

A BIG START FOR TRUCKING
JUNCTION CITY — When William Errebo had his farm sale south-east of Junction City last February 28, he did just what his farm sale ad in Grass & Grain said he was going to do: he quit farming.
 Then he bought a $30,000 tractor truck from Bowman's John Deere GMC agency in Junction City and will be trucking for the Graves Truck Lines. The truck was delivered a few days ago.
 Errebo is shown at left in this picture; the other pictured with the truck is Joe Bowman. Errebo had been farming for 7 years, but previously had been in the trucking business.

USDA Tuning Out 'Listening' Conferences

The Nixon administration's original plan to hold a series of six or seven "listening conferences" around the country so farm people could express themselves has developed a 2-month siege of ear trouble.

Clifford M. Hardin, agriculture secretary headed the first one at Lincoln, Nebr., on April 12, and the second at Pullman, Wash., 10 days later.

But no hearings have been held since and no more are planned until at least July, a spokesman said. "Right now it's pretty hard to say," the official said, "but he may have two more next month."

After that?
 "Well, that's getting into August and it's pretty hard to say," the spokesman said.

The original plan called for regional meetings conducted at land-grant universities during which farm and other rural spokesmen would be invited to have their say. In this way, officials said, Hardin and other top administration farm leaders would have a direct line to rural mood. And, they added at the time, this would help planners when they drafted new farm legislation.

No timetable or location for the July listening conferences have been decided thus far, Hardin's office said.

Peg Wheat Crop Now At 298 Million Bushels

The 1969 Kansas wheat crop is forecast at 298 million bushels based on June 1 conditions, according to the Kansas Crop and Livestock Reporting Service.

If realized, this will be the second largest crop of record.

Precipitation over most of the State during May and moderate temperatures provided excellent conditions for development of wheat.

Pasture feed has responded well to the spring weather and was in good to excellent condition on June 1. Early-season hay prospects were the best in a decade although rain during harvest caused some losses in the first cutting of alfalfa.

Winter Wheat

Kansas winter wheat production is forecast at 298,380,000 bushels, based on condition of the crop on June 1.

If the forecast is realized, wheat production in 1969 will be the second largest of record, exceeded only by the 308 million bushels produced in 1952.

American Motors Eyes Mini-Car

American Motors will introduce a "totally new edition" to its line this fall, Roy D. Chapin, Jr., board chairman, announced. Chapin said earlier the firm would introduce one "entirely new product every six months for the next three years" starting this fall.

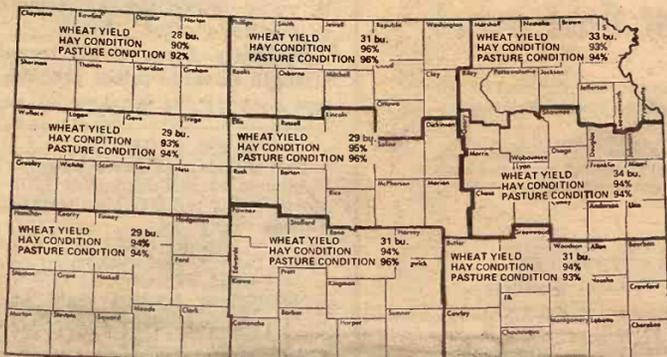

The car, to be called the Hornet, will be smaller than the company's current small car, Chapin said. It is designed to compete in the compact and import car market.

FLORENCE SCHOOL LINK TO MARION

FLORENCE — Patrons of the school district here have voted to unify with the Marion unified district. Two other possible choices were offered, to unify with Peabody-Burns USD or with Chase County USD. The Marion district got 54 of 70 votes cast at a public meeting.

LOW STOCK MARK AFTER BANK HIKE

Stock averages dropped to 1969 low points last week, apparently in reaction to moves on the part of some banks to raise prime interest rates to 8½%. On the New York exchange declines exceeded gains by more than 3 to 1.

BEST PASTURE CONDITIONS SINCE 1949

The Kansas Crop Reporting Service says pasture conditions are the best in the state since 1949. Rating 100% as optimum condition of grass, the Service says the June 1 grassland condition is 95%, up 16 points from a year ago.

The map here generalizes pasture conditions in nine districts, along with hay condition and estimated average wheat yield for the 1969 crop.

The expected production is based on a record high yield of 30 bushels per harvested acre on 9,946,000 acres to be harvested for grain.

The previous record yield per acre was 28.5 bushels set in 1958 and 1960.

Favorable temperatures during much of May and adequate moisture supplies promoted exceptional wheat growth and development during the month. In some areas the crop has grown unusually tall and lodging is a problem as harvest approaches. Development of the crop has been slightly behind normal during the cool, wet spring with harvest expected to start a few days later than usual.

Pasture And Hay Crops

Pasture feed condition on June 1 was the best since 1949. Farmers and ranchers reported the condition at 95 per cent of normal, up 5 percentage points from a month earlier and 16 points above a year ago.

Grass made excellent growth during May and by the first of June most cattle had been moved onto pasture, with supplemental feeding declining sharply.

Hay prospects at the first of the month were the best in more than a decade as the result of generally adequate moisture and relatively little damage from insects.

By June 1 nearly half of the first cutting of alfalfa hay was harvested compared with only a third at the same time last year. Some losses and quality deterioration resulted from rains during harvest.

as the 1968 production but otherwise the smallest since 1953. Ample moisture during May resulted in favorable yield prospects of 95 cwt. per acre.

Current prospects for the 1969 peach crop were good to excellent. The crop is forecast at 9.5 million pounds, up 53 per cent from last year's crop and the largest since 1935.

Milk and Egg Production

Dairy herds on Kansas farms produced 162 million pounds of milk during May, up seasonally 7 per cent from a month earlier but the same as the relatively low production a year earlier.

May egg production was 82 million eggs, up seasonally from April and 3 million above a year earlier but otherwise the smallest production in records dating back to 1925.

United States

Winter wheat production in the United States is estimated at 1,161 million bushels based on June 1 conditions.

The Nation's production forecast is up 3 per cent or 34 million bushels from the May 1 forecast and compares with the 1,229 million bushel output of 1968.

The condition of all tame hay was reported at 94 per cent of normal on June 1 compared with 74 per cent a year earlier. Wild hay prospects, after a slow start because of the cool spring weather, were the best in 19 years.

Other Crops

Irish potato production was forecast at 124,00 cwt., the same

FARMERS OUTLOOK

L.H. Simerl

Hidden Weakness In Beef Market?

There may be a hidden weakness in the present cattle market. Since ranchers and farmers have some $18 billion tied up in cattle, they should be aware of this hazard. Most discussions of the cattle-beef outlook are limited to two principal topics: (1) consumer demand, and (2) the supply situation. Such discussions almost always omit a third critical factor, which is the price structure. By price structure we mean the relationship between the prices of live cattle and prices of beef at the retail store. Many cattlemen do watch the wholesale prices of beef, comparing these with the prices of live cattle. This is a useful activity, but it's not where the big action is. The margin between the prices of cattle on the hoof and cattle on the rail is relatively small, and it changes very little from month to month. Where the action is. The big action is in the retailing part of meat marketing. Retailing meat is a complex business. Each carcass must be cut into several hundred pieces, and each piece must be weighed, wrapped, priced, placed in the display counter, recorded on the cash register, and put into the customer's sack.

A year ago, for example, the wholesale-to-retail price spread was about 27 per cent of the retail value of beef, compared with 12 per cent of the retail value for the farm-to-wholesale spread. Meat departments of retail food stores usually are operated at a loss, since store managers generally price popular cuts low in order to attract customers into the store, in the hope that they will buy higher-profit items before they leave.

Research findings. Careful research has shown that there is a lag between changes in prices of live cattle and changes in prices of beef at retail. When cattle prices are going up, retail prices are seldom raised fast enough to maintain the usual wholesale-to-retail margins. For a time, meat continues to be sold at bargain prices and consumers buy freely. The retailers bid up wholesale prices in order to get supplies to keep the customers coming into their stores.

Eventually, retailers raise prices to more nearly cover their costs of operation. At some point, retail sales are checked, wholesale prices are undermined, and cattle prices begin to slip.

Again, there is a lag between the decline in cattle prices and the reduction in retail prices. Retail sales continue slow, while cattle prices slide further — until retail prices are cut enough to stimulate sales.

Summary. Some of the recent strength in cattle prices probably has been at the expense of re-tallers. When they raise prices to restore their margins, retail sales may be restricted and the demand for cattle correspondingly reduced. It has happened just this way many times before, and probably will again.

Major Addition At Fina Plant At El Dorado

EL DORADO — Construction has started here on a $1.75 million "H. F. Alkylatlon Unit" at the American Petrofina Co. plant.

The El Dorado City Commission has agreed to issue $1.75 million industrial revenue bonds for the structure, according to Dave Doty, city manager. The bonds first must be approved by the Security Exchange Commission.

The new unit, according to Ken Suiter, Fina plant manager, will enable the El Dorado division to make gasoline from propane and butane.

Details of the unit will be released soon by American Petrofina Co. head office in Dallas, Suiter said.

Litwin Construction Co. has a contract for building the unit. If the bond issue should not be approved, Suiter said, the plans were to go ahead with the project "with other financing."

Fina and El Dorado officials said there appeared to be no problems and believed the bonds would be issued.

"We agreed to issue bonds," Doty said, "because it will give Fina an opportunity to stay competitive with other companies in the area. We wouldn't like to see the same kind of problems that developed at Potwin, Kans., a few years ago when operators closed the Vickers plant there."

The unit, Suiter said, will be about 180 feet high.

Two other American Petrofina Co. refineries have the new process, he added.

Cows Never See Outdoors

You've heard of "high-rise" poodles and catered-to cats whose owners never let them nearer the wicked outside world than their favorite window sill.

Now cows are going the same pampered route.

Yes, cows. It's all due to a new trend in dairying called "total confinement housing."

What it means is summed up succinctly by Wisconsin dairy farmer, Leo TePoel: "My cows haven't been outside in the past year." Not only that, his dairy barn doesn't even have windows.

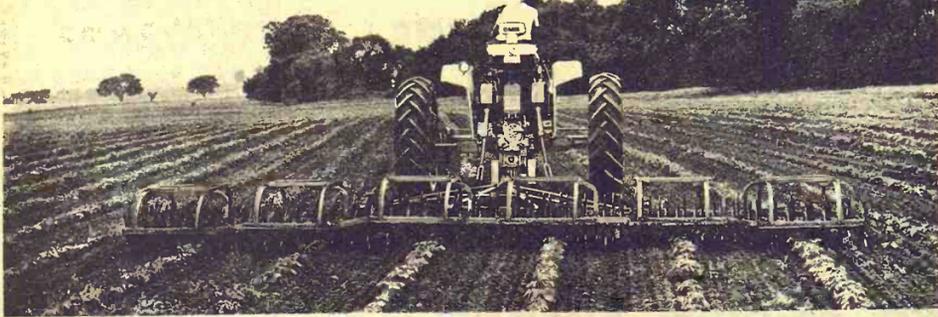

But, don't worry about the cows.

Breezes for the herd are supplied by 20-inch exhaust fans. In good weather, they pull in fresh air — when it gets chilly, tempered air. When was Nature so thoughtful to Bossy?

Inside their atmosphere-controlled world, the sun always shines for farmer TePoel's herd — at least the fluorescent lights burn 24 hours a day. The cows enjoy a scientifically figured three squares a day and enjoy their lack of problems with flies. Some have required manicures, though, because long hooves built up under their "soft" living conditions.

According to the dairymen, the cows aren't the only ones who thrive on this new kind of care. It's a labor-saver for him and he expects even milk production this year 'round to help offset the cost of his veritable "cow palace."

Schnittker Sticks With Espousal Of Limits On Farm Subsidies

A former undersecretary of agriculture has recommended that federal price-support and acreage diversion farm payments be limited in 1970 to $10,000 a crop, including cotton, to a single producer.

John A. Schnittker, an official in the Johnson administration, told reporters this would save the government about 250 million dollars a year. He said some big growers could receive payments on more than one crop. The House of Representatives last month voted to limit payments to $20,000 a farm in 1970. Schnittker said this was a beginning but would not accomplish sufficient savings even if approved by the Senate — which is deemed unlikely.

Schnittker also called for a repeal of the "snapback provision" of the present agricultural law. Under this provision, cotton producers would not be affected by the $20,000 limitation voted by the House. It provides that if payments are overlimited, the cotton program would return to the farmer high support price program.

Schnittker made his proposals in a letter to Sen. Spessard L. Holland (D-Fla.), chairman of the agriculture appropriations subcommittee. He offered them as an amendment to the 1970 fiscal year agricultural appropriations bill.

Several farm corporations received more than 1 million dollars in farm subsidies last year. One corporation received more than 4 million dollars in 1967 and more than 3 million in 1968.

Schnittker said that in the absence of his amendment, in 1970 some 3,000 giant farms will collect 150 million dollars in subsidies.

"Continuation of this farm program is indefensible at a time when government funds are urgently needed for more worthy domestic programs," he said.

Schnittker said that for the longer term, the federal payment ceiling should be no higher than $10,000 a farm or $5,000 a program.

"The large payments under the sugar and wool programs serve no public purpose, and should be limited," he said. "Annual savings approaching 500 million dollars should result from the lower ceiling and from including wool and sugar."

The Johnson administration and Orville L. Freeman, former secretary of agriculture, opposed any payment limitations.

Schnittker's amendment would provide that:

• Any wheat or feed-grain producer who has his 1970 government payment limited by the $10,000 ceiling would have his minimum acreage diversion requirement reduced by the same percentage as his payment is reduced.

• Any cotton producer who has his payments reduced by the limitation would be allowed to plant some additional cotton acreage without being subject to marketing-quota penalties. If he plants within the larger limits authorized he would receive his $10,000 payment and all cotton produced on the farm would be eligible for price-support loans.

CREDIT TO MAYDAY RURAL FIRE UNIT

MANHATTAN — Riley county rural fire chief Del Petty said that rural fire system in the county saved the home and furnishings of the Jon Larson family near Green. There was some damage to the residence, started from faulty wiring to a clothes dryer, but Petty said the home would have been entirely destroyed except for the Mayday rural fire unit, which arrived 10 minutes after the fire started.

Well-Lighted Entrance Extends Cordial Welcome

Recall your last attempt to find a friend's house for the first time at night? Locating it by its house number was probably annoying if not impossible, for few homes are readily identifiable after dark. The home with a truly cordial welcome, however, has a well-lighted, easily recognized entrance.

The simplest method for illuminating your house number is to mount the numerals under an existing light fixture where they can easily be seen at night. There are also numerous electrically illuminated house number fixtures on the market which you can buy and have installed, varying from small, wall-mounted fixtures to more elaborate post lamps with house numbers attached.

At least a 75-watt bulb is recommended for post lanterns. You can now purchase a light-activated electronic eye to turn the light on at dusk, off at dawn, automatically.

Your guests should be able to reach your home without stumbling in the dark along walks or up steps. Light such areas with overhead or wall mounted fixtures when possible, or use recessed fixtures for local area downlight (above the front door for example). Complete the lighting with weatherproof flood and spotlights mounted high under the eaves for wide area safety lighting.

New Technique Eliminates Static Electricity In Carpets

Are you easily shocked? Well, here's good news for you. The old bugaboo of static electricity in your carpets has been grounded with a new technique of running stainless steel fibers through the yarn which are indistinguishable in the finished carpet. Another advantage resulting from reduced generation of static is the carpet doesn't attract or hold airborne dust to the same degree as ordinary carpet. It's easier to vacuum and shampoo. It also increases the wear-life because abrasive particles are not ground into the face fibers where they cut and damage them.

If you are like most women a hairdo can do wonders in brightening up a day and making you feel like a million dollars. The fast-paced activities you do today require a great amount of time, upsetting the best of planned personal grooming habits. Maybe your hairdo goes limp a few days after shampooing? Today's most modern hair dryer makes it possible to revive the hairdo or even change the style of hairdo! Now you can set your hair dryer rollers and use one of the new

"mist" hair dryers. They use a small amount of water which is quickly turned to a mist. The warm mist permeates hair and starts the curl-setting process. The mist cycle can vary from one to twelve minutes. One mist hair dryer offers an additional feature of a facial sauna shield. If you wish, you can get a sauna treatment at the same time you are reviving or changing hair styles. The sauna treatment enables you to get a luxurious, deep cleansing sauna with the mist reaching the face and forehead and even the back of the neck and behind the ears — places an ordinary facial sauna cannot reach. The sauna feature of the "mist" hair dryer can be used independently by protecting the hair with a plastic shower cap.

Aid To Boat Owners

Boat owners are finding that polyethylene foam tapes give excellent results when used for waterproof gaskets for doors, windows, hatches and cowlings. Urethane foam tape is effective for insulation and to dampen engine vibration. Tests on a boat with an aluminum hull reveal that it's possible to make temporary repairs to punctures with aluminum foil tape.

Redwood Work Center For Your Garden

A garden work center should not only be efficient, but attractive, highly durable and easy to build. Here is a redwood center that meets these requirements — mainly because it's made of All Hears redwood, one of our handsomest and most versatile woods.

In the drawing above, note the simplicity of the structure. There is good storage for tools, fertilizers, insecticides, etc., in the end at right. Then there is a long redwood work bench which doubles as a bench for growing plants. Because the work area is screened from view, the structure makes a lovely backdrop for the patio at left. Remember, you can stain or bleach redwood to blend with your house and grounds. To control weathering while maintaining a natural look, finish with a water repellent.

In your planning consider the orientation of the work center to the sun, its exposure to wind and the ease with which heavy items can be moved from car or garage. The arrangement of the center is up to you, but you will want to consider convenience in potting, transplanting, mixing of sprays and other garden jobs. You should also have a source of water and storage space for bulky items.

More Interest In Price, Wage Controls

Should the United States again turn to wage-price controls to combat inflation?

With each week bringing excessively high labor, agreements for price adjustment, discussion of the advisability of some sort of control mechanism bobs up.

If a poll were taken around the U. S., it would probably show a large segment of the population favoring some method of control to stop the rise of prices and wages.

A similar sampling of business opinion would hardly find the same measure of support for controls, but it might detect a strong tide running for them — a definite minority but a growing faction.

The subject came up for discussion last week after Washington reported that Maurice Stans, secretary of commerce, has been surprised by the number of businessmen who say they would accept price controls if wages would also be brought under strict rein.

Another government official said last week the mail from businessmen in favor of controls far outweighs the mail opposing them.

The Nixon administration has emphatically and repeatedly rejected all suggestions of direct controls for anti-inflation therapy and apparently still adheres to that position. Reliance continues to reside in fiscal and monetary restraint to cool the fires of inflation and slow the economic growth.

A random limited survey of business sentiment on the subject found a mixed attitude.

William Verity, president of Inco Steel corporation, said: "Wage and price controls have a dismal past and an even bleak future. I oppose them in principle and detest them in practice."

Our market system and our collective bargaining procedures contain imperfections and abuses, but these can, and will, be corrected by competitive reality.

"Frankly, I can conceive of no greater disservice to economic progress than the imposition of price and wage controls."

Stewart S. Cort, president of the Bethlehem Steel corporation, said controls "would aggravate our problems" and that they are "least effective in the areas of greatest concern, such as construction wages."

Walter Heller and Leif Olsen, economists, also expressed opposition to wage and price controls.

"Putting on controls," said Heller, "would be like giving up the game. That's about the last resort. The penalties in distortions is enormous. Any attempt to substitute human judgment (through controls) for the cybernetic market system is a self-defeating proposition."

Olsen, senior economist of the First National City bank of New York, commented:

"I am definitely not in favor of wage and price controls. They won't be a solution to inflation. They never have been. When a boiler has a full head of steam, you're not going to tie down the safety valve. You've got to bank the fire by monetary policy."

A different attitude was expressed by other businessmen.

Carl A. Gerstacker, chairman of the Dow Chemical company, said: "I don't like (controls). I don't think they work well. But, at this late date and with the war on, I think they are the only way to quickly contain inflation."

"The idea of expecting the normal economic forces to work all problems out by themselves is just not sagacious. I believe we either have to get out of the war, or, if we stay in, be driven to wage and price controls as soon as possible. Higher interest rates cannot control the economy."

Check Signals On Pottawatomie Courthouse

WESTMORELAND — The building of a new courthouse here, a proposal of great controversy in Pottawatomie county for several years, has lost its support from the county commissioners.

The commissioners have rescinded a resolution to build a new courthouse and have hired an architect to repair the present courthouse at a cost of $75,000.

Repair of the courthouse is to be paid for by the issuance of no-fund warrants. These will be picked up by a mill levy to be paid over a period of about five years.

Money in the county's building fund, now approximately $300,000, will be used to construct a new jail facility on the present courthouse grounds.

The commissioners have voted to discontinue the .85 mill building fund which has accumulated $300,000 in a construction fund.

Plastic 'Roughage' That Lies In Cow's Stomach

There are at least two new products useful as roughage for ruminants. One is an artificial roughage called "Ruff Tabs" introduced by Farmland Industries. The other is called a roughage extender, for use in formulating feeds, called "Ruff Ade" by W. R. Grace & Co.

Farmland's roughage is made of plastic pellets and developers believe it will do away with "normal" roughage. Cattle are fed three pounds of the plastic roughage at the start of feeding. Once taken into the animal's rumen, much of the material remains there thru the entire finishing, with no need for ordinary roughage or more Ruff-Tabs.

Ruff-Tabs are made by slicing thin corrugated bars of extruded plastic into half-inch lengths. They are of a size and design readily eaten by cattle. The piece's angularity prevents their interlocking and clumping in the rumen, and provides the scratching action normal from roughage.

The plastic is food grade and non-reactive with other feed additives or ingredients. Ruff-Tabs have no nutritive value; their function in high-concentrate or all-grain rations is to substitute for "natural" roughages which must be continually replaced in the animal.

Grace, which will distribute "Ruff-Ade" thru its Ultra Life Laboratories, makes several claims for its product. Among the advantages listed:

- 1) More economical roughage handling inventory and storage.
- 2) High bulk density makes possible more favorable freight rates in compounded supplements and finished rations.
- 3) Improved feed efficiency with attendant reduced weight-gain feeding costs.
- 4) Expedites feed performance by minimizing duration of time on feed including "built in" roughage ruminant rations.
- 5) Can reduce corn silage requirements up to about 60% by weight.
- 6) Improves pelleting operations while minimizing caking or bridging of stored supplements or complete rations.

SALINE CROPS TOUR

Howard Wilkins, K-State crops specialist, discusses strengths and weaknesses of various wheat varieties at the Saline crop tour. Test plots of the Carl Nichols farm southeast of Salina were examined.

occurred in the southwest corner of homes which did not have basements. Even in twister-notorious Kansas, a surprisingly small number of homes have basements or storm cellars, Eagleton said.

Eagleton's research took him to Ohio, Mississippi, and Florida to examine tornado damage. In these areas, as in Topeka, he found the southwest corner generally was the most dangerous.

"Most tornadoes really do come from the southwest," he said. In the past, weathermen have advised people to take shelter there, thinking that the worst of the damage would pass over quickly, leaving them safe." Actually, his research showed,

"when people take shelter in the southwest corner of the house on the first floor, not the basement, the brunt of the impact strikes the southwest, carrying with it heavy debris."

Eagleton said that even in homes which do have basements the southwest corner is not the safest.

"If a tornado is sighted," he said, "it is the north or northeast corner of the house, either on the first floor or in the basement, that is the safest."

The U.S. Public Health service is funding research for Eagleton for a five-year period. The work includes study of the effects of wind velocities and pressures on structures of differently shaped model homes in wind tunnels.

'Southwest' Tornado Notion Is Debunked

A University of Kansas researcher debunked an apparent myth which Weather Bureau scientists have been telling residents of Tornado alley for years. Don't believe the old admonition to head for the southwest corner of the house if a twister is sighted, warned Dr. J. R. Eagleton, head of the meteorology curriculum at the university.

Heeding the advice, Eagleton said, may take you to a death trap instead of safety.

Eagleton's research started more than a year ago as a result of data gathered after a tornado struck Topeka in 1966. In the aftermath, it was found that most of the serious damage

STEER WORKS LIKE A HORSE

Joe Tucker of Coffeyville works a steer like a horse, and the 12-year-old steer, Brownie, seems to thrive on it.

Tucker bought the steer when it was a calf for $23 and started training Brownie to work in harness at age 3. Brownie doesn't like to work in hot weather, but more than makes up for that during cold weather months. The steer is used to haul fence posts, hay and other items, Tucker says.

"He's mighty handy to have around when barn lots are muddy or snow is deep," he says. "He can work when trucks and most horses have to stay in a barn."

Training a steer to work seems to come natural to Tucker. His grandfather used to work 10 steers hitched to a wagon, he says. Tucker has turned down "some good offers" for Brownie. "I'd sure hate to part with him. Someday I may train a pair of young steers for a team hitch, but for now Brownie can handle the work just fine."

Poor Harvest Faces Russia

Russia is facing one of its poorest wheat harvests in recent years, according to reports reaching government sources here.

The reports attributed the likely slump this year, after the relatively bumper Soviet wheat crops of the past three seasons, to the combined adverse effects of an abnormally harsh winter and a late spring.

They estimate 20 to 25 per cent of all the winter wheat sown in the fall was killed by bad weather conditions during the winter months.

Normally such losses could be made up by resowing the lost winter acreage with spring wheat, which on average provides about 50 to 60 per cent of all the wheat grown in the Soviet Union.

Heavy winter losses in 1968 were recouped by extensive spring planting and Russia harvested a wheat crop of 75.5 million long tons, second only to its record output of 85 million long tons in 1966.

The reports indicated farmers are trying to do the same this year. However, their efforts were frustrated by an abnormally late spring, and favorable weather conditions will be necessary for the rest of the growing season even to offer the chance of an average-sized crop. An average crop would yield about 50 million long tons.

Because of the above-average crops of the past three years, Russia was reported to be holding comparatively large stocks of grain.

This enabled Russia in recent months to cut down on its long-term contract purchases from western suppliers — primarily Canada.

utive numbered metal ear tags." The first part of this law is not new. What is new is the requirement of identifying each animal in a shipment with a numbered ear tag, and herein lies the concern of these cattlemen.

Individual ear-tagging means that an out-of-state producer who wishes to sell yearling heifers or calves to an Iowa feeder must confine and place a tag in the ear of each individual animal. Previously a health certificate for a specified number of cattle in a shipment was basically all that was required.

This requirement will no doubt prove to be very unattractive to producers in other states, placing Iowa buyers under a handicap.

It is logical to assume that with all things being equal and with comparable bids, a producer, say, from Nebraska, would be more inclined to sell heifers to someone other than an Iowan rather than go to the inconvenience of tagging them, one Iowa cattleman remarked.

Tagging would also involve more handling and subsequent stress on the cattle and possibly the added cost of having the veterinarian who makes out the health certificate also do the tagging, he added.

Apparently the chief purpose of the provision is to strengthen the anti-brucellosis program by further preventing female stock from being brought into the state for feeding or grazing purposes and then being diverted into a breeding herd.

Many Iowa cattle feeders may soon experience some damaging repercussions from a recently enacted amendment to Iowa's animal health laws regarding the movement of female stocker and feeder cattle into the state.

Concern has been expressed by some stockmen in the state that provisions of the law may become a discriminatory factor in the purchase of feedlot and pasture heifers from other states by Iowa feeders. The amendment, which goes into effect on July 1, reads in part that "Female cattle of a recognized beef type over eight months of age but under 21 months may enter the state for feeding and grazing purposes under quarantine for no more than 12 months. Such cattle shall be individually identified by consec-

GREENBUG THREAT GROWING FOR MILO

A Fort Hays Experiment Station entomologist, Dr. Tom Harvey, checks young milo growth, threatened by one of the most widespread greenbug invasions in Kansas history.

Harvey has been spraying badly infested fields with several kinds of chemicals in an effort to determine the best emergency procedures.

Limit Hog Shipments From Missouri

A strict embargo on the movement of hogs from Missouri into Kansas has been ordered by A. G. Pickett, Kansas livestock sanitary commissioner.

The embargo on Missouri hogs came after a case of hog cholera was discovered in a shipment of feeder pigs from Missouri last Tuesday, Pickett said.

"For the good of the swine industry, we are as of this date placing a strict embargo on the movement of any hogs from Missouri into the State of Kansas," Pickett said.

Auto Death Rate Down

The traffic death rate fell slightly during the first four months of 1969 because travel volume moved ahead faster than the number of fatalities, the National Safety Council says.

The 16,030 deaths through April 3 was 2 per cent above the total for the corresponding 1968 period. But the total miles traveled in the period exceeded 335 billion, about 5 per cent more than last year.

This cut the death rate to 4.8 deaths for every 100 million miles traveled, the council said. A year ago through April the rate was 4.9.

souri into the State of Kansas," Pickett said.

"Some time ago an embargo was placed against Oklahoma, Texas, Mississippi, Arkansas and Louisiana.

"Several new cases of hog cholera have occurred in Missouri and Oklahoma in the last week."

Pickett said two infected Oklahoma herds are within a few miles of the Kansas line. He said he has received reports of hogs entering Kansas from Oklahoma in violation of the embargo.

Pickett said hogs are not eligible for any benefits under the program and are endangering the health of Kansas herds.

Block All DDT
In California

California will ban the use of DDT and DDD pesticides in the home and garden after January 1. Also prohibited will be the agricultural use of both in dust form.

Larry W. Fielder, agricultural director, called the pesticides "a hazard to man's natural environment."

The number of house and garden bug killers containing DDT, DDD or combinations of compounds is not known "but it's considerable — quite a few do," he said.

The use of such pesticides in houses and home gardens "probably isn't the major contributor" to some air and water pollution, "but it's a sizeable one," he added.

January was selected, the announcement said, to permit an

Support For Federal Park Fees

Sen. James B. Pearson, R-Ks., has added his support for legislation to continue the Golden Eagle Passport Program for admission to all national parks and outdoor recreation areas for a $7 annual fee.

The fee buys admission to more than 3000 federal parks and recreation areas across the country.

Originally authorized in 1966 the program was extended through March 1970, after objections were raised in the 90th Congress against user fees at projects paid for by taxpayers.

The legislation co-sponsored by Sen. Pearson was introduced by Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., chairman of the Senate Interior Committee. The legislation would reinstate the annual fee without limitation.

"I have received many indications of support for this program from Kansas," said the Kansas senator in announcing his action. "I certainly hope to see it continue. It is particularly beneficial to our older and retired citizens and to others who have the opportunity to visit outdoor recreation areas often."

The Bureau of Outdoor Recreation has estimated that more than $5.2 million will be raised by the program which benefits both federal and state recreation activities.

The receipts go into the land and water conservation fund and are distributed usually on a semi-annual basis to the states.

orderly changeover in home, farm and store pesticide stocks.

The difference between some pesticides and DDT or DDD is persistence. DDT and the lesser known DDD are chlorinated hydrocarbons that do not break down and dissipate readily after use.

Their general use in this major farming state has dropped in the last five years. They have been on the state's "injurious materials" list since 1963, meaning they could be used in agriculture only with a permit.

Foresee Little Impact To Truth-In-Lending Legislation

The typical American consumer won't change his spending habits when the federal truth-in-lending law takes effect July 1 and he is told he is paying 18 per cent annual interest on his charge account, many business-people believe.

"People will swallow a little harder when they realize the interest rate, but they'll still buy," says Robert Martindale, president of Midwest Bank Card System, a credit card service.

Government officials and businessmen said in a survey most consumers — who have $111 billion outstanding in credit payments, excluding home mortgages — now do little comparison credit shopping.

And they don't expect much of a change in consumer habits even under the new law's requirement for complete and detailed disclosure of figures on the cost of borrowing. The law will not change interest rates.

A department store, for instance, which says the charge for time payments is 1½ per cent interest per month on the unpaid balance must now state the real interest is 18 per cent annually.

The law also requires that lenders say in their advertisements what the true actual interest rate is as a percentage and what the total interest charge would be in dollars.

A spokesman for Consumers Union, a nonprofit testing and product advisory service, said, "We are hopeful that on large ticket items — cars and major appliances — people will shop around for credit. The law should make them more conscious of what they're paying."

"It is difficult to say what the reaction will be for less expensive items," he added.

A spokesman for the American Bankers Association, which had opposed the bill, says:

"Most people are not so much concerned by the interest rates, but rather by the monthly payments. Can they afford to pay the bill at the end of the month?"

"When they realize they are paying the same rates as before they'll still make the loan," he added.

The Federal Reserve Bank of Boston, which studied the Massachusetts truth-in-lending law, also came to the same conclusion: Massachusetts is one of six states that previously had enacted a law similar to the new federal statute.

"The anticipated consumer reaction simply did not occur in Massachusetts," the Federal Reserve reported.

Before the law was passed, the Federal Reserve said, proponents were certain it would provide consumers with a yardstick and therefore encourage credit shopping, resulting in more competition and lower rates. Opponents of the law said it would reduce consumer credit and hurt retail sales.

"It appears that truth-in-lending made no appreciable difference in sales and that there was little credit comparison," a Federal Reserve researcher said.

NO TO CUNNINGHAM

Glenn Cunningham cannot solicit funds for his youth ranch near Augusta, Mrs. Elwill Shanahan, secretary of state, has decided.

Mrs. Shanahan, who has authority to rule on a non-profit organization soliciting funds in the state, said she decided against the former KU distance runner because his home had not met standards for the care of children, that it had already solicited funds improperly, that it had misrepresented the number of children cared for at the facility, and that some funds solicited in the past had been used for personal expense.

Old Helium Plant At Otis Sold

OTIS — Slocum Gas Co., Dallas, Tex., was the successful bidder on the purchase of the World War II helium extraction plant here, which was declared surplus and offered for sale by the federal government two months ago.

The bid was $238,432, according to J. Wayne Harrop, an official of the General Services Administration.

Twelve bids were received on the facility, which was built in 1943 by the U.S. Bureau of Mines and shut down in April, 1968. Included in the sale were the helium extraction plant, five buildings, all equipment in the plant and 100 acres of land.

The property is a mile south and a quarter-mile east of this Tush County community. Harrop said it is not known when the Dallas firm will take possession of the plant.

HEAVY RAINS OVER FIELDS SOUTH OF JUNCTION CITY

Swollen Lyons creek spread over thousands of acres of farmland southwest of Junction City last week, following heavy rains. This flooded area is on the Richard Kind farm on old US77 about 10 miles south of Junction City.

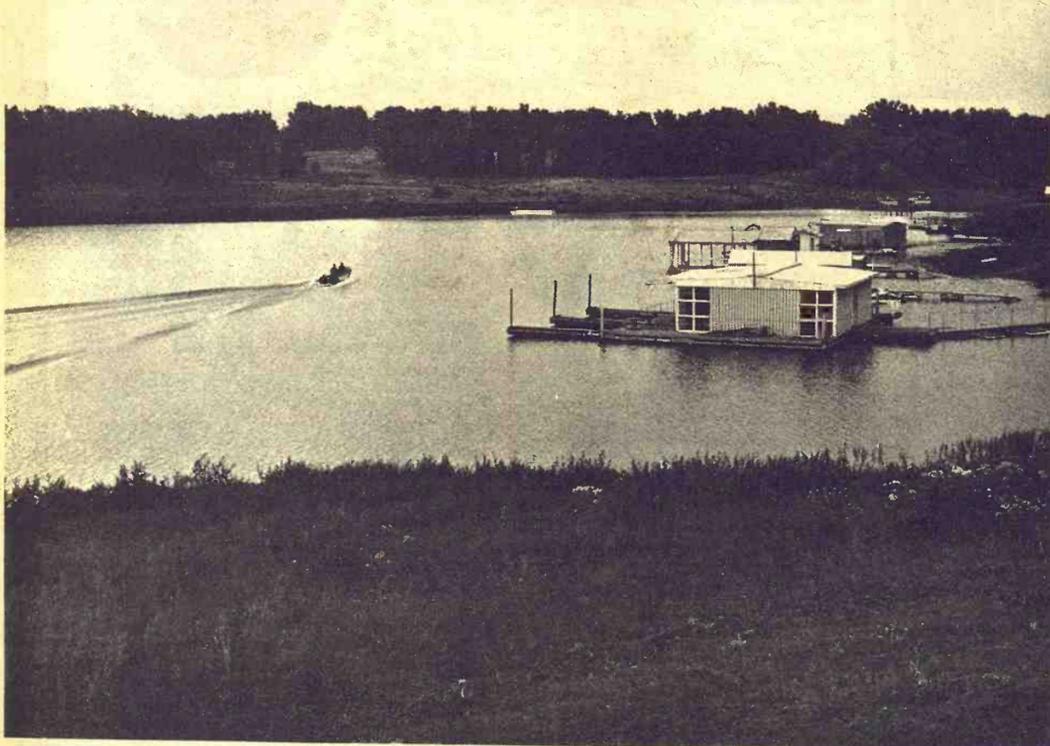

HAILSTONES

A strip of hail fell on an area from Burrton, in Harvey county, toward Moundridge and Hesston, leaving behind stones, like these, about the size of plums.

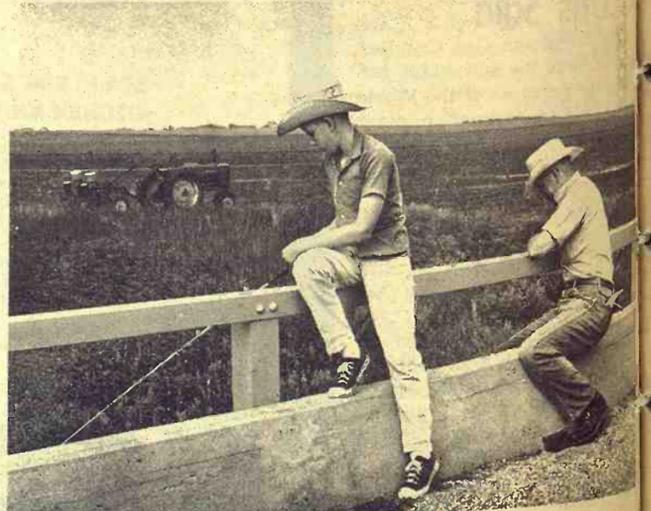

AFTER NINE INCHES OF RAIN

Glenn Ruhnke, Junction City, looks over wet fields after a cloudburst hit near Woodbine last week, dropping 9.75 inches of rain on area.

RAINY DAY ALTERNATIVE

If it's too wet to farm, why not go fishing? This peaceful scene at Kanopolis Reservoir shows the marina and a fishing boat on a cool and cloudy day.

FISHING DAY

Gordon Meagher and son Pete spend a Sunday afternoon fishing in a creek south of Solomon. Meagher, who lives nearby, said he had about 30 acres of feed planted before he got rained out again.

Amish Continue Battle To Survive

The live close to the soil, convinced that man best finds true humanity in honest toil, personal industry and homespun wisdom guided by the Bible. They spurn the modern vanities of fashionable clothes, social status, big cars, big television sets.

They are the Amish, and for more than a decade, particularly in parts of the Midwest, they've been under recurring pressure by educational systems, officers and courts to train their children according to state-fixed standards.

A new round in that battle resumes in county court in Monroe, Wis., where the state is pressing charges against three Amish fathers for allegedly refusing to send their high school age children to public school.

To force them into that educational environment would violate their religious rights, hinder their religious rearing and practice and "mortally threaten" the means of survival of a venerable religious community, says a brief filed in their behalf by William B. Ball, a Harrisburg, Pa., constitutional lawyer. On the other hand, the state contends their failure to accept public school is "against the peace and dignity of the state."

The case is one of a succession that have turned up in recent years in the Midwest — in Kansas, Iowa and elsewhere, in attempting to bring Amish schooling into conformity with state patterns.

"Not only religious liberty, but deep moral issues are involved," says the Rev. Dean M. Kelley, director of civil and religious liberties for the National Council of Churches.

He noted that while older eastern state laws allow alternative private-school criteria, the school systems to the West have stressed professional uniform requirements, resulting in conflicts with Midwestern Amish communities.

"They don't subscribe to society's technological-materialistic values, which are seen as dehumanizing and contrary to the will of God," he said. "It's a life-or-death matter to their whole way of life."

Actually, the Amish were among the founders of popular education nearly five centuries ago, insisting that all believers should be "trained in the Word," and not just the clergy.

Altogether there are about 160,000 Mennonites in the U.S. in several church bodies, with various degrees of strictness in custom.

While others have relaxed their rules on dress and transportation, the Amish stick to their old ways, wearing plain clothes, fastened with hooks and eyes instead of buttons, and use horse and buggy for travel.

They shun movies, dancing, showy possessions, drinking, competitiveness for rank and power, the pecuniary, consumer aspects of modern culture. "Be not conformed to this world but be transformed by the renewal of your mind," reads Romans 12:2. And they believe it.

The Amish maintain their own full-time schools through the eighth grade, but beyond that, sons and daughters learn farm and household skills under personal community guidance of their elders through an intensive apprenticeship.

None of the Amish has ever been arrested for a felony, nor have any ever been on public welfare. As farmers, they are highly proficient.

"They're producing better citizens than the rest of us," says Mr. Kelley. "Maybe we should try their kind of education instead of trying to make them conform to our sort of pot-smoking system."

Some Say There Is No Local Control At All Over Welfare Costs

TOPEKA — An investigation into whether mill levies raised in Kansas counties have any bearing on welfare costs has been begun by a Kansas Legislative Council committee.

The study is a move directed at considering the elimination of the mill levies to the 1970 Legislature to pay part of the cost of welfare programs in Kansas and having the state cover local government support of the programs.

Rep. Rex Borgen (R-Asherville), chairman of the legislative council public health and welfare committee, as well as chairman of the house public health and welfare committee, questioned whether local levies serve any purpose in keeping down welfare costs.

He said the state currently picks up the local share of the cost of the program for everything above 5 mills. He pointed out that the committee ought to consider either eliminating the local property tax levy or having counties levy for the full local shares.

Sen. C. Y. Thomas (R-Mission

Hills), a member of the committee, said he was interested in retaining the mill levy if there was any indication at all that the levy was having an effect in holding down welfare costs.

"As a matter of fact," Senator Thomas said, "I think this committee ought to look into what other states or areas might be doing in the way of incentives to keep local welfare costs down."

Rep. Robert Coldsnow (R-Wichita), a committee member, said the recent U.S. Supreme court ruling eliminating residency requirements as a prerequisite for welfare payments virtually did away with local control over costs.

"What this ruling does is say that we can no longer determine who will receive welfare in our county," Coldsnow said. "When we have no control over that, we have very little control over the size of our local welfare load."

"Under those kinds of circumstances, the mill levy we are required to pay cannot have too much effect on the total of our welfare costs since we cannot any longer control the number of persons to whom we are going to make payments. As far as I'm concerned, in that kind of a circumstance, we might as well eliminate mill levies."

Coldsnow also said that the elimination of residency requirements means that the welfare costs in metropolitan areas, which have traditionally had higher benefits than many rural areas, will rise because of the number of persons moving in to take advantage of those payments.

"It would seem to me that the state ought to pick up the local share instead of requiring Sedgwick County residents to levy a mill rate to pay the cost in a situation over which they have no control," Coldsnow said.

Rep. Bill Fribley (R-Crestline), chairman of the House ways and means committee and a member of the committee, said there are now some 28 counties in Kansas which are levying at or near the 5-mill maximum.

Among them he listed the three big metropolitan counties of Wyandotte, Shawnee and Sedgwick. He said the fourth of the counties in Kansas, Johnson, is levying only 2.45 mills for welfare.

"Of course, you can see that the levy has been going up yearly for the last four years," said Thomas, who is from Johnson County.

Statistics furnished by the Kansas legislative research department to the committee showed that in 1968 the amounts levied by each of the 105 counties for welfare purposes varied from a low of 0.24 and 0.25 of a mill in Stevens and Stanton counties up to a high of 5.46 mills in Doniphan County. The amount above five mills there was required to pay advances made by the state welfare department in the previous year.

Thomas said he believed there were a growing number of Kansans who believed that there were too many persons on welfare rolls and that something needed to be done to reduce the load. He said he would like to see the committee look into alleged abuses of the system.

Fish & Game Commission Buys 4800-Acre Ranch In Pratt County

PRATT — Purchase of the largest Pratt County ranch under one fence, the Betsy-T, has been announced by the Kansas Forestry, Fish and Game Commission.

George C. Moore, commission director, said the 4,820-acre ranch in northwest Pratt County will be used for wildlife management and public hunting purposes.

The ranch is in the sand hills area of the county and is largely pasture land. It will remain on the county tax rolls, Moore said.

Sale of the ranch was handled by Doug Wildin, representing Gene Watson Land & Livestock Co., Hutchinson, Kans.

"We utilized federal aid funds provided by the Pittman-Robinson Act to purchase the ranch," he said, "with the federal government to pay 75 per cent of the cost."

The commission is planning an extensive wildlife management program for the area, beginning with planting food plots and shelter belt areas to provide food and cover for quail, pheasants, rabbits and other wildlife, he added.

"In addition, some of the land will be leased to area residents for light grazing, which will not interfere with good game management," Moore said.

In addition to its hunting potential, the area should prove a popular spot for arrowhead collecting, nature photography and bird watching, Wildin said.

A strip along the northern side of the ranch was set aside at one time by the federal government as a passageway for Quapaw and Cherokee Indians to travel from their reservations in the East to buffalo grounds in western Kansas.

The north side of the ranch also is the northern border of Osage Indian trust lands, which extended south to the Mexican border and were granted by the government under a treaty written in 1825, Wildin added.

The Kansas Forestry, Fish and Game Commission owns or leases more than 150,000 acres of land in the state which is managed for wildlife production, hunting and fishing.

traditional markets for food, feed and fiber to substitutes and synthetics.

Substitutes are products which are manufactured from agricultural raw materials. Examples are coffee whiteness, margarine and meat analogs.

Synthetics are products which use raw materials derived from non-agricultural sources. Urea, saccharin and non-cellulose fibers are examples.

A combination of economic, technical, social and institutional factors are responsible for the growth of these synthetics and substitutes, says Arlo W. Biere, Kansas State University economist.

Increases in personal disposable income have influenced the demand for agricultural products and their competitors, he explains. People with higher incomes are willing to try new products. In addition, they demand products which are more convenient and are of a high, uniform quality.

On the production side is the premium which industry and society place on technology. The result is technological advance which has made possible development of synthetic and substitute products.

Social changes include substantial shifts not only in rural-urban distribution of population, but also shifts away from jobs which require high physical exertion. Both these factors have increased the demand for synthetics.

Finally, there are the institutional factors. Government legislation is more concerned about the needs of the consumer these days, Biere says. Agriculture's political influence has declined and it is less likely that laws will be passed to protect agriculture from synthetic and substitute products.

All this means, the economist says, that the farmer and other sectors of agriculture should be concerned about the consumer and his wants. If agricultural products do not meet his specifications, the consumer will look for a substitute.

Confusion Over State Parks And Waterway Rules

A Kansas House member said he believes the Legislature should consider creating a state department of recreation to develop over-all recreation policy and end jurisdictional disputes between the Kansas Forestry, Fish and Game Commission and the State Park Authority.

Rep. Robert Coldsnow (R-Wichita), a lawyer, told the Kansas Legislative Council public health and welfare committee that he believes the situation involving use of waterways for recreation needs a great deal of clarification.

"On federal reservoirs, for instance, we have one part of the water under the jurisdiction of the state park authority and other parts of it under the Kansas Forestry, Fish and Game Commission," Representative Coldsnow said.

"There are different regulations covering the various areas of water and yet there are no buoys or other markers to indicate to the boat operator these differences.

"It seems to me that Kansas is going to have to consider the possibility of creating a department of recreation so that these things are coordinated."

The committee is beginning a study into the need for better regulation of waterway use in Kansas from a marine safety standpoint.

Rep. Bill Fribley (R-Crestline) a member of the committee and chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, said as far as he could see there is currently no method of enforcing operating safety on boats on many of the federal reservoirs.

"They tell me there is no one with the jurisdiction that can say how old the person must be to operate a motor boat, what kind of safety regulations should be in effect, and even who has the right-of-way and a lot of other things," Fribley said.

"I think we probably need some kind of a law to give one specific agency the authority to deal with these things."

Representative Coldsnow said a good example is the Cheney reservoir where he said some of the best water skiing surface is under the jurisdiction of the Kansas Forestry, Fish and Game Commission and this automatically prohibits skiing.

"You see this big water area and it looks ideal for skiing," Representative Coldsnow said. "You get over there and you find out you are in violation of the commission regulations, but you don't have any way to know it."

"It seems to me there ought to be some kind of marking buoys so that a boat owner can know under what conditions he is operating in specific areas."

OF HOTELS AND SELLING CATTLE

Lynn Martin (left) and Dan Elam of Brookville stop for a chat in Brookville. Martin, who is retired, spends much of his time traveling. His son Cal Martin operates the historic Brookville Hotel. Lynn hands out brochures about the hotel wherever he travels. He has driven 69,000 miles in the last two years.

Dan Elam is a cattleman. He leases three sections of the government owned bombing range south of Brookville. He has 100 cows of his own and takes in cattle from others for summer grazing. He sold over 100 cows last fall, but said he wished he hadn't now.

Drug Industry Assailed By Former Company Medical Director

In an extraordinarily frank statement, the former medical director of the E. R. Squibb and Sons drug company, has lambasted the drug industry for using "gifts, gimmicks and gadgets" to sell dangerous or useless drugs to doctors and unsuspecting patients.

The statement came from Dr. A. Dale Console, a psychiatrist from Princeton, N. J., who until 1957 was medical director of Squibb for six years.

In a written reply of questions from Sen. Gaylord Nelson (D-Wis.), chairman of a Senate small business subcommittee that has been investigating the drug industry, Console said he quit Squibb because: "I reached a point where I could no longer live with myself."

A drug company doctor, he said, "must learn the many ways to deceive the FDA (Food and Drug administration) and, failing in this, how to seduce, manipulate, or threaten the physician assigned to the new drug application into approving it even if it is incomplete.

"He must learn that anything that helps to sell a drug is valid even if it is supported by the crudest testimonial, while anything that decreases sales must be suppressed, distorted and rejected because it is not absolutely conclusive proof.

"He must learn to word a warning statement so it will appear to be an inducement to use the drug rather than a warning of the dangers inherent in its use. He must learn, when a drug has been found too dangerous for use in this country, he can approve its use in other countries.

Asked by Nelson how physicians can be legitimately educated on the uses and dangers of prescription drugs, Console replied:

"How can legitimate education compete with the carefully contrived distortions driven home by the triphammer effect of weekly mailings, the regular visits of the detailmen (drug salesmen), the 2-page spreads and the ads that appear six times in the same journal; not to mention the added inducement of a free cocktail party and the golf outing complete with three gold golf balls stamped with the name of the doctor and the company in contrasting colors?"

"The average practitioner is the captive of the drug industry," Console said, and the American Medical Association is also a captive.

No More Poor People's Camps?

The House, in a belated reaction to last year's Poor People's campaign, has voted to bar the use of federal property in the district of Columbia for overnight camping.

The bill, aimed at preventing the establishment of an encampment similar to last year's Resurrection City, was sent to the Senate by a 327 to 51 vote. It removes from the executive branch of the government any authority to issue permits for any overnight camping in the District.

Rep. Ken Gray (D-Ill.) said Resurrection City cost the government more than 1 million dollars in direct and indirect costs. The Southern Christian Leadership conference, which sponsored the Poor People's campaign, has failed to respond to a bill for $71,000 as its share of the costs, he said.

While it is shocking, it is probably true that the chances that an average patient will get the right drug, in the right amount, at the right time, is in the order of 50 percent. Ineffective drugs, drugs that are not indicated, drugs that are effective in disorders different from the patient's illness, unnecessary ingredients in combinations are only some of the pitfalls," Console wrote.

"The unluckiest patient of all is the one who needs no drug, since, if he has a complaint, it is almost impossible to get out of the average practitioner's office without a prescription."

SOMETHING FANCY FOR CALIFORNIA

Plans have not been officially announced yet but a group of California legislators are planning something rather fancy for a new state capitol—a soaring $65 million twin-tower structure, modeled here.

Governor Reagan has not yet indicated what his attitude toward the proposal will be, but state newsmen generally think he will be opposed. Proponents of the new building, to replace the capitol built in 1896 in Sacramento, hope to finance the new structure with a loan from trust funds of the state employees retirement system.

Manhattan in Pottawatomie County 164. Only Emmett had a decrease. Township population was down by 26 persons.

Top Part Of Dairy Herd Averages $467

Reflecting the rising market in Holstein dairy cattle, the dispersal of the high grade herd of A. U. Breault & Son at their farm northeast of Aurora, Kans., Thursday, June 12, brought a top of $515 for cows.

By contrast, the one registered head, a Holstein bull, brought $500. The top 10 cows, according to the report of Gerald Zimmer who managed and auctioneered the sale, averaged $467 per head. Yearling heifers average $175.

There were 98 head of Holsteins in the herd. The Breaults closed out their dairy operations rather than go into the Grade A field. There were no available official production records.

U.S. Livestock Research Lab

Opened At Clay Center, Nebr.

CLAY CENTER, Neb. — Many farm and livestock industry leaders including Secretary of Agriculture Clifford Hardin were among more than 500 people on hand here for what may well prove to be an agricultural milestone.

The occasion was the official dedication of the new U.S. Meat Animal Research Center located near Clay Center in southeastern Nebraska.

The sprawling 35,000 acre facility is destined to become the hub for meat animal research in the United States. When fully developed, the center will house some 5000 beef cows, 4000 swine and 10,000 sheep. It will be manned by approximately 300 employees including 67 scientists.

Research conducted at the center will be aimed at a number of targets including improvement of carcass quality and cutability, increasing the reproductive ability of meat animals, upping feed efficiency and lowering the cost of meat production. Gains in any one of these areas could mean billions of dollars more for agriculture each year.

Site of the research center is the former Hastings Naval Ammunition Depot which was purchased through congressional appropriation in 1966. The facility is currently in the first of a two-phased construction program which initially involves construction of an office-laboratory building and several livestock units. This first phase is scheduled for completion in 1970.

Later construction will include facilities for livestock engineering research, facilities for meats research and animal and service buildings. A completion date for phase II construction was not announced.

Research at the center will be conducted by the USDA in cooperation with the University of Nebraska and other land grant university experiment stations. Initially, research will deal with three areas — animal husbandry, agricultural engineering and market quality.

Hardin noted that researchers foresee the day when livestock men will produce two calves per cow, 20 to 25 pigs per sow and three to four lambs per ewe each year. But it will take research to reach these goals.

Concerning the potential return from research in only one of these areas, carcass merit, he added that "if we could achieve an increase of just 5 per cent in the proportion of beef, pork and lamb carcasses which have the tenderness and flavor of higher priced cuts, the enhanced value of livestock would exceed a half billion dollars annually."

USDA Hiring Veterinarians

The Agriculture department is hiring about 30 veterinarians and 20 inspectors to fill gaps in the government's meat inspection program.

Dr. Robert K. Somers, deputy administrator for consumer protection, said, however, that more will be needed soon to meet the expansion of more plants coming under the federal program.

Somers said in an interview that the 50 new veterinarians and inspectors actually will be replacements for those who have resigned recently and that they will provide little net gain, if any.

The department employs more than 1,300 veterinarians who supervise around 6,000 inspectors in the federal meat and poultry inspection program at more than 3,000 plants. The employment picture has been complicated by an economy move last year in Congress directing agencies to roll back payrolls to 1966 levels.

The Agriculture department has been operating under a formula allowing only one replacement to be hired for every two persons who quit.

But, officials said, agencies within the department have juggled the formula to give priority to hiring of meat inspectors and veterinarians in an effort to meet the rising demand.
