DON'T THEY LOOK FINE

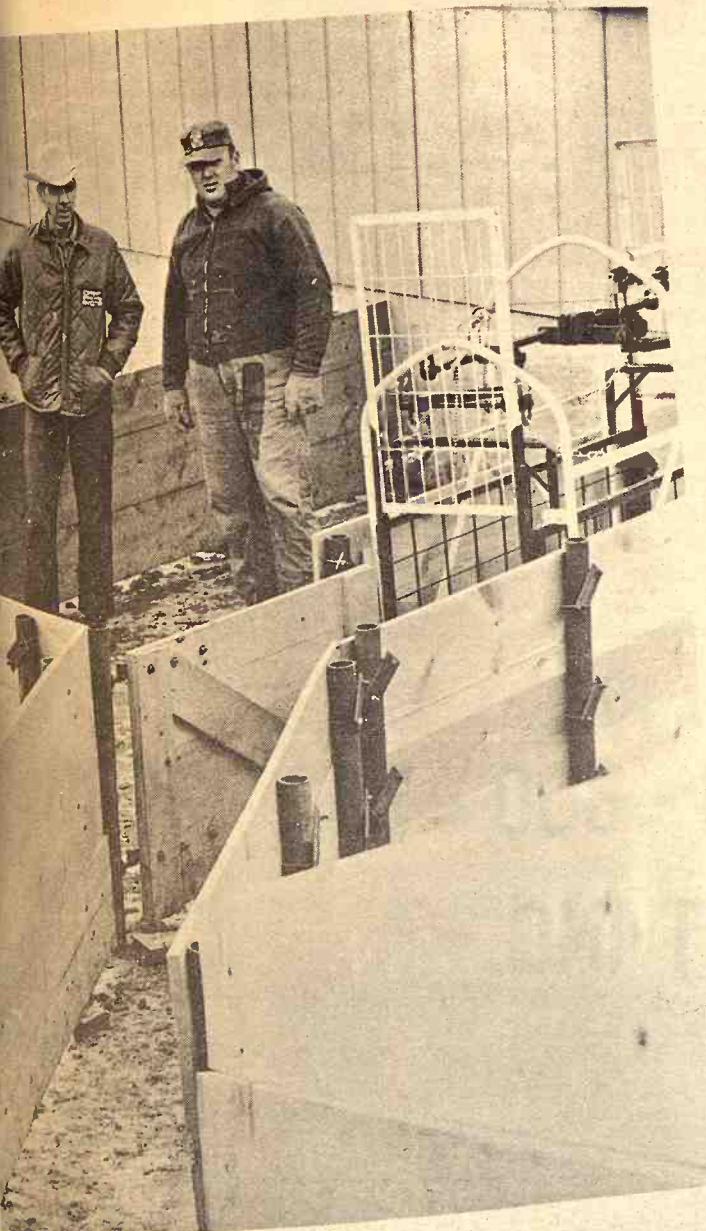

At 60 pounds these little porkers will be put in Harvey Cramer's new finishing house. "I'd rather farrow sows than gilts," Cramer said. "I get more pigs and have less farrowing problems with sows."

NEW FINISHING BARN

Cramer, a rural Beatrice, Nebraska farmer, designed and built this finishing house except for the concrete work. He works during the day on his 600 acre farm and at night during the winter for Dempster Manufacturing in Beatrice. Delmer Jurgens, an owner of Beatrice "77" Livestock Sales, looks over Cramer's recent addition.

Wanted: A 25 Hour Working Day

NO GUESS WORK

This concrete chute with scales takes the guess work out of pig weights at market time. Jurgens agrees that scales are important because a matched load of hogs seems to sell better.

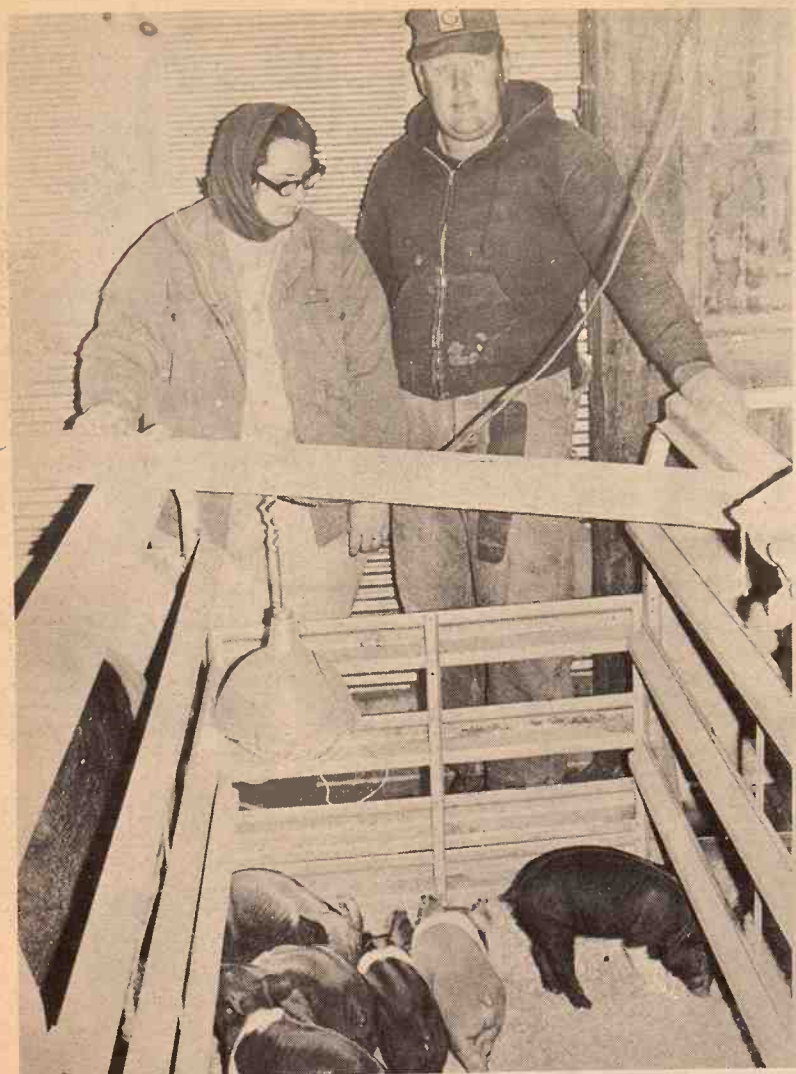

WATCHFUL MOTHER

Cramer is a Hereford man and says, "I don't think I'll ever cross breed cattle." He uses a registered bull with his 51 cows and has had good luck with calving.

CATTLE EMPIRE EDITION POSTPONED

Grass and Grain had scheduled the annual Cattle Empire Edition for this week. Because the figures from which many of the livestock inventory stories were based have not yet been compiled by the State Livestock Service, the edition will be postponed until early May.

WORKING WIFE

Working day and night means that Cramer's wife, Barbara, must help with chores. "To make our operation go we have to work together," Cramer stated.

He Works Day And Night

By Ted Gum

The farmer may have his independence but his conscience usually makes him work well over 40 hours a week.

Harvey Cramer, Beatrice, Nebraska, has a big conscience because he's trying to schedule several 40-hour work weeks in just one week.

"What I need is a 25-hour day, maybe then I could get something done," Cramer says jokingly.

Working during the day on his 600 acre farm and at night for Dempster Manufacturing in Beatrice keeps Cramer on the move almost 24 hours a day. "I feel lucky to get three hours sleep some days," he added.

Cramer has kept this schedule for the past eight winters, but "this will probably be the last winter because now I've got my hog operation established."

Barbara, Cramer's wife, has helped make the operation go. She works with her husband feeding and caring for their 500 hogs.

In the last three years Cramer started a farrowing operation with a Duroc, Chester White, and Hampshire rotational cross. But he's been in the hog business for eight years. Before he started the farrowing operation he bought pigs and fed them out.

With 62 sows the Cramer's keep busy in the farrowing house most of the time. They hope to reach a goal of a hundred sows farrowing twice a year. Most of the sows are on their second or third litter and have averaged 10 pigs per sow.

This past fall Cramer decided to cut the labor on his hog operation. He built a partially slatted finishing house that would handle 300 hogs about every four months.

The reason Cramer wanted a 25-hour day could center around the fact he built the 72' by 36' finishing structure except for the concrete work. It took about six weeks last winter to build it, he had hogs in the house the day after Christmas.

Cramer did a lot of research before designing his building. After visiting other finishing houses he decided concrete would last the longest, insulation was a must, automatic waterers and feeders would be included, and a slatted floor for waste disposal was necessary.

The entire floor has a 3/4 inch slope per foot from north to south. It runs into an eight foot wide slatted floor on the south side that covers the length of the building.

There are concrete dividers between each of the six pens with a concrete foundation about four inches high. The contractor beveled edges of the concrete slats to eliminate sharp edges. "This is an aspect we hadn't considered because we believe it's important because possible foot and leg injury."

The slats over an eight foot pit are four inches wide with inch spacings. The pit slopes to east end of the building and has 30,000 gallon capacity that pumped out about every months.

In the center of the insulated building is an inverted "V" from insulated ceiling to the peak of roof. It is about four feet wide and runs the full length of the building. Two fans on the peak of the house draw the stale air out of building through the inverted "V" didn't have any frostbite problem in the finishing house this winter Cramer said.

The plywood doors on the south are usually up and windows are installed on the north side. Together these openings should provide ventilation this summer.

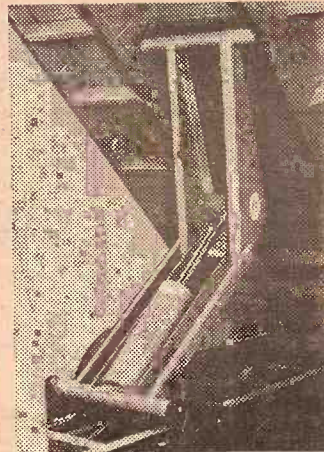

In case of a future winter emergency, Cramer put hot water pipes in the floor of the two pens. These can be used to heat building to some extent or used

Salina Shorthorn Sale Grosses Over $28,000

Grass & Grain

April 25, 1972

Thirty bulls brought $19,570 for an average of $652 at the Mid-America Shorthorn Show and Sale at the Agriculture Hall in Salina.

"It's a supply and demand thing," Milton Nagely, sales manager, said. "There's a shortage of good bulls and some breeders are leaving the exotic field and returning to more familiar breeds."

The top price went for a dark roan bull consigned by Love and Love, Partridge, and bringing $1125 from G&Y Farm, Palco.

That was well above the $900 paid for the show's grand champion, consigned by Dr. Paul Loyd, Newton and sold to Fred Krug, Russell. The reserve champion also brought $900 for Eddie Grathwohl, Hiawatha and was purchased by Wilmer Deers and Son, Sylvan Grove.

H.E. Eshelman, Sedgwick, sold a bull to Fritz Meenan, Clay Center for $1,000.

The 20 females averaged $431 for a total sale of $8625, with the top female with calf by side earning $810. She was consigned by Don and Pat Stout, Kremlin, Okla., and purchased by Marvin Nickols, Fowler.

Total sale was $28,195 for a $564 average.

Nagely said prices put Thursday's sale among the better ones held in Salina for some time. "It reflects the beef market," he said, "but also reflects the shortage of bulls. It takes time and work to break these animals to halter and farm labor is scarce. Many animals are sold on the ranch or are steered. There's a shortage of bulls."

Red Circle Auction Set July 14-15

The dates for the 21st annual Gooch's Red Circle Auction will be July 14 and 15 on the CK Ranch near Brookville. This will be the second Red Circle Auction for Archer Daniels Midland, who bought the Gooch operation from John Vanier almost two years ago.

At this year's unique "no-money" Red Circle Auction, boys and girls will have the opportunity to use Gooch Red Circle Stamps to bid and buy 30 show quality steer calves; 15 registered CK Hereford heifers; 40 registered Duroc and Hampshire gilts; 10 ewe lambs; Holstein heifers and 2 yearling quarter horse colts, E. R. Weddle, general manager, said.

OUR DAILY BREAD

— by G&G Area Cooks

Mrs. Garland Sargent, Olsburg, Prize Winner

Winner, Mrs. Garland Sargent, Rt. 1, Olsburg: "This cobbler is very old, yet is quite versatile in the fruit used."

ELSIE'S COBBLER (Oldtime Recipe)

Cream $\frac{1}{2}$ cup sugar, butter the size of a walnut and half as much again, 1 cup flour, 1 heaping teaspoon baking powder, two-thirds cup milk, pinch salt. Pour batter into pan. Pour 3 cups fruit or berries over batter, 1 cup sugar over fruit, 1 cup boiling water over all. Bake in moderate oven 35-40 minutes until cake is brown and leaves sides of pan.

NEWER METHOD RECIPE

Set oven at 350 degrees.

One-third cup butter or margarine

$\frac{1}{2}$ cup sugar

Cream butter and sugar together.

1 cup sifted all-purpose flour

2 teaspoons baking powder

$\frac{1}{8}$ teaspoon salt

Sift dry ingredients together.

Two-thirds cup milk

Flavorings, if desired

Add dry ingredients alternately with milk and mix until smooth. Spread batter thinly in a well-buttered 9x13 inch cake pan. Scatter three cups fresh fruit or berries over the batter, 1 cup sugar over the fruit and 1 cup boiling water over all. Bake at 350 degrees for 35-45 minutes, until golden brown. Fruit will sink to the bottom and a crisp sugar crust will form on top. Canned fruit works nicely. Drain 1 quart fruit, saving juice. Sprinkle drained fruit over the batter. Sprinkle sugar over fruit (depending on how sweet the syrup). Boil fruit juice; if less than 1 cup add water to fill cup. Pour over all and bake as above instructions. We like a combination of apricots and pineapple. Raw apples will not sink through batter so should be cooked.

Mrs. Cynthia J. Weck, 708 Oak, Wamego: "I am a new subscriber to Grass & Grain and I have enjoyed the recipes I have found in the paper. If you should decide to print my recipe, my family wants to wish all those who try Buttermilk Puffs a happy breakfast."

BUTTERMILK PUFFS

$1\frac{3}{4}$ to 2 cups flour

$\frac{1}{4}$ cup sugar

1 teaspoon baking powder

$\frac{1}{2}$ teaspoon soda

1 teaspoon nutmeg or mace

1 teaspoon salt

$\frac{3}{4}$ cup buttermilk (or $\frac{3}{4}$ cup milk less 1 tablespoon plus 1 tablespoon vinegar)

$\frac{1}{4}$ cup oil

1 egg

(Variation: Omit nutmeg and use 1 tablespoon cocoa and $\frac{1}{2}$ teaspoon almond extract and use a chocolate glaze.)

Sift dry ingredients together. Stir in the rest of the ingredients with a fork. Beat until smooth. Be sure dough is stiff enough. Drop with a teaspoon into hot fat (400 degrees). Fry until golden brown, about three minutes. Drain. Cool two to three minutes. Roll in powdered sugar or granulated sugar. Fry in two batches. Stir down before baking second half.

Mrs. Russell Green, Idana: "We enjoy your paper and good recipes."

BROCCOLI & RICE CASSEROLE

1 chopped ham (if you wish)

Cook minute rice as directed on box. Prepare broccoli as directed on box. When rice and broccoli are cooked, add mushroom soup and Cheez Whiz. Stir until mixed. You can use 1 cup of chopped ham, but use less salt on either your rice or broccoli when preparing. Pour mixture in an 8x8 inch baking dish and bake till heated through, about 350 degrees. Don't bake till dry.

Mrs. Orlando D. Voth, Rt. 2, Newton: "I was surprised the other day to see the many 'Our Daily Bread' recipes I have copied or pasted into my loose-leaf cookbook. I would like to share my favorite cookie recipe."

CHOCOLATE COOKIES

4 squares unsweetened chocolate

1 cup shortening

3 cups brown sugar

2 eggs

1 teaspoon vanilla

3 cups flour

$\frac{1}{2}$ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon soda

Melt chocolate squares and shortening on top of double-boiler and aside to cool for about ten minutes. Beat eggs, then add sugar, vanilla and beat until fluffy. Add chocolate mixture to the egg sugar mixture until well mixed. Together flour, salt and soda. Alternately with the canned milk. Chill dough in the refrigerator about 30 minutes. Drop by rounded

Home Safe Protects Important Papers, Records

Two big dangers for a homeowner are fire and theft and it is too late to think of protection after a fire or burglary.

A safety deposit box in a bank is fine, but something needs to be done about important papers and records that are kept at home. The best solution for these is a home safe.

Home safes are small, rugged and effective. Their cost is generally under that of most major home appliances buy they are no less important.

The advantages of a home safe to the homeowner are enormous. Should a fire destroy the home, family records are protected. A safe in the home is also convenient and available; it can serve as a single source location for all records and valuables. Because it is in the home, it is easily accessible.

A home safe also offers protection. Many business people take work home with them in the evenings or on weekends. The safe can serve as a secure place to keep important work papers.

Special pieces of jewelry and those seldom worn are protected in a home safe.

Many homeowners, realizing the importance of keeping records and papers safe, buy a small metal box. But these thin-walled boxes, while some are asbestos lined, do not protect the homeowner against theft. Sometimes thieves take box and all.

Generally home safes provide an hour's protection against fire. Designed primarily for the protection against fire, a home safe is resistant to theft because of its weight, size and method of locking.

Sends Thanks And Cooking Hint

This note was received from Miss Lena Rago, Junction City, a recent winner of the "Our Daily Bread" recipe contest:

"Many thanks for the Early American Trivet you sent me as prize for my recipe. A trivet is something I always use.

"Here is a hint I would like to pass on:

"To give a healthier golden brown look to home-made biscuits, add a teaspoon of sugar to the dry ingredients."

Hearty Sandwiches

Make hearty lunch bag sandwiches by spreading 5 slices of pumpernickel bread with a mixture of a 4 3/4 ounce can of liverwurst spread, 2 teaspoons horseradish, 6 tablespoons chopped apple and 1 teaspoon lemon juice.

Cover each with a slice of pumpernickel bread.

Place a charcoal tablet in the water that holds a fresh flower arrangement. This keeps the water pure and will eliminate odors.

If you have discovered the ease and convenience of a wig, you know how handy it can be whenever your hair looks less than its best.

You have to make sure your hair is super clean when wearing a wig as

Add Fragrance To Clothes

Add a few drops of cologne to the water you use to sprinkle clothes. It gives a freshly ironed garment a delightful fragrance.

Dampen Cover

When putting on a new ironing board cover, wet the new material. Stretch it firmly over the board and fasten securely. As it dries, it becomes somewhat smoother and even tighter.

GRASSLAND FARMING

Bob Schrader, who lives south of Eskridge, doesn't have many callers. His ranch is located in a grassland stretch of the Flint Hills. Schrader owns 600 acres and will look after grassland for several owners when cattle are brought in this spring. With 90 cows and a feed grain operation Schrader said he had several things that needed done but income tax preparation was keeping him in the house.

Rabies No Serious Problem In Kansas

There have been 32 cases of rabid animals in Kansas this year.

"But we don't feel there is an outbreak or an epidemic. These cases are dispersed throughout a general area. As of April 10, our total was 32, the same total that was reached at this time last year," Harry Anthony, director of the Veterinary Diagnostic Laboratory at Kansas State University, said.

Anthony pointed out that the laboratory staff "constantly is watching the appearance of rabies in Kansas, and if need be, we'll take the appropriate procedures to control an outbreak or an epidemic."

As has been the case in recent years, most rabid cases are skunks.

"Therefore, we suggest that people use some caution if they see a skunk out in the daylight hours. It's abnormal behavior for a skunk to be out in the daytime. They are night animals. One might suspect that any skunk seen during daylight hours could possibly have rabies," Anthony stated.

He says Kansas residents "should be sure that farm dogs and cats are vaccinated against rabies. I'm not trying to sell vaccine. I'm just concerned about the health of the families. If the unvaccinated farm dog is exposed to a rabid skunk, they (dogs) should be isolated for six months or euthanized for the safety

In his annual report of laboratory confirmed rabies cases for 1971, there were 114 confirmed cases. In only 11 instances was there human exposure to the rabid animal.

Of the 114 confirmed cases, 102 were skunks, five were cats, four cattle, two bats, and one, a coyote. The Veterinary Diagnostic Laboratory staff conducted 1954 rabies examinations last year.

Leading counties in the state in laboratory confirmed cases of rabies for 1971: Sedgwick, 13; Barton, 12; Gove, 8; Butler and Kingman, 7 each; and McPherson and Ness, 6 each.

Grain Cooperatives Ask For 500,000 Farm Signatures

An effort to secure 500,000 signatures from farmers in an appeal to the President for improved and stabilized farm income was announced Tuesday by three midwestern regional grain co-operatives.

Releasing the statement in Hutchinson was Far-Mar-Co., which serves about 2,000 elevators in six midwestern states. The other co-ops are the Farmers Union Grain Terminal Assn., St. Paul, and Producers Grain Cooperative, Amarillo, Tex.

"The majority of farmers to day are skirting outright financial disaster," the statement said. "In the past five years, the national farm real estate debt has risen 39 per cent. Meantime farm prices in the past 25 years have declined from a parity ratio of 108 per cent to an average of 70 per cent last year, seriously weakening the financial position of farmers."

The co-operatives hope to meet their goal in signatures to ask President Nixon for a two-step program for better farm income with temporary measures to bolster and stabilize grain prices, followed by a permanent program to end grain price fluctuation.

Farmers Capital Creates More Ag Business Jobs

It is increasingly evident that today's farmers are substituting capital for labor to greater extent than ever, and the upward trend shows no signs of slackening. Technological advances and more efficient production practices are stimulating the shift.

The pattern of expenditures by farmers to produce crops and livestock has radically altered since 1955. The Dept. of Agriculture showed the extent of the changes in these estimates of how farmers spend their money, using a 1950 base of 100:

In 1970, for power and machinery, 130; fertilizer and lime, 353; other inputs, 170; land, 107; and labor, 46.

As an example, the $409 million price for 263,000 tractors in 1955 may be compared with the $854 million price for 131,000 units in 1969.

The department's statistical reporting service set out in February on a new farm expenditure survey. During the early part of this year 10,000 farmers in 396 counties in the U.S. will be interviewed.

From this will come fresh figures on farmers' purchasing power and relative well-being in the economy.

Although employment in farming continued to decline through the 1960s and has not yet stopped, enrollment in the 70 colleges of agriculture in the National Assn. of State Universities and Land Grant Colleges has increased 68 per cent since 1963.

Job opportunities in agriculture are rising rapidly. Technology on the farm and concern with its products has created a need for many trained in the broad field of agriculture.

Companies that sell equipment, plant food, animal feed, supplements, pesticides and all other farm and ranch inputs need persons trained in agriculture.

Companies that buy pork, beef, poultry, grain, hay, vegetables, fruit, timber and other farm products are always in the market for those trained in agriculture. Similarly, the processors of farm products into consumer goods are on the lookout for this type of personnel.

Most popular fields of study include agricultural economics, agronomy, forestry, animal science, plant science, agricultural education and courses that deal with outdoor recreation and ecology.

At Kansas State University, enrollment in the college of agriculture is 1,454 undergraduates compared to 1,278 a year ago.

Agricultural curriculums include greater emphasis today on modern business and economics and business management. There is less emphasis on agricultural production since nearly half of today's agricultural graduates are going into agribusiness.

The job outlook for 1972 agricultural graduates is expected to be improved over that of last year. Current reports show hirings up, with starting salaries up 3 to 5 per cent over those of 1971. Starting salaries for K-State ag graduates average $8,000 annually.

The percentage of ag graduates going back to the farm remains about steady with the passing years in Kansas, running between 17 and 18 per cent annually. Some of these graduates go home to become partners in a family farming enterprise, others become ranch or farm managers.

April 25, 1972

One of the greatest boosters in promoting careers in agriculture in Kansas is Dean Carroll V. Hess of the college of agriculture at Kansas State University. He points to a recent poll showing two-thirds of 85,000 high school students questioned saying they would prefer to live in a rural area or small town. They can reach these goals, he says, through checking with opportunities related to agriculture. He has prepared a brochure, "Help Restore a Quality Environment," which relates to these opportunities. The brochure may be obtained by writing him at KSU.

Heart-Attack Victims Often Wait Too Long To Ask For Help

Half of the 400,000 Americans who die sudden deaths from heart attacks each year die because they put off asking for medical help, a cardiologist says.

Dr. Walter S. Graf, clinical professor of medicine at both California's Loma Linda University and the University of Southern California schools of medicine, said the time lag between the onset of heart attack symptoms and asking for help is vital because sudden deaths don't happen from the heart muscle's being irreparably damaged or destroyed.

"They happen because of the ineffectual, out-of-rhythm beating that keeps the heart from pumping blood efficiently," Graf said in an interview. "Under care this can be prevented or corrected."

According to Graf, sudden deaths from heart attacks is the "greatest single medical problem in the United States in terms of the number of lives that could be saved." Men who survive such attacks have a 50-50 chance of living another 10 years at least. Women who survive have an even better chance.

In view of this, why do people delay getting help? he asked.

"The biggest reason is reluctance to admit, even to themselves, that they are having a heart attack," Graf said.

"A lot of time is lost between first suspicion and actual admission that a heart attack may be occurring, and then more time is wasted making up the mind to telephone the doctor or call an ambulance," he said.

The truth of this is shown by the fact that most heart attacks happen at home, and most of them while patients are in bed.

"It is also shown by the fact that denial time — the period between first symptoms and calling for help — three times longer on the weekend than during the week," Graf said.

"The weekend is when patients are most reluctant to bother the doctor with what they hope may be a false alarm."

According to the cardiologist, the least denial time is at night, when thoughts commonly turn to unpleasant alternatives, and when someone else such as the wife, is present to urge that the vital

Grass & Grain

April 25, 1972

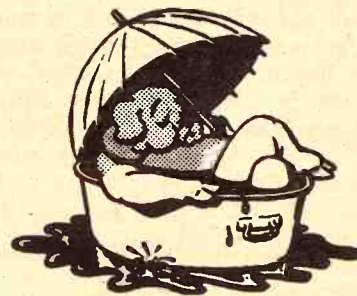

telephone call be made.

The symptoms that should not be denied are a severe, crushing pain in the middle of the chest, the pains that may, or may not, radiate out to the arms, and profuse sweating and shortness of breath. These latter two are also sometimes absent.

"But if it feels like someone is standing on your chest, or if it lasts more than five minutes, put in the call," Graf said.

"Every adult should have a plan thought out what to do in case this happens to him. That in itself would save thousands of lives. The thing to do, of course, is telephone the family doctor or call for an ambulance, or even dial 0 on the phone."

What ham did for Virginia, Old Crow did for Bourbon.

Even before Virginia's George Washington became President, Virginia was famous for the good taste of her country hams. Not long after, the good taste of Old Crow made Bourbon famous.

Before 1835, Bourbon was made every which way. That year, Dr. James Crow took it out of the hit-or-miss league and created the process that gave Bourbon its mellow taste — and good name: Old Crow.

Corn Exports & Beef Prices In Direct Relation

Rod Turnbull
Kansas City Board of Trade

A topic of national interest in recent weeks in the United States has been high beef prices.

Although it may be of no solace to the American housewife, the fact is beef prices are up all over the world when compared to recent times. The higher prices are not the result of a major cut back in production, drought, floods or other disasters. The explanation is demand. In most places of the world, particularly in the developed countries, when people can afford to spend more money for food, they prefer to put more of the animal proteins — meat, milk and eggs — on their plates. And they especially like beef.

A bright spot in the farm export picture this year is corn. Corn exports in the marketing year that began last October 1, now total 330,440,000 bushels compared with 266,078,000 at the same time a year ago.

To a degree, there is a direct relation between the high beef prices around the world and America's good corn export business. Higher prices bring greater production. Feed is required to get more livestock production.

Missed A guess

Early last year at harvest time, the U.S. Department of Agriculture in its regular feed situation reports commented on the huge American crops and the fact that other countries were having good harvests too. Consequently, the USDA doubted if feed grain exports would equal those of the year ending September 1971. The USDA at that time predicted domestic utilization of feed grains might show a moderate increase in the 1971-72 fiscal year.

In its most recent situation reports, the USDA has revised utilization figures upward. Domestic use of feed grain may now end up to 8 to 12 million tons over the 154 million tons estimated last fall, and total exports may equal the 21 million tons shipped last year.

Corn exports for the year ending September 30, now are estimated at 600 million bushels. Some analysts in the trade are suggesting the 600 million figure may be exceeded.

The whole feed grain export picture would look much better if grain sorghum sales overseas were rising equal to those on corn, but the opposite is the case. Grain sorghum (milo) exports to date in this marketing year total 47,360,000 bushels, while a year ago at the same time the figure was 103,109,000 bushels.

Matter of price

A major reason for the lagging milo exports, so it is said by some grain men at the Kansas City Board of Trade, is price. Relatively speaking, milo has been priced higher than corn and the reason is, to a large extent, the big cattle feedlots in the milo area. The cattle feeders can afford to pay more for milo which is close to the feeding area, than to import corn for the Corn Belt.

Principal reasons mentioned now by the USDA and the trade for a more favorable feed export trade than was anticipated early last fall include recent sales to Russia, less favorable prospects in Argentina, and a strong demand for feed in Eastern Europe.

Not everything is bright. Western Europe did have record feed grain crops last year, and as a result import requirements are less.

For many years, Argentina exported more beef than any other country in the world. The USDA says, now it has dropped to 2nd place and the lead has been taken by Australia. Speaking recently in Minnesota, Clarence D. Palmby, assistant Secretary of Agriculture, said Australia this year will produce 2.55 billion pounds of beef, about one-tenth of total U.S. production. Australia will export more than half of its production, a good part of it to the United States, but it also has major markets in Japan, the United Kingdom and the Soviet Union.

Beef prices in Australia are at near record levels. Thus a situation is presented in which a country with record production is getting near record prices on the world market. This is an obvious indication of strong world demand.

New Zealand has been increasing its beef output the last several years and most of it goes for export. Here again, even though prices are high, exports are expected to set a new record this year. Prices paid to exporters in January were 32 percent above the 1969 average, Palmby related.

Spur exports

Argentina, which is among the countries with the highest per capita beef and veal consumption in the world, is trying to stimulate exports this year by banning domestic retail beef sales every other week. This is a policy designed to leave more beef available for export.

While prices on live cattle to the rancher in Argentina are below those in the United States, they have more than doubled since mid-1970.

Prices are strong too, Palmby said, in Mexico and Central America and in Ireland. Fat cattle prices in Great Britain are averaging about 30 percent higher than a year ago.

To be sure, not all U.S. exported corn goes to cattle. Poultry and hog also require major portions. But a strong beef market is indicative of strength in the entire livestock complex, and it is a good omen for an exporting country such as the United States which has ample supplies of all feedstuffs for sale.

Grain Market Lab May Get Staff Yet

The federal Grain Marketing Research Laboratory in Manhattan, N.Y., may receive a $2 million building to house its staff yet.

The research facility capacity is 47 people including 47 professionals. At present it is staffed with 35 people and 12 professionals. Sen. Robert Dole's office said it "should be okay" since the partial funding for staff and equipment has been over one year since the building was completed and no major portions of the market are in the entire country such as feedstuffs for every other week designed to leave for export. Prices on live cattle in Argentina are doubled since the United States are strong too. Mexico and Central America are averaging higher than a year ago. Poultry and major portions of the market is in the entire country such as feedstuffs for

of the bill for $825,000 is approved by Congress it still faces another test. The USDA must make an exception in personnel limits and allow the Grain Marketing Research Laboratory a chance to fill its vacancies.

In the Senate appropriations subcommittee, Sen. Dole reminded the Department of Agriculture and Congress that the building now needs full funding in order to offset the USDA estimates that "the deficits from research in grain handling, storing, drying, and transporting and systematic marketing would be more than $200 million for the grain farmers of this nation." Dole said in his testimony that the USDA figure is "many times the amount needed for staffing this facility and would more than offset the cost expended with improved income for our farmers."

Pointing to the fact that the building, if not used by the marketing research staff will be taken over by another group, was Jerry Rees, executive vice-president of the National Association of Wheat growers. He said that if the research center is not funded in the 1973 budget, non-related activities will slowly take over sections of the building, thus limiting future research efforts. In fact, this has already happened to some extent as one section of the building is to be remodeled for a new group at a cost of $100,000. "I would agree that it would be better to use the building than to let it sit and deteriorate. But the need for funds provided for the building and equipment still exists and I am hopeful a solution can be found."

Indeed, the Hard Winter Wheat Laboratory has indicated it will move to the Grain Marketing Research Center from the K-State campus by September. Cliff Watson, acting director of the Marketing Research Center, said that bids will go out in June for the remodeling of the building.

The new group will bring about three of four professionals, so the capacity of the center will be decreased by at least that amount. The Hard Winter Wheat Laboratory is not totally unrelated to the concept of the Research Center, Watson said, but just a different aspect. "They will study new varieties of wheat, while we are concerned with marketing."

The subcommittee chaired by Sen. Gale McGee, D-Wyoming, was told that the additional $1,765,000 is "essential that this new facility be staffed in line with the justification for the establishment of the Grain average wool market price was 19.4 cents per pound, the lowest since 1938.

Marketing Research Center. Sen. Dole, too, stressed the importance to the farmers of funding and staffing the research center up from its present level of less-than-25-per-cent of its needs.

The 1971 payment rate formula for wool sold will be 271.1 per cent multiplied by the price a grower received. The percentage is the multiplier required to make up the difference between the national average of 19.4 cents and the incentive level of 72 cents per pound.

Reflecting fewer sheep and lambs, wool production has declined steadily. Last year was the smallest since the Ag department began keeping wool records in 1873.

Officials say consumers' preference for beef and pork, competition from man-made fibers, imports and shifts by producers into other livestock areas have been factors behind the decline.

Lack Of Sunspots Lead To Drought To 1976?

Is the G&G area in for a dry spell? A long one?

There have been such predictions for the Midwest, and the head of a federal weather research group says he agrees with such forecasts.

Dr. Walter O. Roberts, head of the National Center for Atmospheric Research, says that he sees the possibility of one of the worst droughts of the 20th century, to begin this spring and extend through the spring of 1976.

Roberts says he has noticed that the droughts of the 1930s and 1950s have coincided with a low point of sunspot activity although there is no scientific explanation of any connection between the two.

Scientists who have studied drought records back to the 1820s have also noticed the correlation between the droughts and the low solar activity,

Westerly winds appear to have a tendency to become stronger in the affected latitudes during the periods of low solar activity and they may be to blame for keeping moisture from reaching the Great Plains, Roberts says.

Continue Decline In Milk Output

Kansas milk production during March totaled 144 million pounds, 2 per cent below the same month last year, according to the Kansas Crop and Livestock Reporting Service.

Milk cow numbers were below a year earlier, but milk production per cow was slightly higher.

Production during the first three months of this year was 1 per cent below the same period a year earlier, despite one more day in February.

Milk production per cow in March averaged 755 pounds, 5 pounds more than in March 1971. Milk cows on farms during March totaled 191,000, compared with 196,000 in March 1971.

U.S. milk production during March is estimated at 10,440 million pounds, up 2 per cent from a year ago.

Production during the first quarter of this year is 2.2 percent above the same period a year earlier.

March output provided 1.61 pounds of milk per person daily for all uses, compared with 1.59 pounds last year, and 1.55 pounds in February 1972.

Milk production per cow was 852 pounds 3 percent more than last year, and 12 percent more than the February 1972 rate. The March rate per cow was at a record high in 30 of the 33 States with monthly estimates.

Milk cows on farms during March totaled 12,254,000, down 1 percent from the same month last year.

Don't Control Food Price, USDA Urges Price Commission

The Agriculture Department has urged the Price Commission not to impose stricter controls on food prices, and said the worst of this year's food price increases are over.

Asst. Sec. Richard E. Lyng told the commission the department expects food prices to go up a total of about 4 per cent this year. He said more than 50 per cent of that increase already has showed up on grocery shelves. Lyng testified at the commission's hearing on food prices.

He predicted some prices, especially those of meat, will decline, but said prices of eggs and broiler chickens are too low and should come up substantially.

Over-all, Lyng said, farmers still need to make more money. "For most items we think there is a need for increased income," he said. "We think it is very important that we have prosperous agriculture if we are to continue to have this food supply."

Lyng said the Agriculture Department opposes extending price controls to raw farm products because to do so would risk "chaotic disruptions in the production of essential food supplies," and because farmers are caught in what he described as a squeeze between rising costs and relatively stable prices.

Stockmen Defend DES Use

A spokesman for the Kansas Livestock Assn. has defended use of the controversial cattle growth stimulant, DES, asserting it is harmless to consumers and saves them money in a time of soaring meat prices.

Virgil Huseman, director of cattle feeder services for the KLA, said most of the major feedlot operators and many of the small feedlot owners in Kansas, plus a number of individual farmers with livestock on feed, use rations containing diethylstilbestrol.

"We're convinced there is no harm for consumers in eating beef from cattle fed on DES," Huseman said. But he acknowledged there is concern among cattle feeders in the state over the growing controversy about possible health hazards from the use of feeds containing DES.

That controversy was rekindled when two Food and Drug Administration scientists urged the FDA Commissioner, Dr. Charles C. Edwards, to consider a total ban on use of livestock feeds containing DES.

The scientists questioned the adequacy of methods used by the Dept. of Agriculture for detecting DES residue in slaughtered animals. The present method consists principally of testing the liver of the animals.

Huseman declared the USDA has never been able to find DES residue in the meat of cattle fed on DES feeds, and Dept. of Agriculture laboratories in this area have never found any residue of DES in Kansas grown animals even in the livers of livestock which were tested.

Recently the federal government extended the time that animals must be withdrawn from feeds containing DES before they can be slaughtered. Formerly, cattle had to be withdrawn from DES feeds at least 48 hours before slaughter, and that period now has been lengthened to seven days.

Separate Pens

Huseman said Kansas cattlemen have gone out of their way to comply with the new seven-day DES withdrawal period. Many use separate pens for isolating cattle during the seven-day "clean-up" period; some use special feed bunkers; and others use special trucks to distribute non-DES feeds to cattle during the seven-day withdrawal period.

The theory behind removing cattle from feed containing DES is that the animals will completely excrete any residue from the growth stimulant during that period.

But a scientist for the National Cancer Institute has disputed that contention. Dr. Nathan Mantel has warned the Food and Drug Administration that cattle which ingest DES might retain minute amounts of it for at least 10 days.

Withdrawal Period

The FDA had been operating on the premise that a five-day withdrawal period was sufficient.

Huseman said that even to get what he called a therapeutic dose of DES, the amount a physician might prescribe, a consumer would have to eat between 200 pounds and 700 pounds of liver from cattle fed on DES feeds.

The KLA feeder representative also said the beef industry has estimated that a discontinuation of DES feeds for stimulating cattle weight gains would cost an average American family of four persons $50 per year.

Decrease in Efficiency

Huseman said cattlemen in Kansas "are opposed to discontinuation of DES feeds. It will decrease the efficiency of feeds in adding weight to cattle, and just increase the cost of beef to consumers."

"But if enough consumers get scared of it, the DES ration will be discontinued. In the final analysis they're the ones who will make the decision."

Public Not Understanding Future Power Problems

The Federal Power Commission has published a national power survey and predicted that the price of electric power will more than double by the year 1990.

Warning that "contradictory public attitudes" exist, the agency singled out environmentalism among several causes of actual or threatened power shortages. It cautioned that the public was underestimating the importance of maintaining adequate power supplies.

The commission forecast that by the end of 1990 the United States will need generating capacity of 1,260,000 megawatts, as against capacity of 340,000 megawatts at the end of 1970. A megawatt is one million watts.

To build the facilities to generate and deliver the additional power, the industry will have to spend between $400 billion and $500 billion between 1970 and 1990, the survey estimated. Because 60 percent of these funds will have to be raised in the capital markets, the commission said it was important to prevent further deterioration of the financial performance of utility companies.

The report noted that 250 investor-owned utilities account for 77 percent of generating capacity. Federally owned systems, including the Tennessee Valley Authority, account for 11.5 percent. Other public systems produce 10.5 percent and small rural co-operatives, most of which are engaged solely in the distribution of power, account for less than 2 percent.

The commission's own report on "The 1970 Power Survey," which was set in motion in the middle 1960s in conjunction with the utility industry and the states, disclosed no new policy directions. Nor did the chairman, John N. Nassikas, who presented the report at a news conference.

Nassikas expressed opposition to the proposal, embraced by some economists, that the electricity rate structure be inverted so that the price of power goes up with increasing consumption, instead of down, as at present. Calling such pricing "retrogressive," Nassikas said:

As for publishing a list of essential and nonessential power uses with a view of curbing consumption in the latter category, Nassikas was determinedly noncommittal. He left the sharp impression that he was really opposed to such an exercise. He said:

"I do not believe that an electric utility short of power — or one that knows it will be — should advertise for more services."

He said the commission could issue a policy statement along that line. But the chairman refused to express, under close questioning, his view of suggestions that promotional advertising expenses by disallowed as an expense when the regulatory agency reviews power prices.

There was a legal issue involved, Nassikas said, and therefore he would say nothing "until I have an evidentiary record."

Aussies Expect To Fill Meat Quota This Year

The chairman of the Australian Meat Board, Col. M. H. McArthur, says there is every reason to expect that country to fill its allocation of beef and mutton on the U.S. market.

Australia is the major supplying country of imported meat in the U.S. McArthur said the main reasons resulting in the shipment of 12,500 tons less than its quota last year were union strikes in ports on both coasts of the U.S. and trading uncertainties created by indecision on exchange rates during the last half of 1971.

"Australia's cattle numbers increased 10 percent last year and there is every indication that a similar increase will be recorded at the next census, taken at the end of March," he said.

"The trends in livestock numbers, seasonal conditions and other factors suggest that more than enough beef and mutton will be produced to fill Australia's recently announced U.S. allocation as well as to maintain supplies to other export markets and to the domestic market," McArthur said.

Australia's allocation of beef and

Grass & Grain

April 25, 1972

mutton for shipment to the U.S. 1972 totals 268,000 tons, 18,000 tons more than the allocation in 1971.

"It is clear," McArthur said, "That Australia's beef and mutton production will be more than adequate to cover our entitlement to the U.S., with a considerable volume available for export to our major existing market destinations and permit the exploration and development of other markets."

'No Farm Price Ceilings Without Floor Limit Too'

If there are ceilings on food and farm prices "we must insist on price floors to protect us from the downswing," Secretary of Agriculture Earl L. Butz says.

Butz, opposed to controls, said: "If you are going to impose price ceilings on products that fluctuate as violently as farm prices do and as food prices do, then I think you've got to ask for guaranteed floors under them to protect us from the downswing."

Furthermore, Butz said, "If you try to impose price ceilings on a perishable product that everybody must buy, which is true of food, if you impose price ceilings below the competitive level, then the Siamese twin of that is rationing."

"With rationing, with the American philosophy in resistance to rationing, comes black market, comes favoritism, comes special deals, comes shortages in the meat counter."

Deere Steps Up Production Line

Deere & Co. says it has increased its production schedules for the fiscal year ending Oct. 31 and now are about 25 per cent higher than in 1971.

Last year production was lower than either wholesale or retail sales with resulting lower inventories at both company and dealer levels by the end of the year. The company plans to schedule 1972 production at a rate approximately that of retail sales.

In a 3 month report to stockholders Feb. 22 the company said production schedules in dollar volume were up about 15 per cent.

Even Polluted Air In City Short Of Dust Storm Level

Great Plains residents who remember the duststorms of the 1930s may consider that living in polluted urban air is to be preferred to existence under a dust cloud. Others probably haven't given it a thought.

Two researchers in agronomy and members of the United States Department of Agriculture at Kansas State University, Manhattan, — Lawrence Hagen and Neil P. Woodruff — decided it was time to do a little scientific probing, especially now that the Great Plains states are adopting air-pollution regulations.

Air pollution generally is considered an urban problem, but in the Great Plains dust suspended by wind erosion also is a source of particulates that can affect the health, safety, and economic well being of the inhabitants.

Aware that little information is available on duststorms, Hagen and Woodruff collected and analyzed data on dust concentrations and weather on dusty days during the 1950s — a decade with rather high incidence of drouth and duststorms — at 37 sites in 10 Great Plains states: Montana, North Dakota, South Dakota, Wyoming, Nebraska, Colorado, Kansas, Oklahoma, New Mexico, and Texas.

They found that duststorms still frequented the plains in the 1950s — though not to the extent of the 1930s, thanks to better agricultural practices. They found that the average annual number of days with dust ranged from none at Rapid City, S.

D., and Glasgow, Mont. (areas with little cultivated land) to 47.5 at Lubbock, Tex. (in one of the driest sections). They found that the median annual number of dusty hours was 45, though at 20 per cent of the stations dusty hours exceeded 150 annually.

Duststorms at the 37 locations lasted an average of only 6.6 hours, but the particles in the duststorms were coarser and occurred in higher concentrations than they do in polluted urban air. During the duststorms the median hourly dust concentration was 4.85 milligrams per cubic meter. Dust concentrations in the driest sections (in the Southern Great Plains) were 10 to 15 milligrams per cubic meter. Those are large concentrations, compared with the 1 milligram per cubic meter considered severe in urban air-pollution episodes.

During duststorms relative humidity was usually low, rarely exceeding 70 per cent, and visibilities of 3 miles or less were reported for 33 per cent of the dusty hours. Windspeed averaged 20 to 30 miles an hour; maximum windspeeds ranged from 40 to 78 miles an hour. Wind direction generally was southerly.

Recordings for the four Kansas sites, Goodland, Dodge City, Topeka, and Wichita, were, respectively 423, 307, 71 and 252 for maximum annual number of dusty hours; 39, 23, 0, and 4 for minimum annual number of dusty hours; and 197, 149, 33, and 114 for average annual number of dusty hours.

Hagen and Woodruff are continuing their analyses and are now examining the 1960s, a decade of relatively low incidence of drouth. Preliminary results show that even in the relatively "good" years, substantial quantities of dust enter the atmosphere.

All facts considered, they recommend that air-pollution laws in the Great Plains specify particle-size distribution (in various sections of the laws) as well as limits of particulate concentration.

Marijuana

Most of the marijuana in Kansas is of the fiber type and is low in potency and hallucinogens, according to Richard Latta, Kansas State University graduate student in agronomy.

Latta has been testing plants from various locations in Riley County to find the amount of hallucinogens in Kansas marijuana.

This study was conducted to determine the potency of marijuana grown in Kansas and whether potency is due to environmental inputs and/or variability," Latta said.

He said chemical conversions take place within the plant to produce tetrahydrocannabinol (THC) which is one of the main hallucinogens.

Latta said there are two types of marijuana — the drug type and the fiber type. Many of the Kansas plants contained 0.1-0.5 per cent of the hallucinogens while some of the drug type plants in Thailand contain as much as 5 per cent of the same hallucinogens.

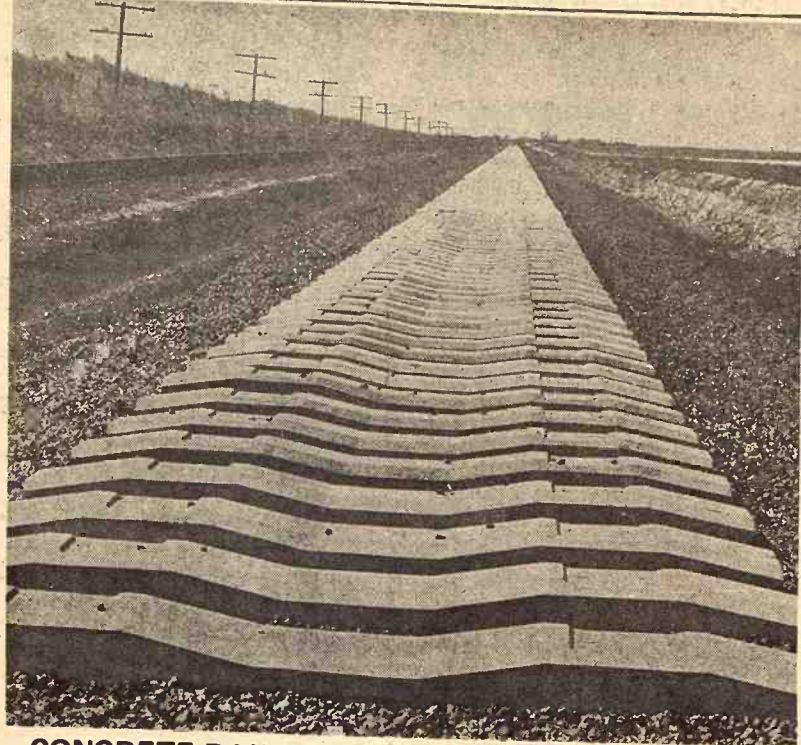

"Cannabinol content in leaves is highest in mid-March, is at its highest in early June and then decreases slightly in late September when plants approach physiological maturity," Latta said.

"Midwestern marijuana has undoubtedly descended from varieties cultivated for fiber, and potency has apparently remained unchanged by natural selection."

Latta's research was conducted as part of a Kansas Agricultural Experiment Station study on control of marijuana, the only study of its kind in the United States.

CONCRETE RAILROAD TIES

A two mile test track on Santa Fe Railway about 10 miles south of Cassoday, in Chase county, is being built with concrete ties.

The project is a joint venture by the US Department of Transportation and Santa Fe which began in 1970 and is designed to test various track structures under normal mainline operating conditions.

Wool Output Just Doesn't Amount To Anything

Kansas' 1971 wool production was the second smallest in more than 20 years, the Kansas Crop and Livestock Reporting Service says.

The KCLRS reported total production of 2,715,000 pounds, four percent above the 1970 low mark, but otherwise the smallest quantity in the last two decades. Ranchers sheared 310,000 sheep and lambs in 1971, three per cent fewer than 1970 and the smallest number since 1925.

Weight per fleece averaged 8.8 pounds, compared with 8.1 a year earlier and the heaviest in records dating back more than 30 years. Wool prices averaged 14 cents per pound for the 1971 clip, 17 cents less than a year earlier.

Total value of the 1971 state wool production was $380,000, less than half of the $808,000 value for the 1970 clip and the lowest since 1932.

Nationally, the U.S. produced 172 million pounds of shorn and pulled wool in 1971, down three per cent from 1970. Shorn wool production of 159 million pounds declined 2 per cent from a year earlier. Pulled wool production totaled 12.8 million pounds, 16 per cent below 1970. A total of 18.9 million animals were shorn, a one per cent decrease

Price To $5 For Duck Stamp

The cost of duck hunting is going up!

Assistant Secretary of the Interior Nathaniel Reed announced the cost of the Migratory Bird Hunting Stamp, generally known as the "duck stamp" will be $5 for the 1972-73 waterfowl hunting season. This is an increase of $2.

All proceeds from sale of duck stamps go into a fund set aside for the acquisition of wetlands and refuges for migratory birds. The costs of those lands have risen dramatically over the last few years.

"Without waterfowl habitat, we will have no waterfowl," Secretary Reed said "and without more money we cannot preserve sufficient habitat. It's as simple as that."

The duck stamp is required for everyone who hunts migratory waterfowl and has reached his 16th birthday. State hunting licenses are also required for the gunners.

The increase in duck stamp prices is the first since 1959, when the cost went from $2 to $3. The stamp was first put into effect in 1934, at $1, and the price was raised to $2 in 1949. Funds from the sales always have gone into buying waterfowl habitat. Congress authorized a price increase last December.

Beef Industry Has Ad Campaign With No Apologies

There will be no apologies for beef prices and a $100,000 advertising campaign is being planned to tell the urban housewife she's getting a good deal when she buys beef.

John Huston, a member of the Beef Industry Council, told Kansas cattle feeders to tell the housewife beef is good and encourage her to use more of it.

Besides, Huston said, the urban housewife doesn't understand things like supply and demand and what they have to do with price.

You'll only confuse her trying to explain," he said.

Huston outlined the BIC's campaign to convince the American housewife of beef's virtues at a meeting of the Cattle Feeders council of the Kansas Livestock association.

The council, part of the National Meat and Livestock board, an industry-supported organization headquartered in Chicago, will use women's magazines for a Summer advertising campaign to promote beef consumption.

The campaign, while national in some respects, will be focused on 11 Northeastern states with the targets the housewife between ages of 25 and 50.

More of the "targets" live in the selected states — 26 percent of the US population — than any other section of the country, Huston explained, and beef consumption runs about 6 billion pounds annually.

"Only 11 percent of this beef is produced in those 11 states," he said. "So you can see where your Kansas beef is going."

Theme of the campaign is "Nothing Beats Beef". "And nothing does," Huston said, "for flavor, convenience or nutrition."

"Stay on the offensive. Talk about the quality of beef, the good eating. We drive the Cadillac of meats. There's nothing like it."

"But we must put our marketing program where the people are. And we must get the cooperation of the distribution people, the retail store. Seventy-two percent of our product is sold through stores. A USDA study found only 28 percent is sold through food services such as restaurants and institutions."

Huston said $100,000 would be spent on the Summer campaign which will kickoff with Father's Day.

"Now why pick Father's Day. Well, one-day promotions are effective. For instance more bar candy is sold on Halloween than any other single day."

"And we know what Thanksgiving has done for the turkey. And we know about the Easter ham."

"So let's have beef on Father's Day, start a new tradition."

"Beef makes the housewife a hero. She puts a properly prepared piece of beef before the family or guests and she's a hero. The old man is happy and he doesn't bitch about what she paid for it."

"Now she may know deep inside that beef is good for her family, the best protein source she can find. But she really doesn't think about or buy beef for that reason. So we don't emphasize nutrition."

The Beef Industry council is supported by producer contributions and other industry contributions. Discussion following Huston's talk emphasized need for increased spending for promotion of the product.

Here Instead Topeka, Theis Sold By Great Bend

— Lunch Served
The Great Bend Economic Development Council has offered the Thies Meat Packing plant of Topeka an industrial bond issue that has been refused twice by Topeka. The Great Bend officials proposed that the firm close its recently purchased Ohse plant in Topeka and move it to Great Bend. The council agreed to provide the firm with a letter of intent that the city would issue a maximum of $2 million in industrial revenue bonds to relocate the plant in Great Bend. The council would use an industrial bond issue designed for the expansion of the Thies Great Bend plant. The bonds were never used. Thies has owned Ohse since Dec. 1968 and has been turned down twice to get an industrial bond issue from the Topeka City Council. Gene Cole, Great Bend economic development director, said moving the Ohse plant to Great Bend and joining it with the existing Thies facility would mean 80 more jobs and some $590,000 more in annual payroll. J.M. Thies, Thies, president, said further study on the offer is necessary.

Wheat Payments On Fewer Acres, Higher Yields

The Nixon administration has ordered a cutback of more than 5 per cent in the national domestic wheat acreage allotment upon which government payments to growers are based. The Agriculture Dept. said the domestic wheat allotment for the 1973 crop will be 18.7 million acres from 1972.

However, officials also announced an increase in the national average wheat yield per acre, which they said offsets any reduction in total government payments for 1973.

The allotment is used to determine how much wheat a farmer can produce for the U.S. domestic market and be eligible for direct subsidy payments.

Those payments make up the difference between an average cash market price and the full parity price, which is based on farm production costs.

The allotment is not a lid on how much wheat growers can raise. This year, for example, farmers plan to have about 55.4 million acres for harvest.

After agreeing to take a share of his land from wheat production, the farmer can plant as much as he chooses. The Subsidy payments, however, are based on the amount of wheat needed to fill domestic needs.

The 1973 national average wheat yield, used in the formula, will be 31 bushels per acre compared with 29.8 for this year's crop, the department said.

Under law, certificate payments must be made on minimum of 535 million bushels of wheat annually.

Allowing for some growers not participating in the 1973 program, the 187.7 million acre allotment will be enough to produce that amount.

"Wheat certificates will be paid nationally on the same number of bushels of wheat as last year," the announcement said.

A spokesman conceded, however, that if an individual wheat farmer's average yield does not increase by 1.2 bushels per acre — the difference between the 1972 and 1973 national average — he will get less subsidy money because of the acreage cut.

When applied properly, the herbicide 2, 4-D is not toxic to man, domestic animals, game or fish, the Midwest Research Institute (MRI) at Kansas City says.

MRI, a nonprofit corporation, had been contracted by the Environmental Protection Agency to study the herbicide 2, 4-dichlorophenoxy (acetic acid), which is especially used for sagebrush control.

Dr. Alvin Hylton, project leader, said soil erosion usually is not increased by spraying sagebrush with 2, 4-D and there are indications the control of sagebrush on drainage areas may increase water flow from those sites.

In addition, he said, while controlling sagebrush, 2, 4-D does not affect grasses; "thus grass production will increase after sagebrush competition is eliminated and more moisture is available."

George Savage, senior microbiologist, said, "The use of 2, 4-D does not appear to present a hazard as a water pollutant either."

"The herbicide does not persist in the soil. Therefore there is little opportunity for 2, 4-D to be washed into the few streams and bodies of water in the sagebrush areas. Results of pesticide monitoring programs show that 2,4-D in water samples from western states does not constitute a serious health hazard."

Canada Plants More Wheat

Canadian farmers plan to plant 21.3 million acres of wheat this year, up 11 percent from the 19.2 million acres planted last year, according to a March 15 survey by Statistics Canada.

This year's intended wheat acreage is up 71 percent from 1970, the year the Canadian government paid farmers about $80 million to cut back on wheat output because of bulging surpluses.

Ottawa officials say they aren't very concerned about the upswing in wheat acreage because exports of the commodity have been rising sharply, and are expected to exceed 500 million bushels in the crop year ending July 31, up from 435 million bushels in the 1971 crop year and 309 million in the 1970 year.

The survey also shows that farmers plan to seed 7.9 million acres of oats, down 2.5 percent from last year; barley, 13.5 million acres, off 11 percent; rapeseed 3.4 million acres, off 37 percent; flaxseed 1.6 million acres, off 22 percent, and rye 917,000 acres, down 16 percent.

Cash Day Of Sa

parently mean the state will be able to meet the legislative appropriations of $998 million for the 1973 fiscal year and on the basis of present collections there will be a balance of $1,485,000 in March 1973, when tax collections are at the year's lowest point.

It was feared at the session's close that unless the 1973 — legislature immediately imposed new taxes the state would be operating in the red next March, and perhaps have to delay paying some of its bills or borrow from other state funds.

The research department said retail sales tax receipts going into the general fund were $2,100,000 over estimates through March, for $116,030,000 for the first three-quarters of the fiscal year.

Individual income tax receipts totalled $54,822,000, for a gain of $1,479,000 over estimates; corporate income taxes were $13,094,000, up $883,000, and taxes on financial institutions amounted to $1,126,000, up $129,000, for a total gain of $2,491,000 in this category.

The state insurance department also expects to collect an additional $1 million from premium taxes, it was reported.

The state's fiscal situation might be even more improved when final tabulations are made in the income tax payments. The Department of Revenue said through the first week of April it had processed more individual returns with remittances due than last year, and that there were fewer returns claiming refunds, and that the average refund has been lower than the same period a year ago.

Farm Crop Lid Failed To Cut Total Expenditure

The $55,000 payment-per-crop lid on government farm subsidies has failed to significantly cut the total expenditures for cotton, wheat and feed-grain programs last year.

A review of operations of 98 producers in six states, who collected nearly $25 million in 1970 and would have been eligible for about $22.5 million in 1971 without the payment limit, showed a small savings in payments, the General Accounting Office told Congress.

"Had the 98 producers each been considered as a single person, they would have received about $5.4 million in 1971 — a saving of $17.1 million," GAO said.

"Largely because of actions taken to reduce the impact of the limitation, savings in payments to these producers amounted to only about $356,000."

The impact of the limit was cut by leasing acreage allotments to spread payments to more people, having payments made to individual partners in a partnership instead of to the partnership as an entity, and forming new partnerships to qualify more persons for payments, GAO added.

The study involved Mississippi, Texas, California, Arizona, Washington and New Mexico, GAO said.

Last month, the Agriculture Department, in a report ordered by the Senate, said the limit brought a nationwide net saving of $2.18 million from 1970 when there was no restriction on payments. From 1966 to 1970, the department paid between $2.5 billion and $3.3 billion annually to growers under the commodity price-support programs.

Legislation setting the $55,000 limit was passed in 1970.

The Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service "needs to insure that payments subject to the limitation are valid, accurate and in compliance with applicable laws and regulations."

Aspirin Advertising Called Misleading In FTC Complaint

Painkillers are under fire by the Federal Trade Commission. The FTC accused the nation's top three manufacturers of painkillers of unfair and misleading advertising.

The proposed complaint challenges claims made by each of the manufacturers of the leading nonprescription analgesics that its products are superior to others.

Names in the proposed complaint were American Home Products Corp., maker of Anacin and Arthritis Pain Formula; Bristol Myers Co., manufacturer of Bufferin, Excedrin and Excedrin PM, and Sterling Drug Inc., makers of Bayer aspirin, Bayer Children's aspirin, Cope, Vanquish and Midol.

"The commission is not going to attempt to prove in this case that the claims are untrue," said Robert Pitofsky, director of the FTC's Bureau of Consumer Protection. Rather, he said, the commission is charging the advertisements for the products create the "misimpression here are significant therapeutic differences between these products."

The FTC action came just before the National Academy of Sciences reported to the Food and Drug Administration that it can judge effective only 12 per cent of a labeling claims of a representative group of leading nonprescription stomach antacids and pain relievers.

Among the difference cited in the FTC complaints are such items as whether Bufferin relieves pain faster than aspirin, that Anacin is more effective for pain relief than any other nonprescription internal analgesic or that Bayer aspirin is superior in terms of therapeutic effects to other aspirin.

The complaints allege further that there is a lack of reliable scientific evidence that some of the aspirin-based products relieve nervous tension as well as pain and thus enable users to cope with everyday stresses.

A statement issued by the Sterling Drug Co. said, "We are fully confident that the advertising claims for Bayer aspirin and Sterling's other nonprescription pain relievers are accurate and truthful."

Frank K. Mayers, president of Bristol Myers, said "Bufferin, Excedrin and Excedrin PM are superior analgesic products. This fact is supported by massive scientific evidence and confirmed through use by millions and millions of consumers."

The proposed orders by the commission would require the companies to disclose the presence of aspirin or caffeine in their products and call on the manufacturers to run corrective advertisements for two years to counter the alleged misrepresentation.

In its analysis of label contents, the NAS said many clinical terms and much of the information in package inserts are misleading or irrelevant and ingredients are added to some products for no apparent reason.

The academy's evaluation of 19 antacids and 14 analgesics was published recently by the Food and Drug Administration, which is undertaking lengthy class-by-class review of the safety and effectiveness of the 100,000 to 500,000 over-the-counter drugs sold without medical prescription.

State Model For Control Procedures

Kansas is serving as a model for other states in procedure for alerting to protect against potentially dangerous pesticides. The pesticide alert system recently developed by the Kansas Department of Agriculture and the Kansas Department of Health will be recommended procedure for all states.

This is according to word received from the United States Department of Agriculture by Dean Garwood, head of the Entomology Division, State Department of Agriculture.

The U.S.D.A. is proposing that the procedure be included as part of cooperative program between U.S.D.A., the individual states, and the pesticide industry to avoid pesticide accidents.

The pesticide alert system was established to warn public health and medical personnel when potentially dangerous pesticides may be used in their area. To accomplish this, the Entomology Division provides forecasts of insect activity and possible pesticide use in the state.

Scout Still Dominant Kansas Wheat Variety

Scout wheat this year strengthened its position slightly as the most popular Kansas variety, according to the Kansas Crop and Livestock Reporting Service. Scout was seeded on 47.7 percent of the State's 1972 wheat acreage, compared with 46.9 percent a year earlier, and 48.1 percent in 1970. Scout increased rapidly in popularity through the late 1960's and in the early 70's has represented nearly half of the Kansas wheat acreage. Included in the Scout percentage was 9.7 percent of Scout 66, selected strain which has continued to gain. Triumph and Satanta were next in popularity, each accounting for 10.5 percent of the State's total wheat acreage seeded for harvest this year. Triumph decreased a little from 1971 while Satanta gained from 8.4 percent last year.

The acreage planted to Parker for 1972 was 9.3 percent of the State total, moderately above the 7.9 percent recorded in 1971.

Gage was in fifth place with 2.9 percent of the State total as Bison slipped to 2.8 percent, compared with 4.6 percent in 1971.

The six leading varieties accounted for 84 percent of the State's total seeded acreage.

Scout plantings represented a larger proportion of the total wheat acreage than a year earlier in the three Western, the South Central and the Northeast districts, but showed sizable decreases in the North Central, Central and Southeast areas. Scout was the leading variety in all Western and Central crop reporting districts.

In thirteen counties, 70 percent or more of the wheat acreage was seeded to Scout, with Hamilton County's 86 percent the highest. Seedings of Scout was 60 percent or more of the acreage in 29 counties, all in the western two-thirds of the State.

Triumph percentages declined from last year in 7 of the 9 crop reporting districts, but the variety is still important in the Southeastern quarter of the State. In 1972, Triumph was the leading variety in the Southeast district, where it accounted for 40.3 percent of the wheat acreage. The Triumph percentage as reported here includes the various strains such as Improved Triumph, Triumph 64, and Super Triumph.

Satanta gained substantially from last year in the Northwest, North Central, Central and South Central sections of the State. In the Northwest district, it was planted on 16.8 percent of the wheat acreage and was the second most popular variety to Scout there.

Parker was the most important wheat variety in East Central Kansas. It also gained substantially in North Central and Central districts and was the second most popular wheat there and in the Southeast district.

Gage dropped slightly in importance, but in the Northeast was planted on more acreage than any other variety.

Bison declined in importance statewide, but in Southwest Kansas was still quite popular.

Chanute was seeded on 2.7 percent of the State's acreage, up moderately from last year with gains scored in the three Eastern and South Central districts.

Apache declined to 2.0 percent, but still accounted for substantial acreages in several Western counties.

Wichita continued to fade, being reported on only 1.7 per cent of the State's total, compared with 2.9 percent last year.

Some other established varieties included Lancer, with 1.7 percent of the seeded acreage, and Kaw with 1.3 percent. Two varieties in the survey for the first time were Eagle with 1.2 percent and Sturdy with 1.1 percent. Other varieties listed separately and their percentages included Shawnee 0.9, Kiowa 0.6, Pronto 0.6, and Danne 0.1.

All other and unknown varieties represented 2.4 percent of the State's acreage.

the unborn child," said a spokesman for Patents International Overseas Corporation, a division of Pre-Na-Tell International Corporation.

Two major American pharmaceutical firms disclosed yesterday that they hope to market the new pre-natal test.

Abbott laboratories of North Chicago, Ill., announced that it had signed a license agreement with Pre-Na-Tell. Under the agreement, Abbott will have exclusive marketing rights in seven countries — but not in the United States.

Ortho Pharmaceutical Corp. of Raritan, N.J., has obtained marketing rights for the United States and Canada.

Ortho also agreed to conduct clinical test on the wafer for one year. The year ends next November.

How accurate is the wafer test? A spokesman for patents International wouldn't say, but another source close to the testing told the Chicago Daily News that the test has been 95 per cent accurate so far.

enthusiasm for developing new chemicals to battle bugs, weeds and plant diseases. Some go slow on research until they see how they might be affected by the federal pesticide control bill pending in Congress.

Others worry about fast rising development costs and lengthy delays in getting new products approved. One survey for the industry last year showed the cost of discovering and developing a single new pesticide rose 60 percent from $3.4 million to $5.5 million from 1967 to 1970. Companies contend the cost has continued to rise.

Signs of retrenching in the industry are abundant. The Department of Agriculture, at last count in 1970, found 84 basic producers of pesticides, down from 88 a year earlier.

Many companies are reducing their involvement. Shell Chemical cut pesticide research spending 25 percent last year on top of earlier cuts. Even companies maintaining research budgets say more of the money is going for "defensive research" to justify existing products rather than turning out new ones.

But, many concerns are looking for a bigger share of the pesticide market.

Pesticide Problems Slow Research

Pesticide problems give many producers second thoughts about the business.

Increasing criticism of pesticides together with tougher restrictions on their use dampen many companies'

Simple Test Tells Unborn Child's Sex

Parents wondering whether they were going to have a baby boy or girl in the family may have the answer five months before birth if the simple test can be clinically proven.

The test, developed by a French laboratory, requires only a sample of the expectant mother's saliva.

The saliva sample is applied to a chemical-treated wafer, and then a second chemical is added to he wafer.

If the wafer turns one color, the unborn child is a boy. A second color means the baby is a girl.

Soviet Grain Sales Part Of Larger Political Package

As the United States continues its seemingly endless thawing of relations with the Soviet Union, Secretary of Agriculture, Earl Butz, said no US grain sale is imminent but hopes that a deal can be worked out. He said grain negotiations will be part of the agenda when President Nixon visits Moscow next month.

Asked at a news conference if the decision by the Nixon administration to bomb Hanoi and Haiphong has hurt chances of U.S. farmers to sell surplus grain and soybeans to the Soviets, Butz replied:

"I can't answer that question with a yes or no. This grain sale is part of a larger package that we're developing with the Soviet Union."

"It's my opinion," he said, "that before we have a substantial grain sale with them, there's got to be some evidence of a thawing of political relationships that currently exist."

Butz returned from Moscow recently after opening talks which could mean $200 million a year or more in sales of surplus U.S. grain.

"We didn't come back with a grain sale," Butz said. "We hope there will be still further discussions in the future." However, he said, none has been scheduled beyond Nixon's visit to Moscow in May.

"We have what they need," Butz said, "and they need what we have." But he emphasized a number of times that the Soviets will have to warm up politically with the United States.

"They've got to show some evidence, too, that they're becoming a part of the community of nations," Butz said.

Not only would a new export agreement be an immediate Farm Belt political coup for the Nixon administration, it could have dramatic long-range consequences for U.S. farm exports and on prices American farmers receive.

Last year a deal by two U.S. firms to sell nearly three million tons of feed to the Soviets for more than $135 million resulted from a decision by Nixon to ease shipping and trade restrictions with Communist-bloc countries. That transaction, the first substantial sale in eight years, led to overtures from both sides for more permanent arrangements.

Behind the scene is an aim of Soviet leaders to increase the output of beef, pork, poultry and dairy products to meet a rising consumer demand for better food. Soviet grain production, however, is not enough for a large livestock expansion.

Exports are vital to U.S. farmers, and particularly to the Nixon administration's plan for putting more reliance on free markets and less on government farm subsidies.

A new grain deal with the Soviet Union not only would move nearer the target but would help ease the pressure from rising U.S. grain surpluses, currently highest in nearly a decade.

Only Mud Mars Nudist Open House

TONGANOXIE — The weatherman did his best for Vernon Coleman and the Garden of Eden last weekend. The clear skies and temperatures in the 70s provided a perfect day for the open house at Coleman's "nudist resort" north of Coleman estimated approximately 500 people had driven over the rough gravel roads by late afternoon to see for themselves what organized nudism is all about.

"It's a pretty good day," Coleman

There was a moderate traffic jam on Tonganoxie's Route 2 on Saturday afternoon.

Indicates current supply of feed for grazing on non-irrigated pastures and ranges relative to that expected from existing stands under very favorable weather conditions.

Pasture and range feed conditions in the 37 States reporting on April 1 averaged 80 percent of normal. Condition for the 30 States with comparable records for last year was 78 percent, 8 percentage points above April 1, 1971, and 1 point above the 1961-70 average for the date.

Temperatures were below normal over most of the Nation in late March. Ground water and moisture were adequate except in southern and central California and part of Arizona where it was extremely dry for this time of year.

Reported pasture and range feed conditions in the North Central States averaged about the same as a year earlier. Conditions in Oklahoma and Texas were greatly improved over the droughty condition of 1971.

New Wheat Pact, US And Canada Agree On Markets

The United States and Canada, the world's biggest wheat exporters, have agreed they won't compete with each other in certain wheat markets and won't try to undercut each other in markets they share, so Canadian officials say.

The agreement, which Canadian officials say isn't a move to regulate markets and fix prices, was reached by President Nixon and Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau when they conferred in Ottawa.

Canadian officials say the oral pact means the two countries won't "deleteriously affect each other's historic wheat markets."

Otto Lang minister in charge of the Canadian Wheat Board, said the agreement was aimed "only at maintaining orderly markets."

Leading export officials of the U.S. Agriculture Department say they aren't aware of the pact.

Lang declined to specify what is meant by "historic" markets, though it's known that Canada is concerned about the prospects of U.S. wheat sales to Russia, one of Canada's biggest customers. U.S. Agriculture Secretary Earl Butz was in Moscow last week discussing a trade arrangement that would send a lot of feed grains, rather than wheat, to the Soviet Union.

Canada has a severe grain transportation problem. This year, it is committed to exporting more than 800 million bushels of grain, including more than 500 million bushels of wheat. But Canada, using what most officials describe as an archaic grain-handling system, is close to 30 million bushels behind schedule in delivery. The transportation system also has been plagued by bad weather in the Rocky Mountains, which has been holding up rail shipments from the grain belt to Vancouver, the West Coast port.

Canada is already so hard put to fill orders that it has temporarily put a halt to signing more export contracts.

Lang said the agreement was aimed at "maintaining reasonable prices" and "avoiding undue price competition that doesn't help either one of us."

He said the U.S. and Canada defined a floor price as one that "reasonably matches the costs of production" while a ceiling price is "generous but not exorbitant."

The U.S.-Canada pact, he said, reflects both countries' impatience with the progress on arranging a new International Wheat Agreement. "The present IWA doesn't have pricing provisions," he said. "It makes no sense for Canadian and American producers to sell their wheat at prices below the cost of production while other countries encourage high-cost production through higher producer rates."

The U.S. is the world's leading wheat exporter, with shipments totaling 726.9 million bushels in the crop year ended last July 31. Canada is No. 2 with its exports expected to surpass 500 million bushels this crop year.

Subtle Pesticide Effects On Quail Being Studied

Researchers are looking for subtle effects of pesticides. A recent grant to the Division of Biology at Kansas State University should help find some of the answers.

The National Science Foundation has awarded $62,900 to Robert Robel in support of his research on bobwhite quail. Robel, a professor of environmental biology, has been conducting research on bobwhite quail for several years. Three years ago he began to study the subtle effects of low levels of pesticides on quail behavior, survival, and ability to digest food.

"Large dosages of dieldrin and parathion kill quail, but we really don't know what happens when these birds are exposed to low levels of these common pesticides," Robel said. "Low levels of pesticides to which bobwhite quail are continually exposed may be more important than the occasional exposure of a small segment of the population to high lethal levels."

For the last 10 years Robel has been studying bobwhite quail populations on the Fort Riley Military Reservation. He has looked at quail survival, food habits, parasite burdens, and changes in bird weight and fat content of birds in the wild. About three years ago he decided to bring the outdoors into his laboratory for better controlled studies. He now has two large rooms in which he can study quail under different temperature, humidity, and light conditions.

"We can now simulate field conditions right here in the laboratory and study the effects of pesticides on our birds in a much more precise manner," Robel said.

Thus far, Robel's research has shown some interesting results. Quail are trained to peck red and green lights to get food. When quail

30

Grass & Grain

April 25, 1972

are given very low dosages of dieldrin — the dose birds would naturally get by feeding on contaminated insects in the wild — he finds they do not respond to the lights as quickly.

"This doesn't seem like much, but a one or two second delay in reacting could mean the difference between the quail catching a grasshopper or not," Robel said.

The quail's ability to distinguish between colors did not seem to be affected, but its ability to hit the light with its beak was. During the next two years, the K-State researcher will be studying the effects of sublethal levels of pesticides on the quail's ability to digest food and resist parasites.

Robel is being assisted in his research by the KSU departments of entomology and psychology.

"Only through continued research such as this can scientists hope to develop effective pesticides which are safe to use in the environment," he concluded.

new rattle chain, new Ausherman cylinder bars, all new tin work above the cylinder, both complete new elevator chains with flights, complete transmission overhaul and new clutch during milo season. Complete major engine overhaul in 1971, installed rebuilt propulsion 1970 new style Pitman and belt reel drive. It has power steering, individual brakes. You will never buy a better one for the price. Oh yes, it could use a paint job, otherwise it's ready for the field.

1968 IHC 403 with 16' platform and cab. We just traded for this low acreage machine. The No. 95 Deere owner above, and the owner of this No. 403 both traded for new IHC No. 715 combines. This is a real cream p.f.f. It needs sections in the knife, and a new muffler. We could use a good clean late No. 151 trade-in on this machine as we have a buyer for one.

Set of 4 of the late style Heston Head Hunters purchased in 1971. Removed from a No. 101. You can buy these at a real bargain at this time of year.

Set of 5 Roll-A-Cones purchased in 1971. Used with IHC 403. Buy them now and make a real bargain.

1963 No. 303 with cab and 14 platform. We just traded for it and have made no repairs as yet. Repairs will be minor, but you can have your choice of purchasing as is, or reconditioned as needed.

1977 No. 101 with 12' platform. We just traded for it, and haven't picked it up yet. Chance to buy as is, or reconditioned as needed.

1977 IHC No. 141 and 1952 Super 26 you can buy for junk prices, $300 for the pair.

BALERS

1969 IHC 47T in A-1 condition. Completely reconditioned in our shop. This is like a new baler. The customer wanted to change to wire.

1969 IHC 47T in good condition. It is an A-1 baler, and it has hydraulic tension. Customer traded for the later 440 all-twine tie which can be installed on most IHC twine balers. If you have an IHC twine baler, ask Ernie, parts foreman, about the all twine tie parts updating package.

1968 IHC No. 37W baler in good condition. Customer traded it in on a No. 30 Heston Stackhand.

1969 Deere No. 224WS baler in A-1 condition, with hyd. lubrication. Customer traded it in on a No. 30 Heston Stackhand.

Grass & Grain Profits Small But Some In Beef Chain Make It Quickly

Reprinted from Western Livestock Reporter
Billings, Montana

Everyone in the United States understands a profit or a loss. Most business people and ranchers understand return on investment but the livestock industry, the rancher, the feeder, the packer and the retailer must look at their investments on a per day basis. You do business each and every day. The decisions you make that day surely affect you years ahead, but you make that investment and that decision in any given day. Decisions made here for the livestock industry. Read and study if you will the consumers beef dollar is divided by the industry:

As you study this chart you will notice that the rancher with nearly $1,000 to $1,200 per cow unit investment receives on any given 700 pound yearling steer a total of 48 cents per day return if he can sell his steers for $37.22 a hundred weight. This is at the outset of this argument is giving the industry the benefit of the doubt.

The feeder in a high cost operating position with a lot of expensive feed and materials and help receives but 69 cents per head per day. This is a gross margin but you will note that the packer keeps the animal about five months compared to 18 months for the rancher.

Then there's the packer, who in this example is owning this carcass seven days. National figures will show that this is nearly 3 days longer than the average. Most packers will have him on the truck and gone in three days but at the seven day level he is able to get a return of $5.89 per head per day of ownership.

Then there is the retail chain store. Please note that under four days of ownership of this carcass, and this by the way could be double from the national average because chains don't want their money tied up that long but again giving the retailer the benefit of the doubt, for four days of ownership, his gross return per day is $35.62.

Now, if you want to put a calculator or a pencil to their return on investment per day, can you please notice the situation that the rancher is, and yes, the feeder too. This retailer is making 604.7 per cent more gross return per head per day of ownership than the packer. He's making 5,162.3 per cent more gross return per head per day of ownership than the feeder and this retailer is making 7420.8 per cent more gross return per head per day of ownership than the rancher.

Profits are made by the amount of time it takes to turn your money over. You in the ranching business are owning this 700 pound steer for an average of 18 months compared to this chain store retailer who owns that fat steer for four days or even two days, that's the difference in return on investment. Those in the ranching business and in the feeding business aren't even in the same ballpark with the food retail chains. The food chains aren't all bad as through their advertising and promotion to a great degree, beef consumption has doubled in twenty years but so have their profits and more.

The retail price spread of $142.48 as shown in this example is not justified by the services rendered by their industry. As pointed out by the Nebraska Livestock Association, consumers should take a long, hard look at this figure and not unfairly blame the cattle industry for the bulge in beef prices.

The cattlemen's portion of the consumers beef dollar is much, much smaller than it should be. Beef makes 2.5 per cent of disposable personal income. This is less than for any time in history any where. The insults and accusations that the chain stores have brought to the American public about the beef industry appear libelous and totally unfounded. They are an insult to every thinking American cattleman and feeder.

Not touched upon here yet are expenses. And yes, the retailer with his vast merchandising and advertising campaign, has tremendous expenses. They have elaborate, well lighted beautiful stores.

The packer has a high wage scale to meet. He has a guaranteed kill to meet. He has expensive machinery and he does operate on a low margin business.

The feeder, with his 69 cent gross return per head per day out of this steer, had expenses and costly feeds to buy, labor to pay, machinery to keep up, feeding equipment to buy and feed mills and scales to repair. His is a low margin business but all

	Gross Return Per Head Per Day Of Ownership	A Total Of
*The Rancher Receives	48 cents/day (540 days)	$260.54 (700 lb. steer at $37.22. This is for all expenses of raising the steer. This was the avg. gross yearling price for a steer in Jan, 1972. Please note that this is not the average of the last ten years or even last year)
*The Feeder Receives	69 cents/day (150 days)	$103.51 (This for 400 lbs of gain with high grain rations. About 5 months time required in the feedlot)
*The Packer Receives	$5.89/day (7 days)	$41.27 (491.3 lbs. at 8.4 cents includes slaughtering, preparing the carcass for retailer.)
*The Retailer Receives	$35.62/day (4 days)	$142.48 (491.3 lbs. at 29 cents covers such items as cutting, wrapping & displaying for self service.)
*The Consumer Pays		$547.80 (491.3 lbs. retail cuts an average price of $1.11 per pound.)

*The rancher, feeder, packer and retailer above information based on figures of USDA supplement to marketing and transportation situation January 1972.

Figures based on average days of ownership of one yearling steer coming off grass starting at the rancher. (These are educated industry time estimates that could vary somewhat to economic conditions.)

of these people turn their product over so much more quickly than the rancher.

The rancher with 540 days or 18 months, tied up in this steer on a return of 48 cent gross return per head per day of ownership has expenses too. A pickup that used to cost $2,800 now costs $4,800. A good hired man that used to cost $250 now costs $450 or $500 per month. Land that used to cost $8.00 an acre now costs $40.00 an acre. Taxes that used to cost $300 a year now are $3,000 a year. Cows that used to cost $25 a year to run now are $110 per head per year to run.

It's time that the livestock industry compared their gross return per head per day of ownership with their friendly enemies who receive and use their stock to and through the consumer.

Student-Designed Pipe Handler Gets Engineers Award

The entry developed by seniors in agricultural engineering at Kansas State University, Manhattan, has taken first place in the regional design competition of the American Society of Agricultural Engineers (ASAE).

The entry is a large prototype, automatic irrigation pipe loader and handler developed last fall by the seniors in agricultural machinery design taught by Prof. Gustave E. Fairbanks of the K-State department of agricultural engineering.

The unit was fabricated by two seniors: Stanley E. Briggs, Delphos, and John H. Stout, Sedan. The entry was one of several from engineering schools in Kansas, Iowa, Missouri, and Nebraska at the ASAE mid-central meeting in St. Joseph, Mo., recently.

Other seniors who helped develop the innovative device which automatically disconnects, loads, and stacks up to a third of a mile of gated irrigation pipe were Paul R. Beshoner, Elsmore; Stephen F. Cordel, Tipton; Louis F. Fleske, Garfield; Gerald N. Gillen, Leoti;

Steve J. Graff, Marienthal; Alan W. Johnson, Topeka; John W. Krupp, Ellsworth; Michael E. McDonald, Leavenworth; Guttu Midekssa, Ethiopia, Africa; Charles E. (Ed) Neilbing, Highland; Michael L. O'Halloran, Pretty Prairie; Galen E. Thorsell, Chanute; and Charles F. Tuttle, Haviland.

With the mobile home-sized implement, pipe can be stacked as a unit for temporary storage and reloaded again when needed. The loader-handler can also be used to lay down pipe. The pipe is automatically reconnected as it is set onto the field.

Cost for building the implement with used materials is between $1,000 and $1,200.

"With our machine, there is a tractor driver but the rest of the operation is automatic. The implement is conceived to operate smoothly at a maximum speed of three miles per hour. It only takes 10-15 minutes to pick up a full load.

"Using available methods for performing the same work, it takes three men — one to drive and two others to disconnect, load, and stack the pipe — an hour to do roughly the same task. So this device represents, potentially, a considerable savings in money, manpower, and time," said Briggs, who headed the fabrication work.

The implement was developed to solve a problem Briggs had on his farm. "We hope to field test it shortly," he said.

Pasture Burning Limits Cover For Prairie Chicken

COTTONWOOD FALLS — A new growth of grass is showing green on the fire blackened Flint Hills but it isn't going to help nesting prairie chickens.

Extensive pasture burning, sometimes whipped out of control by high winds, has charred vast areas of eastern Kansas prairie. In many places the rolling hills are burned bare as far as the eye can see in every direction. According to Gerald Horak, Fish and Game Commission biologist in Cottonwood Falls, greater prairie chickens will undoubtedly have difficulty finding suitable nesting cover in severely burned areas. The prairie chicken, which requires wide expanses of native grasses, are presently mating on traditional Flint Hills booming grounds. The term "booming" comes from a low drumming sound produced by the male prairie chicken during courtship.

Kansas hunters have been able to harvest approximately 40,000 prairie chicken during each of the past few seasons, producing no significant change in the population.
