural economy of Kansas and the United States. Farmers are particularly interested in the meal that comes from processing soybeans. Production of soybean meal has more than doubled since World War II. Its use for live-stock feed and as an export has shown a similar increase.

This trend has great significance to Kansas farmers, because it appears that the demand for high protein feed ingredients will continue to expand.

The USDA estimates a total production of 13.6 million tons of soybean meal during the 1966-67 crushing season, compared to 12.9 million tons a year earlier. The major oilseed meals produced in the U. S. are from processing soybeans, cottonseed, peanuts, flax, and copra. Almost 80 per cent of the total tonnage, however, is soybean meal.

More soybean meal will be fed this year for two reasons. Less cottonseed meal will be available, and the number of poultry and hogs will be up. This latter factor will be partially offset by a small reduction in cattle numbers.

Soybean meal prices jumped around a lot last year, ranging from $72 to $107 at Kansas City. Prices have been generally higher this year, and should continue above last year's levels through the summer. Although the soybean market is full of surprises, it seems unlikely that prices will reach last year's high, however.

Farmers have placed more 1966-crop soybeans under government price supports this year than last year. Up to the end of December, a record 116 million bushels from the 1966 crop went under the loan, compared to 67 million tons during the same period of 1965.

Price-support loans are available through June 30. Farmers have until July 30 to pay off the loan. Thus, they have an opportunity to appraise the prospects for the 1967 crops.

Soybean acreage planted this spring will be up approximately 9 per cent from last year's record level, according to the recent Crop Reporting Board Survey. If yields keep pace, another big crop will be harvested this fall. Weather will have an important bearing on prices of beans and meal, however.

Few Employables On Welfare, Says Report

How many people on welfare are fit to work?

The relief rolls are "full of able-bodied men sitting around drinking beer" think a lot of critics. But that's not so, if you believe a recent government report which says that less than one per cent of the 7.3 million Americans on public welfare are capable of going to work.

A presidential aide, Joseph Califano Jr., asserted that only 50,000 of the 7.3 million are "capable of being given job skills and training that will make them self-sufficient."

Of the 7.3 million on the welfare rolls, he said:

- 2.1 million, mostly women, are 65 or over, with a median age of 72.

- 700,000 are either blind or "so severely handicapped that their work potential, if any is extremely limited."

- 3.5 million are children whose parents cannot support them.

- The remaining one million-plus are the parents of those children—about 900,000 mothers and 150,000 fathers.

Of the 150,000 fathers, Califano said, two-thirds are incapacitated. Only about 50,000 "are capable of being given job skills that will make them self-sufficient."

MANHATTAN GIRL WINS NATIONAL CONTEST

A Manhattan high school girl has won a national homemaking contest and with it a $5000

Karen Pesaresi

Scholarship. The girl is Karen Pesaresi, 18, who won the 1967 Betty Crocker All-American Homemaker of Tomorrow title in a field of 580,000 contestants. General Mills is the sponsor.

Bunny Business Takes Setback

Kansas' biggest livestock business by far is beef. But there are plenty of state farmers who have made tidy livings over the years off pork, poultry, or sheep.

In recent years there have been new attempts to find new avenues in the livestock business. One of them last week took a setback as a fire destroyed some 4000 rabbits of the High Plains Bunny Haven at Hays.

The rabbits — some two thirds of the company's livestock and the entire breeding herd — were destroyed when fire swept thru a metal building housing the animals' cages.

"We're going to fight back," said Arlen Walters of Hays, an owner. "We still have a little left."

"It hits you right in the bread basket," Don Haas, another owner, commented after surveying the wreckage, but he noted that about 2000 young rabbits in a second building were not harmed by the fire.

The company raised its rabbits for a Hill City meat packing company that processed them for sale in grocery stores.

The destroyed building was a 218 by 35 foot metal-sided frame building. It contained 512 cages of rabbits. It was one of three on a 10-acre tract owned by Ralph Engel of Hays.

The company, noted Haas, was exactly a year old the day of the fire.

Soil Stewardship Week

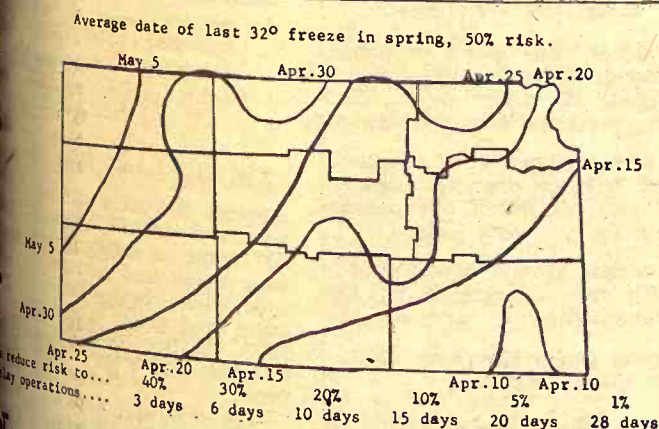

Signing proclamations and having pictures taken for various promotions is a regular routine at the governor's office. The reason this time is Soil Stewardship Week. The dates are April 30-May 7.

Shown with the governor are Lyle Bauer, president of the Kansas Association of Conservation Districts; Mrs. Lynn Berk; Mrs. Glenda Bauer; Lynn Berk, chairman of the KACD soil stewardship committee; Rabbi Elbert Sapinsley; Rev. Albert Nickel; Father James J. Moriarty.

Top Showman at Little Royal

Richard Teagarden of LaCygne wins the top showman award of the Block and Bridle Division at K-State's Little American Royal. Marjorie Henry, K-State's Miss Agriculture 1967, gives the trophy.

Freeze Risk

There was less than a 50% risk of a major freeze over much of the G&G area, but the odds didn't hold weekend.

As much as four inches of snow fell in southern Nebraska, and several parts of the G&G area in Kansas saw the ground go white with snow altho it quick-morning, risking fruit crops considerably. Wheat risk was not great except in the southern parts of Kansas where the crop was far enough along for heads to be emerging.

Another Tomco Grain Sorghum King: Wilbur Friedrichs, Herkimer, Kansas

"My Tomco Grain Sorghum out-produced two other brands."

Wilbur Friedrichs has found planting Tomco grain sorghum pays many ways. Tomco is versatile. "Tomco yields were 10 bushels an acre better than two other brands — 110 bushels an acre when weather was dry, too. I especially like Tomco's semi-compact, open head. Good grain sorghum yields are important to me. Tomco fits my dairy operation just right, too. I feed sorghum to my 80 head of Holsteins. In operating a Grade A dairy, I need extra feed and bedding. Tomco's stubble is easily shredded for feed or bedding. Tomco's grain sorghum is a good yielding, all-around crop."

This 43-year-old dairyman works hard to make the most of his investments on his 600-acre farm. He's just completed a new dairy barn, put in Grade A milking parlor, and has several other improvements planned. Tomco fits right in with his progressive farming methods. Along with Tomco, he invested in 150 lbs. of fertilizer and good weed control practices.

Make Tomco a leader of your good cropping practices. See your local Tomco dealer now. He knows the Tomco varieties suited for your fields... will recommend these to you. You, too, can be a Tomco Grain Sorghum King in 1967 with recommended Tomco varieties.

Another Tomco Corn King: Keith Williams, Marysville, Kansas

"This year I plan to plant twice as much Tomco."

"We raised 375 acres of corn last year. Tomco's 150 bushel per acre yield was 50 bushels better than my overall average yield. I'm sure sold on Tomco. It's a good-standing corn. Tomco picks and shells real well with my combine corn head. As a result, I'm buying twice as much Tomco this year."

Williams operates 900 acres. Irrigation, plowdown and starter fertilizer plus a herbicide play important parts in getting king-sized yields. Corn is fed to 850 head of cattle each year.

Big and small corn growers are experiencing yield superiority with Tomco. Talk to your local Tomco Genetic Giant dealer today. He has the right varieties for your soil and weather. You too can be a Tomco Corn King in 1967 with recommended Tomco varieties. Order your Tomco seed supply now.

Freeman Holds His Own At Hutch

The dragon came to St. George last week and not only wasn't slain but St. George admitted that it was pretty tough being a dragon.

The dragon was Secretary of Agriculture Orville Freeman, who made Kansas one of three stops last week to hear complaints from farmers. The farmers had the St. George role, and with high expenses, low prices, and pesky weather, had their swords sharpened on some barbed questions they had for the dragon.

Freeman's Kansas stop was at Hutchinson, and later he went to Ames, Iowa, and Decatur, Indiana, to face farmers in similar "shirtsleeve" sessions.

The Hutchinson meeting drew perhaps 1000 farmers. Some reporters thought there were as many as 1500. About 200 of them were farm leaders with special invitations. They got to sit on the main floor at Convention Hall. The others were farmers who had driven in to listen to the session. They were seated in the balcony.

Wherever they were sitting, the farmers from a 5-state area were prepared to fling questions at Freeman. Despite all the complaints, when the meeting was over, it appeared that most farmers thought Freeman gave a good account of his position. Never once did he indicate that he was fully satisfied with current farm income. And his answers were given in an even, clear way that earned respect, if grudgingly given.

Here was Freeman on the firing line:

● Fred Kilian, Wamego NFO supporter, in an opening discussion from the farm leaders, proposed all farmers join his organization.

Freeman rebutted: "Don't ask me to choose between farm organizations. I have enough problems already."

● Why couldn't carryover wheat be isolated from the market so it didn't depress prices?

Freeman explained the government didn't own all the prospective 400 million bushel carryover. Its wheat stocks are down to 125 million bushels. The remainder is "free" wheat — owned by farmers, elevators, and mills.

● Why had wheat allotments been increased so much except to build up more surpluses and lower the price of wheat?

Freeman said he granted percentage increases in wheat acreage because "we can't afford to take a chance on running out of wheat in the United States."

Similarly, Freeman said he had proposed an increase in feed grain acreage and was "agonizing" whether to ask for another additional increase.

● Why were wheat prices so low? Couldn't there be a certificate covering the farmers' share of the export market as well as the certificate covering domestically sold wheat?

An export certificate would cost the government about $335 million a year, he said. He reminded the audience several times that farmers represent only 6 or 7 percent of the population, and that legislation is increasingly difficult to obtain under such mathematical facts.

Freeman also pointed out that figuring market price and the certificate, farmers got on an average $2.14 a bushel as a blend price, while Canadian farmers got $1.60 a bushel.

● Dairyman and beef feeders both protested heavy supplies of their products coming into this country from abroad. The question of imports came up frequently.

The secretary explained that last year this country had a record farm export of around $7 billion and that we couldn't expect to export that much without importing some too.

● A Texas co-op representative questioned the lag in current export figures.

Freeman admitted exports are down and hinted further curtailments in the future. "We are worried about it."

While the questions were often bitter and the answers ac-

Fish Farming May Be Next Major Livestock Industry

A livestock industry that early day cattle barons never would have dreamed of may have a very bright future in Kansas.

It's fish farming, and there are various enterprises in the state aimed at making money out of feeding channel catfish. Pushing ahead in research on this subject are K-State specialists, who are becoming world-known specialists on the subject.

Dr. Otto Tiermeyer and Dr. Charles Deyoe will speak at an international symposium of fresh water fish producers at Belgium next year. They spoke to a similar group in Italy last year.

But they see the brightest future right in Kansas.

A meat buyer for the Dillon food chain, K. D. Mowrer, compares the challenges of the catfish industry to that of the now highly successful broiler industry. He thinks Kansas can succeed if producers whip their problems.

One of the problems is getting more fish farmers. Sidney Corbin of Towanda, president of a statewide commercial fish-growers association, says the state now has about 60 fish farmers who average 40 pond acres each.

Corbin himself is raising about 20,000 catfish in 10 ponds. He got them as fingerlings and in a year and a half gets them to "eating size," one to two pounds. He figures to make $500 to $600 per pond acre.

The Towanda fish farmer is optimistic about the new industry. A feeder of 500 hogs and 200 cattle, he says "I can make twice as much in the fish business."

One of the largest fish firms in the state is the Kaw Valley Fish Farms, near Lawrence. Its major stockholder is Howard Heck, who views the business with both optimism and caution.

Heck has been in the catfish business two years. He thinks would-be producers had better be prepared for some problems. But Kansas is fortunate, he observes, in having the best catfish research facilities in the world available at Kansas State University.

"Dr. Tiemeier and Dr. Deyoe are the top authorities on formulation of commercial feed," he says. "I have heard them quoted many times throughout the country."

The Lawrence producer recognizes that rapid processing of fish is essential to the success of the catfish industry. To help solve the problem he has developed a prototype machine which can process 600 catfish an hour. The live fish goes in on end, is humanely killed, cleaned and emerges ready for the skillet. Later models of the machine will process "considerably more" fish per hour, Heck says.

Development of the catfish industry will mean new business for other Kansas businesses. The feed manufacturing industry is one of them.

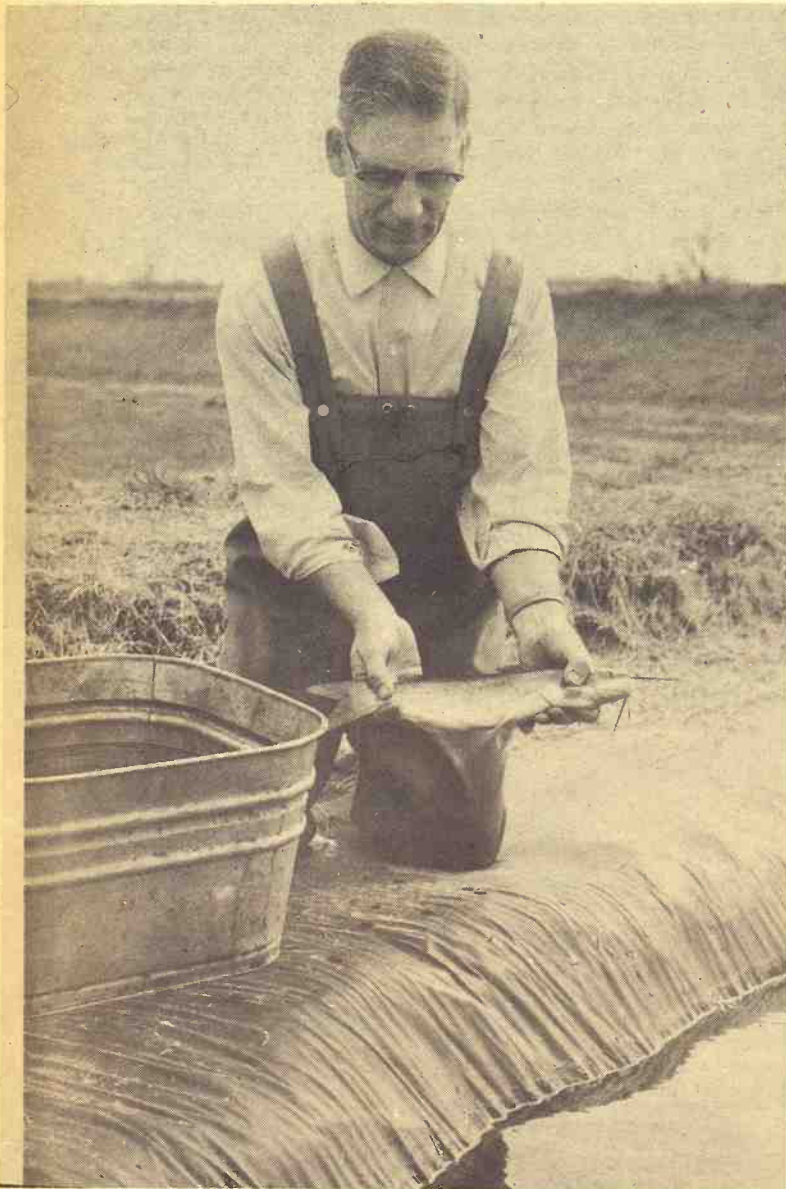

William Blair of Atchison, immediate past president of the Kansas Formula Feed Manufacturing Association, sees steady growth for fish farming.

Last year Blair's Atchison firm manufactured and sold 250 tons of catfish pellets. Blair predicts larger sales for next summer.

Other Kansas feed manufacturers report catfish pellet sales in 1966 ranging from 100 to 300 tons. All agree the industry has real potential.

Many Kansans are raising fingerlings for sale to pond stockers. The commercial fish growers association informs that two to four-inch catfish sell for seven to 10 cents each when bought in quantities of 10,000. The price, of course, is flexible.

EXPERIMENTAL CATFISH — Dr. Otto W. Tiemeier, a zoologist at Kansas State University, Manhattan, shows one of thousands of channel catfish being used in work at the university's Fisheries Research Laboratory near Tuttle Creek Dam. Tiemeier, an international authority on catfish, can tell you all about them — when, what and how often they eat, how they digest food, what water temperatures are best for growth, and kinds of formulas to feed so the fish will have less fat and more nutritious protein.

cepted without great noise, one time the audience cheered. A Nebraska farmer, Alfred Schutte of Webster County, a former county Farm Bureau president who broke away from that organization, said, "The American public believes Charlie Shuman represents the farmer, that he speaks for use. He doesn't."

There was cheering in Convention Hall at that, and it became obvious that the Farm Bureau was outnumbered at this meeting.

The Curtis bill — Freeman called it the American Farm Bureau Bill — was mentioned, and the Secretary asked for a show of hands how many approved the bill which would abolish farm programs for grains. About 15 hands were raised. The call for those opposed to the Curtis bill and presumably in favor of continued programs, brought an overwhelming response.

Ray Frisbie, president of the Kansas Farm Bureau, was not observed voting one way or another. Frisbie made a statement after the meeting in which he said an overwhelming majority of Kansas farmers are opposed to present programs, but at the meeting he made only a brief statement, much of it chiding Freeman for "using up all the time talking."

"If I've talked too much," Freeman responded, "I'm sorry. Next question."

Freeman refused only one question. When a reporter asked for a comment on criticism from Lud Strnad, Brewster, Ks. antagonist of administration farm policy, Freeman said, "There are very few people in the United States on whose remarks I will refuse comment. Lud Strnad is one of them."

Freeman got applause one time and cries of "that's right, that's right," when he said: "I think the consumer would be willing to accept higher prices if he were assured the farmer got the money."

Farm prices are "disgracefully low," Freeman said at one point, and that was one point that farmers were in unanimous agreement.

At the start, Freeman said he wasn't out to sell anything.

"I'm not running for anything. You couldn't get elected dog catcher from this job."

The farmer audience seemed to recognize that Freeman's job was indeed tough and that he held up well under the questioning. It's possible that if a vote were taken after the meeting that Orville Freeman might have been wrong, and that he could have been elected dog-catcher.

The fishing, a sport where anglers pay as high as 98 cents a pound for fish they catch, is another profitable segment of the industry. The thrill of "landing 'em" themselves is steadily growing in popularity among tourists and Kansas families seeking outdoors recreation.

Enterprising youths can pay for their college educations with well-managed fee fishing farms, Heck suggests. Dr. Glenn M. Russett, State 4-H Club Leader, agrees. He points out that youths can net $250 a year on a single one-acre farm pond.

Just about any way you look at it, commercial fish farming looms as a money-making industry in Kansas' own backyard. The big job is sinking a hook into it.

TYPE

These cows have size, bone, and stand on plenty of leg. They were raised in the Southwest and are acclimated — ready to go on working. They are handled in one unit of over 100 cows. The cows are well fed but no special care is given individual cows. The policy has been that a cow has to turn out performance to stay as is indicated by the above production records. The cows are handled under mechanized conditions and have the will to work.
