Pleased With The Rain

Willie Samsel of Waterville was mighty pleased with the rains last week. He farms 800 acres south of Waterville but says he is going to cut down his farming operation next year.

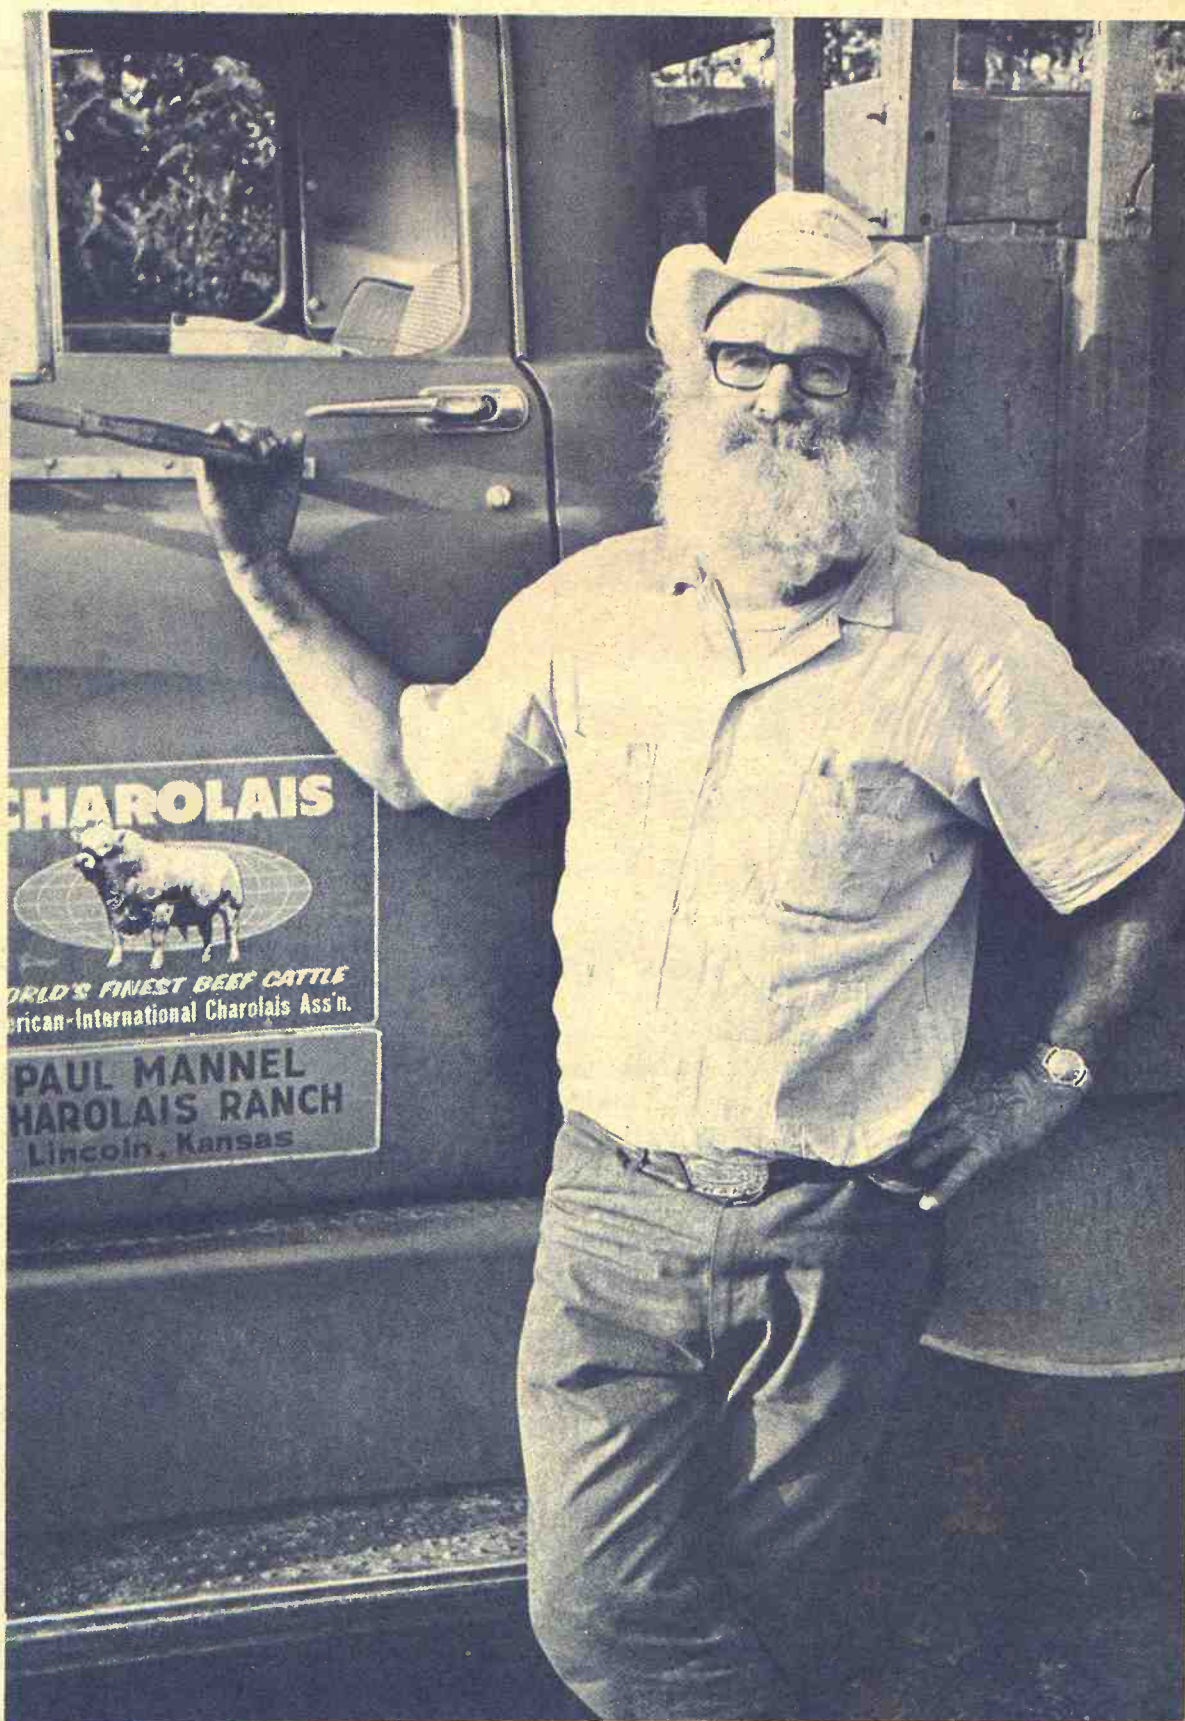

Kansas Wheat Symbol - 140 Foot High

Two years in the talking, a 140-foot stalk of golden wheat as a symbol of Kansas has been presented to the state as a plan for the State Fairgrounds at Hutchinson. The wheat symbol of flexible aluminum shafts anodized in gold, would be designed to sway in the Kansas wind. Conceived by Jack Jones, a Wichita architect, the symbol has been talked about for two years and now a corporation has been formed to develop the project and related projects. Nelson Hobart of Hutchinson is president. Can such a soaring, thin structure be engineered? The architect says there are "indications" it can be. Cost? Right now the planners are talking about $50,000, to come from private donations.

This "Western style Santa Claus" is Paul Mannel of Lincoln. He let the whiskers grow this summer for the Ellsworth Centennial. He drove a team of mules in the Centennial Parade pulling a 1901 hearse-wagon.

Paul operates a 1280 acre ranch southwest of Lincoln and breeds Charolais cattle. He has 60 head of Charolais cows and 30 heifers. Paul has grown the whiskers about long enough now. He plans to shave them off soon.

Soybean Output Exceeding Use

Soybean production exceeded use and exports in the past year, and it will probably do so again this year. This situation tends to push soybean prices down to (and below) the support level. If enough beans are placed under price support, prices will rise enough above the loan level to cause farmers to repay their loans and sell their beans at a profit.

According to USDA estimates, soybean production last year totaled 931 million bushels. The amount used and exported appears to have been around 865 million bushels — give or take a few million. That left about 65 million bushels to be added to carryover stocks.

Carryover stocks on September 1 appear to have been around 95 million bushels — compared with only 30 million a year ago.

The 1967 soybean crop will total about 1 billion bushels, according to official estimates made on the basis of conditions as of September 1. Disappearance may be 900 to 925 bushels, which would be 5 to 7 per cent more than in the past year. These figures suggest that the addition to the carryover may be 75 to 100 million bushels. Such an addition would swell the total carryover next fall (September 1, 1968) to near (or above) 175 million bushels.

This figure is, of course, only a personal estimate. The actual carryover may be 25, even 50 million bushels more or less than we now expect. An exact forecast is not necessary. The important point is that the 1967 crop is going to be well above what will be used and exported.

As it appears now, neither farmers nor dealers will want to hold such a large amount of soybeans. Thus, most of the carryover next September will probably either be under price support loans or owned by the CCC. This could not happen, except by the price going below the support level so that growers put all unneeded beans under loans.

If farmers put enough beans under price support, a shortage of beans for crushing and export would develop. In that event, prices would rise above the support level. Prices would go up enough so that it would be profitable for farmers to sell beans that are under loan — and repay the loans, with interest.

As of early September, these are our views and expectations. But we know there will be changes and new developments each week. Watch for them.

Payoff In Treating Seed

Wheat yield potential for the 1968 crop can be increased by seed treatment with a proper fungicide. And it's not too late in many sections of the state to take this important step.

This statement applies even to seed of high laboratory germination, Claude King, Extension plant pathologist, explains. Increases of up to 20 percent in wheat and barley stands have been recorded in K-State field research over the past several years when the seed was treated with a proper fungicide.

Yields also can be boosted, according to the research results. You can expect at least a 1-bushel increase in yield as a result of this seed protection treatment, giving a return of $20 for $1 spent on the fungicide, King adds.

Clean the seed before it is treated to remove shriveled and cracked kernels, weed seeds, and straw, he suggests. In the K-State tests, 60-pound test weight seed has yielded 5 bushels more per acre than 53 pound test weight seed.

Producers can treat seed in an auger, barrel treater, or cement mixer if custom service is not available. If an auger loader is used, run it at about half capacity when treating seed. Spoon-feed dust or liquid forms of any of the recommended fungicides with the grain as it enters the base of the auger. This should be done each time a bushel or two of seed passes.

Fungicides recommended for treating wheat and barley seed are Panogen, Ceresan, Chipcote, Ortho LM Concentrate, and Memmi. Ortho HCB is to be used only on wheat seed.

Treat no more seed, or a little less, than needed, King advises. There shouldn't be any left-over treated seed. If more is needed, wheat and barley can be treated in the drill box with Ceresan M-DB or Panogen PX. Ortho HCB can be used in drill-box treatment, but only with wheat.

Clean the auger or other treater by putting soil through it after the seed has been treated, King adds. This is to prevent livestock feed or market grain from becoming poisoned.

200 To 1 Mail Against Surtax

Sen. James B. Pearson says his mail is running about 200 to 1 in opposition to the President's proposal for a 10 per cent surtax on current federal income taxes.

An analysis of the letters shows, he said, "a widespread lack of faith in the Johnson administration's handling of domestic and foreign affairs and a consensus that a reasonably case for the tax increase simply has not yet been made."

But the senator added in a statement that Congress may have to vote a surtax into law if it concludes that serious inflation will occur without it.

"We believe that the dilemma we now face is not so much the result of the recent development of unforeseen and uncontrolled events, but primarily the result of too little candor and too much 'political concens's' over the past three years," he said.

Garden City Experiment Station Adds A Livestock Researcher

Dr. Dudley W. Arnett has been added to the staff of the Garden City Branch Experiment Station as project leader for research with beef cattle, sheep, and dairy cattle.

His appointment is recognition by the state of the economic importance of livestock in Western Kansas. Dr. Floyd W. Smith, director of the Kansas Agricultural Experiment Station, said. Dr. Arnett fills a position authorized during the last session of the state legislature.

His formal training is in animal nutrition and he has had practical experience in managing livestock in both Texas and Kentucky.

He was born at Lubbock and grew up on his parents' ranch near Big Spring, Texas. His education through college was in Texas with advanced degrees from the University of Kentucky and a year on the Armour beef cattle improvement project at Stephenville, Texas.

His first assignment at the Garden City branch station is to develop facilities for 150 to 200 beef cattle to be used in feeding, digestion, and other experiments.

The station has had a small steer herd; it has an experimental dairy herd of 130 animals and it uses about 600 lambs a year in feeding trials.

Sportsmen Ire Over Seasons

JUNCTION CITY — Besides going on record against 1967 quail and pheasant seasons in Kansas, officers of three Kansas sportsmen's organizations have given their unanimous support to the present director and department heads of the Kansas Fish and Game Commission.

A statement written by Ted Cunningham, Wamego, president of the Riley County Fish and Game Assn. was approved by 30 officers and directors from that club, Saline County rod and Gun Club and the Geary County Fish and Game Assn.

The statement:

"At a meeting here last night, representatives of about 2000 sportsmen voiced their unanimous disapproval of the recent voting record of three Forestry, Fish and Game commissioners, Lloyd Brown, Charles Hulme and Harlan Boxberger, who took it upon themselves to overrule the recommendations of 14 professional biologists of the commission.

"The biologists recommended a 51-day quail season, also approved by the director, George Moore, which was cut to 33 days. With no basis of fact for their actions, they have penalized about 200,000 hunters over the state.

"The meeting was held to ask the question statewide, 'Why should three individuals, that seem to be no more qualified than the average sportsman, be allowed to have the ultimate and final say on seasons that have a direct impact on the winter economy of the state?'

"The representatives also gave their unanimous support to the present director and department heads of the present commission. It is a publicized fact that the recent appointee from Great Bend is opposed to the present director for personal reasons. It was for this reason that he sought and obtained the appointment. Six years of progress can be set back 20 years if such actions are allowed to continue in Kansas. It's time for sportsmen to arise and voice their opinions and protect their heritage to hunt and fish in the Sunflower State."

Hulme, who was appointed to the commission recently by Gov. Robert Docking, lives at Great Bend.

For an attractive and delicious meal, try serving salmon this way:

SALMON-IN-A-SHELL

Combine in a large mixing bowl:

- 1/4 cup chopped celery

Use Natural Accents For Fall Tablesettings

Sleek but colorful contemporary table service can be beautifully accented with natural accessories. A pine-cone flower and dried wheat centerpiece gives a decorative focal point to informal fall table-setting. The season's first gourds set on the table add to the theme.

The summer's last days give a perfect opportunity to collect nature's gifts such as these and will bring back happy memories all year around. Treasures to collect might discover pretty pebbles discovered during the sunset on a deserted coastline beach, slender branches of silvery bark from a remote birch-circled lakeside; or even dried field flowers from a visited farmyard.

When fall comes, dinnertime becomes the main center of shared time in many families. School activities and adult projects and plans are renewed with vigor. Creating the setting for leisurely meals together adds grace to these shared hours. An informal table-setting for pre-football lunch, fall hike or simply for fun is sure to please the whole family.

Easy styling and easy care go hand in hand in this tablesetting designed around this new classic rimmed Melamine dinnerware called "Vera Cruz." Golds and rusts are combined in the cheerfully decorated plate with all-over pattern and coordinated solid accessory pieces. A new process protects the dinnerware from stains of even coffee or tea and they are guaranteed for two years against chipping, breaking or cracking.

The rough-hewn textural quality of pine cones and gourds makes an exciting play against good modern design. The pine cones have been transformed into rustic flowers for the centerpiece and painted to coordinate with the dinnerware. To make the quick change, sever the pine cones about 1½ inches from the base. Thread a wire through some of the petals at the back to make a stem. Spray paint the cones to coordinate with your linens. After they have dried, paint the center a contrasting color with a small brush. Both rustic flowers and wheat shafts can be anchored in styrofoam to make the centerpiece.

Compliment Front Entry With Combination Door

a variety of styles and in stock sizes. They include a panel door, a graceful pediment, decorative side pillars, fan lights, side lights and a number of other decorative features to suit any architectural decor.

Modern combination doors of ponderosa pine have interchangeable panels of screen and storm sash. This door is permanently installed, so there's no need to remove and install screen or storm doors with the changing seasons. All that's required to fit the entrance for winter or summer is a change of panels.

Stock combination doors are chemically treated against year-round weather abuse and are available at local lumber dealers in a variety of styles. They can be painted or stained to match the front door.

Camouflaging your front door with an unattractive screen or storm sash is like hiding your light under a bushel.

To let your house entrance glow with twice the beauty and elegance, choose a combination door that compliments the front door instead of detracting from it.

One way to do this is with stock ponderosa pine panel entries and matching combination doors. Complete, pre-assembled entryways are available in

ON PURINA CATTLE STARTERS IN 24 HOURS

Your cattle can settle down to a full ration within the first 24 hours in the feedlot with Purina Cattle Starters. Nearly 500,000 did last year.

To finish on time, your cattle must get a good start. The difference a starting ration can make was shown in recent tests comparing Purina Cattle Starters #1 and #2 with stilbestrol to a starter without it. Cattle on Purina Cattle Starters with stilbestrol averaged 33% faster gain on 24% less feed.

If you're convinced the first 2 weeks in the feedlot are critical, try filling "green" cattle with hay and water, then put them on Purina Cattle Starter #1 free choice. A week later switch them to Purina Cattle Starter #2 to wind up a good start.

Stop by your Checkerboard store to talk about a feeding program for your next bunch of cattle.

Gilmore-Tatge Adds A Tool Thru Plant Buy

CLAY CENTER — A G&T area farm manufacturer, Gilmore-Tatge Mfg. Co., has purchased a Nebraska firm, principally for a new cultivating tool, the Clay Center company announced last week.

Tooling equipment, unfinished parts and finished goods of the Sokol Mfg. Co. of Norfolk, Nebraska, will be moved to the Clay Center plant in October and manufacturing operations will start there shortly thereafter.

The tool is a rotating shield to work in "trash farming," a type of cultivation in which old corn stalks or other row crop stalks are left on the surface of the soil to assist in holding moisture and reducing soil blowing.

Tractor speeds can be increased as much as 50% when the tool is used, said M. W. Gilmore of the Clay Center firm.

Production at Clay Center will come mainly during the winter months when production of products now manufactured by Gilmore-Tatge is at its lowest.

Sokol is a family-owned business associated with the Irrigation Pump Co. of Columbus, Nebr., which is consolidating its operations in the Columbus plant. That is the reason for the sale of the Sokol division, Gilmore said.

The sale was for cash and did not involve the transfer of stock.

Governor Says He'll Name His Own Livestock Man

Gov. Robert Docking says he is planning to go ahead with the appointment of a new Kansas livestock sanitary commissioner and then let opponents of the move challenge the appointment in the courts.

"As of today we have used every avenue I know of to resolve the situation without opening the door to probably litigation," Docking said at a press conference.

"The next move is up to me." Under law, the governor appoints the livestock sanitary commissioner with the recommendation of the Kansas Livestock Association.

Docking has stated he would not reappoint A. G. Pickett, livestock sanitary commissioner who doubles as vice president and secretary-treasurer of the livestock association.

In the 1966 election campaign, Pickett editorially supported Docking's opponent, former Gov. William H. Avery, in a magazine published by the livestock association.

The livestock association has taken the position it will not recommend anyone other than Pickett for the state job.

Docking contends this, in effect, delegates the appointive power of the governor to a private organization.

Docking also has been engaged in a controversy with the livestock association over nominees for the position of state brand commissioner.

State law provides for the governor to appoint a brand commissioner from a list of three nominees submitted by the livestock association.

Docking contends two lists submitted by the livestock association have not been bona fide nominations.

Docking said that regardless of the outcome, he will submit recommendations to the next session of the legislature to correct the situation.

He said his recommendations might possibly call for taking the two posts, livestock commissioner and brand commissioner, from the political arena and put them under civil service.

Colleges First In Priority For State School Dollars, Says Governor

State aid to higher education should receive priority over assistance to elementary and secondary schools, Gov. Robert Docking said at Pittsburg last week.

In remarks prepared for delivery at the opening convocation of Pittsburg State College, the governor declared, "Kansas is at a point in its development when we must set a priority list specifically listing what we can afford, and what we must omit, from within the financial structure of government."

"We must decide that we cannot continue to double the state expenditure to elementary and secondary education as was the case the last three years."

"We must decide that $90 to $100 million may well be the state's proper share of financial responsibility at the local school level."

The school foundation finance plan, which contains the state's share of aid to local, elementary and high schools, has a budget for this fiscal year of about $92 million.

The governor also hinted a similar slowdown in state aid to junior colleges.

"We must decide," he said, "That the junior college is not to be used as a promotional enterprise in a great many communities."

"Its function must be that of enhancing higher education or providing training for our young adults."

"We must slice the educational tax dollar accordingly, in favor of higher educational requirements.

There is little question but that the state has historically viewed higher education as a first responsibility.

At Wakefield Farmers Fair

78th annual Wakefield Free Fair and Farmers Institute will be Juanita Luthi, who will give a talk, "Cooking With Your Hat On." She is a home service director for an area gas company and the daughter of Mrs. Minnie Luthi of Wakefield.

Buy A Company For This Project

A G&G area manufacturer, Gilmore-Tatge of Clay Center, has purchased a Nebraska firm to acquire this new rotating shield for cultivators. The shield replaces the fenders used on many cultivators and is designed to prevent field trash piling up in the cultivator.

Wheatgrowers Ask For Export Certificate

The Kansas Association of Wheat Growers is supporting an export certificate on wheat to improve producer income, President George W. Meeker, Garden City, said last week.

"We are getting only 50 per cent of parity — $1.30 or less — on wheat going into export at the present time," Meeker said. "Even though we are receiving 100 per cent parity on wheat used domestically for food, 65 per cent of our production must be sold at the lower price."

Meeker said in statements to pre-convention district meetings of the organization held at Ulysses, Oakley, Hays, Salina and Pratt that labor organizations over a period of years have improved the income position of American labor through demands, negotiation and strike.

"I don't think labor would be satisfied for 50 per cent of parity — one half the hourly wage — on that part of their work going into export, and I don't think the Kansas wheat producer should be satisfied with it either," he said.

'Disrespect For Law Shows At Fairtime'

HUTCHINSON — Police Chief Bob Adams says he is concerned about "growing resentment, disrespect and open defiance" shown by some fairgoers toward his officers and marching high school bands.

According to Adams, several fair patrons spit at his officers, cursed them and hurled mud while police attempted to clear a path for band members marching through the fairgrounds.

Adams said that until a couple of years ago there was no trouble and persons reacted courteously when asked to move aside. "The last couple of years, our officers have sensed growing resentment and this year it's worse than ever," he said.

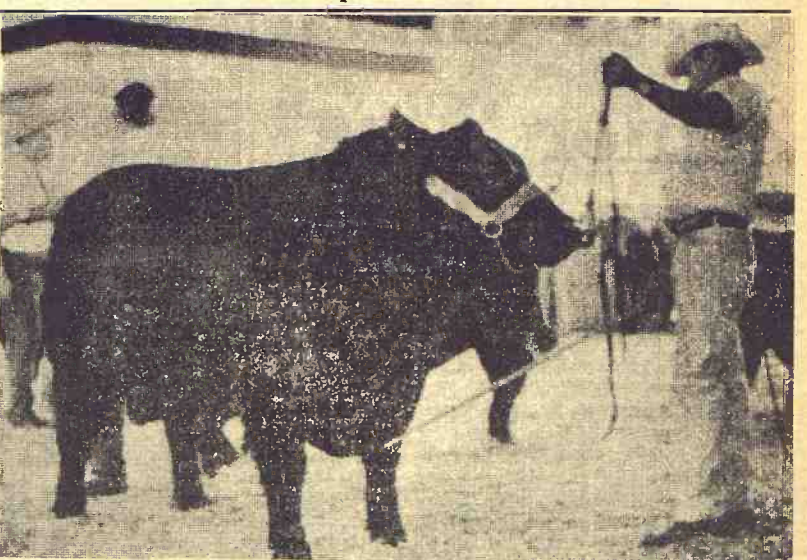

Police have tried to move the agitators gently and no arrests have been made. Adams, however, plans to request that the state fair board review its policy before next year allowing bands to march through the crowded grounds.

WAMEGO WILL GET NEW POST OFFICE

WAMEGO — Wamego will get a new postoffice. The location will be on the south side of Fifth Street between Elm and Lincoln. Plans call for a 3500 square foot building with over 9000 square feet of parking. The postoffice will lease the building from a builder who will construct according to department specification.

$10 COUNTERFEITS FOUND IN AREA

Counterfeit $10 bills were reported in Topeka and Junction City last week. All were reported to have the same number — F 02152448 A — and police described them as poor quality.

Fair Angus Champ

Wet Corn

One of many converts in the G&G area to feeding wet corn is Dick Wellman of Sterling, who believes grain feeding becomes more efficient and less costly by feeding high-moisture corn.

Wellman feeds 2000 head of cattle a year besides putting another 2000 head on grass. He has been harvesting corn at 24 to 26 percent moisture, believing it threshes easier and reduces field risk. The system demands precise controls tho, says Wellman.

"I can't claim this is an original idea because it's being done other places. However I do think it holds great promise for both beef producers and farmers. Corn can be a much more important crop here than it is now."

WHAT EACH STATE SPENT IN '66 FOR EACH PUPIL

What Schools Cost In The Fifty States

This chart shows what each state spent in 1966 for each pupil. The figure includes dollars from local, state and federal sources. Kansas, with a $553 per pupil expenditure, is about in the middle.

New York has the highest expenditure per pupil, at $912. Mississippi has the lowest, $315. These figures are colored somewhat by the amount of personal income available for each school-age child. New York, for example, has nearly $14,000, but Mississippi has only $5000.

A Great Corn Year

The state's longtime corn citadel, the northeast corner around Brown and Doniphan counties, isn't the only area that will have an outstanding 1967 crop. Near Colwich on the Cleo Lagaly farm a 170-bushel per acre crop was being harvested off irrigated land.

Combination Farm, With Limits, Pays Best

By John H. Coolidge
Farm Management Economist
Kansas State University

Wheat is generally thought of as the No. 1 moneymaker on Kansas farms. But livestock and livestock products bring Kansas farmers more than half their farm income.

Naturally, the best arrangement is to combine the two—livestock and crops. Farmers who concentrate on one type of livestock in combination with cash crops are more likely to do best in the long run.

Farm Management Association records bear this out. In north central Kansas, farms that combine a cash crop with a single livestock enterprise have been the most profitable during the past 12 years. A combination of cash crops and hogs ranked first, cash crop and a cowherd was second, and cash crops combined with dairying ranked third.

General livestock farms — those with too many small enterprises for either volume and efficiency — have been at the bottom. These farms are not the smallest in size, but are too low in value of crop production per acre and lowest in livestock production per unit and in gross income per man.

Farms that combined beef and hog production ranked fourth, cash crops combined with a beef feeding program ranked fifth, and beef and poultry combinations were sixth.

Farms where cash crops alone were the major enterprise were seventh. Those that combined sheep with cash crop production were eighth. And the general livestock farms were ninth.

It all adds up to this. Farmers who concentrate on a couple of major enterprises will fare better in the long run than those who try to be a jack-of-all-trades. The big reason is efficiency.

The answer is for a farmer to pick a combination of enterprises that fits his farm, his finances, and his family, then do the best job he can with his resources.

Quiet Meeting On Feedlot Runoff Control

A hearing to make permanent rules controlling livestock feedlot runoff did not draw any mass opposition from cattlemen at Topeka last week.

Only two men made formal appearances opposing Board of Health regulations which have been in effect on an emergency basis since last May. Proposed regular adoption of the regulations would make them effective next January 1 for an indefinite period.

The only opposition at the hearing came from Russ Anderson, Emporia feedlot operator, and L. G. Ransbottom of Hebron, Nebr., who runs feedlots in Republic County.

Appearing in favor of permanent regulation were men from the State Board of Health, Forestry, Fish & Game Commission, and the Kansas Wildlife Federation.

CAPACITY

(The bigger the "bite" you take on every round, the more you appreciate the extra work capacity of Case high-torque power.)

New Case 930 Special. True "western-style" design plus row-crop versatility.

Stepping up to as big a tractor as your farm can justify is good business. Keeps your heavy tillage schedules on target. Makes your time more productive.

Stepping up to Case high-torque power pays still bigger dividends. For, whether you operate a 3-plow Case 430 or the big 6-plow 930 shown above, you'll find something extra going for you with Case. The big extra? Torque! High torque from true tractor-engine design: big bore, long stroke, relatively low rpm. Big-leverage muscle that takes you through heavy going that would make other tractors shift or stall. Lets you handle bigger implements, work at higher speeds ... with confidence.

Invest in that bigger tractor you need in '67 ... but get the one with high-torque reserve capacity. See your Case dealer. He has the power—3-plow to 8-plow—to help you make more money. And a Crop-Way Purchase Plan tailored to your needs.

Going Underground In Tokyo

Real estate prices have soared so much in crowded Tokyo that underground shops, entertainment facilities, and parking areas — sometimes four stories deep — have marked new trends in construction in Japan.

Tobacco Farmers Unsettled By Change In Demand For Lower Leaf

U.S. tobacco farmers are talking about little else but a drastic change in the buying of the cigarette companies who are now bidding higher for the lower leaves of the tobacco plant but have drastically reduced their bids for the higher leaves, which were previously regarded as the best part of the plant.

Cigarette makers aren't talking about it, but apparently the change is a response to medical criticism which links cigarettes with cancer.

The lower leaves of the plant have a lower nicotine content than the higher leaves.

"It's crazy," says Ralph Massengill of Princeton, N.C. "You can't raise a tobacco crop and let it be all bottom leaves."

Massengill compared a pile of dark chaffy tobacco which had just been bought for 68 cents a pound. Last year its price was about 55 cents.

"Look at that," he snorted. "They are paying good money for that trash (bottom stalk tobacco). I used to throw that kind of tobacco in the barn for the horses to sleep on."

That compares with a pile of golden tobacco leaf from the upper middle portion of the stalk — the kind of tobacco that used to be photographed for tobacco advertisements — which brought only 70 cents. A year ago it was more likely to bring 80 cents.

Besides having more nicotine, the leaves from the top part of the stalk are heavier than those from the bottom. The average tobacco stalk has 20 to 22 leaves, but only about six of them are regarded as "bottom leaves."

With costs for labor and equipment steadily increasing, many farmers are convinced they will make substantially less from this year's tobacco crop than they did from last year's — perhaps 10 to 20 percent less.

How Did Buffalo Calf Get A White Face?

LONGFORD — Ray O. Smith, Longford, says he owns 3½ buffalos.

"I've been told that buffalos and cattle don't cross," Smith said, "but I've got a buffalo cow who has a white-faced calf."

Smith raises registered Herefords and has several bulls in the pasture where his buffalos are kept.

"One thing about it, the calf has good blood on his father's side," he commented.

Smith discovered the calf while riding horseback in the pasture.

"The calf was up and standing in tall grass. It has a white face — that's all I could determine."

"The white didn't appear to extend completely back behind the ears and jowls, however."

"I got within 75 yards when that old mother buffalo charged. I tell you she gained ground fast."

"The horse and I got out of there in a hurry."

Besides the cow buffalo, Smith has a yearling bull and a 2-year-old heifer.

The 'Free Gift' From Washington

From The Salina Journal
The rhubarb about the airplane trip to Washington by Governor Docking & Friends so they might be re-briefed on Vietnam for a Democratic rally is a political ploy, of course.

There is a point in the conversation, however, that applies with equal force to Republicans, Democrats and those in between.

In defending the trip, Mr. Docking said no state funds were expended. He undoubtedly is correct. Uncle Sam footed the bill.

All of us tend to consider federal funds as a form of manna from heaven, a free gift to be as freely spent.

We forget that at least part of those federal funds are our own money, paid directly to Washington through income and excise taxes or indirectly through higher prices that hide federal levies.

This tendency to ignore the connection between federal spending and our own pocketbooks is a phenomenon with which politicians are well acquainted. It is not even surprising that a banker-governor should be taken in by it.

This memory lapse is in part responsible for the proposal that more federal funds be spent for local purposes to relieve local taxes. That this would keep taxes down is a half-illusion — as if we did not fork up to the IRS!

It is a half-illusion because Kansas does not pay as much federal taxes per capita as do wealthier states, and we would benefit to that extent. Nevertheless, a substantial portion of the federal largess would be out of our own pockets.

Moreover, we tend to be more free-wheeling and wasteful with Washington money than with Topeka or courthouse money. We are tricked by mileage: the further tax money travels, the less responsibility we feel for it.

It is unfortunate indeed that distance lends such enchantment.

More Profits From Cutability Grading

For years packer buyers have bought live cattle on the basis of estimating their grade and dressing percentage with little reference to carcass cutability. Fatter, longer fed cattle hang a heavier carcass in the packers cooler so this has been their aim. However, food store buyers aren't looking for high dressing carcasses but select the trim, meatier ones that yield more lean, retail cuts and pay the packer a premium for them.

In September of 1963 the USDA revised the carcass beef grading standards to include cutability standards on an optional basis. "Cutability" is defined as the indicated percent of trimmed boneless, major retail cuts to be derived from the carcass.

Conflicting ideas of food store and packer buyers when buying beef have long hurt the industry. The packer wanted them fat and the retailer them lean. This situation is finally changing with one major packer now buying fed cattle under their own cutability grading program and others are sure to follow their lead.

Cattlemen must now push hard to make sure their best interests are considered when this practice becomes industry wide. They must make sure premiums paid end up in their pocket and that this marketing tool is used to their advantage.

GARY W. BECK
Farm Service

Producers must also be prepared to take a discount on overdone carcasses undesirable in cutability, but once they become aware of this price differential, their production and marketing practices could be adjusted accordingly. The lessons of history have proven that beef men will not market younger, lighter weight cattle unless there is some price incentive to encourage them to market cattle when they reach their peak. This should tend to reduce tonnage going to market and bring supply more in line with demand.

'Every Year Two More Senators Learn What Milo Is'

"Every year, two more senators learn what milo is."

The speaker was a member of the Kansas City board of trade, quoted by Kansas City farm writer Rod Turnbull.

The comment was both facetious and grim, but it does indicate something of the growth of grain sorghums as a major U.S. crop.

The 1967 milo harvest is now estimated by USDA to be a record 791 million bushels as the size of the crop increases gradually almost every year. The big production states are Texas, Kansas and Nebraska.

Grain sorghums also seem to be in a better market position than other grains. That is, there is no immediate danger of oversupply. While more has been produced each year, so has more been used.

Following are some statistics on grain sorghums which show that production has been expanding, utilization has been increasing, and the carryover has been falling.

Production in 1963 was 585 million bushels, while the carryover on October 1, 1963, was 655 million bushels; in 1964, production was 490 million bushels and the carryover 649 million bushels; in 1965, production was 673 million and the carryover 566 million; in 1966 production was 720 million and the carryover 391 million.

This year production is estimated at 791 million bushels and the carryover on October 1 is expected to be 225 million bushels.

The grain sorghum marketing year is from October 1 to October 1.

Total utilization of grain sorghums in 1963-64 was 591 million bushels; in 1964-65, 573 million; in 1965-66, 848 million; in 1966-67, an estimated 886 million.

These figures indicate that in each of these years, more of this feed grain was used than grown, hence the drop in the carryover.

Every year, the carryover has been owned almost entirely by the Commodity Credit Corporation, the government's grain agency.

The CCC now owns about 193 million bushels of the estimated 225 million bushel carryover.

There are three principal outlets for grain sorghums.

First is domestic consumption for livestock and poultry feed. Next comes exports, and third is seed and industrial uses.

Seed (for the new crop each year) and industry utilize about 13 million bushels of grain sorghums annually.

Domestic consumption was 407 million bushels in 1963-64; 412 million in 1964-65; 569 million in 1965-66; and 613 million in 1966-67.

Exports were 107 million bushels in 1963-64; 148 million in 1964-65; 266 million in 1965-66, and 260 million is the estimated total for 1966-67.

The first government estimate on utilization for the 1967-68 year will be made November 6.

Grain sorghums compete with corn. Feed manufacturer representatives at the Board of Trade say that in mixed feeds, the milo is worth a little less than corn for poultry but is about equal to corn for cattle and hogs.

This year corn production is setting a record too. Obviously, the competition will be strong as between corn and grain sorghum.

Where cattle and hogs are being fed, local price will be a factor. Thus in Texas and Western Kansas, where the grain sorghum is available locally and there will be no freight charge against it, it will be used. On the other hand, it would not be expected that much grain sorghum will be shipped into Iowa.

The competition between corn and grain sorghum probably will show up this year most in the broiler sections of Georgia and other southern states. These areas have been heavy users of both corn and grain sorghums in recent years.

Some Kansas City traders, and exporters who deal heavily in feed grains believe, at this point, that domestic usage of grain sorghums may be down some in the marketing year just ahead, while exports may be up a little.

They doubt that the increased exports will be sufficient to overbalance the decrease in domestic consumption. This reasoning suggests that total utilization in the new marketing year may not be quite as large as in the year just ending.

However, these same authorities believe that over the years the rise in total grain sorghum utilization will continue.

To sum up statistically, grain sorghum supplies are in fairly good balance with historical demand, but whether that demand in the year ahead will be as large as it was this year is doubtful. The big corn crop obviously will affect prices on grain sorghum in all areas in which the two crops compete.

It might be added that prices on livestock and poultry also will affect prices on feed crops, and, of course, competition in world markets will be a factor because so much U.S. grain now is exported.

Rice Paddies In G&G Area Last Week

Any part of the G&G area which didn't accumulate at least four inches of rainfall last week just wasn't in the game. Six inches was more like the average, and Russell measured seven inches in one fall.

A not-untypical scene was one like this one on the Pete Humbarger farm south of Niles along the Solomon river where a tractor and springtooth were idled.

More extreme was the scene at right. Only the top of a car belonging to Mrs. Esther Chase can be seen after it was swept off US40 highway by swirling waters near Abilene. Mrs. Chase was rescued but her 1966 car was left in four foot of water.

State Tractor Entry Is Sterling 4-Her

Charles Magoffin, Sterling, will represent Kansas in the Western U.S. 4-H Tractor Operator's Contest October 8-10 at the University of Nebraska, Lincoln.

Winner of the 1966 State 4-H Tractor Operators' Contest at the Kansas State Fair, Hutchinson, Charles is a Reno County 4-H'er and the son of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Magoffin. He was the 1966 Kansas state award winner and one of 12 national winners in the tractor project.

Charles is responsible for the care of the tractors and equipment on his home farm including 430 acres of rented land with wheat the major crop. He plans to major in agricultural engineering in college and possibly return to farming after working in the agriculture mechanization field.

The contest, sponsored by the Cooperative Extension Service and the American Oil Foundation, will include more than 20 state 4-H tractor operators, each a first place winner in state contests.

John A. True, Extension agricultural engineer, Kansas State University, will accompany Charles to Lincoln and will be one of the contest judges.

Contestants will demonstrate their ability in each of these areas of the event. The boys will be quizzed on the steps in servicing a tractor and demonstrate operating skill with both a two- and a four-wheel wagon attached. Skill in maneuvering the course, safety precautions, and time required will determine the score.

VETERAN DOCTOR FINED ON ABORTION CHARGE

A longtime G&G area physician, Dan Bolton, 75 of Frankfort, Marshall County, was fined $500 and given a one-year suspended sentence in district court for causing an abortion. Bolton, now retired, started practice at Frankfort in 1930. The alleged abortion occurred in March 1967. Dr. Bolton had pleaded innocent to the charge but waived trial.

Grand Champion At The Fair
4-H grand champion steer at the Kansas State Fair was shown by 17-year old Merritta Atwell of Utica, Ness county. The steer was purchased by the Thornburg Angus ranch near Utica.

Sinkhole Big Enough To Lose A Tractor
ELMO — "I'm sure glad the combine didn't fall in," Henry Rieff, Elmo, said after he discovered a sinkhole 27 feet deep in his wheat field.

Rieff said the hole was 10 feet wide at its mouth and 18 feet at the bottom. "It developed sometime between harvest and plowing," he said. The sinkhole is two miles north and two east of Elmo. "I don't know what to do with the thing," Rieff added. "My son, Don, (also of Elmo) drove a tractor within three feet of the edge before he saw it."

"If he had been plowing at night that hole would have swallowed tractor, plow and all."

Rieff said there was evidence of another sinkhole on the same section. It had been filled in about 25 or 30 years ago.

O. S. Fent, Salina geologist, said sinkholes in Wellington shale were rather common. The Wellington strata includes the area east of Elmo.

Aussies Eye World Export Milo Market
Australia may become a competitor of the U.S. for world grain sorghum sales.

The Australians reportedly are especially eying the amount of U.S. exports to Japan. Aussie exporters figure they can ship grain to Japan at lower prices than U.S. farmers.

Reportedly, Japanese importers are willing to buy a million tons annually, which at current prices would add $56 million to Australia's foreign exchange account.

Country Bank Charges Made
Two former officers of a G&G area country bank have been indicted by a federal grand jury for embezzling $11,564 from the Talmage State Bank. Talmage is in northwestern Dickinson County.

The two are Charles E. Montgomery, former president of the bank, and Kenneth Chase, former cashier. The two are charged with 10 counts of making false entries which favored an insurance company. The charges date back to January 1965.

Montgomery and Chase resigned from the bank in February 1966.

Dairymen Win Their Price Hike

Dairymen have apparently been successful in forcing a hike in the price they get for their milk.

Rebuffed when they tried to force an increase over the Labor Day weekend at the first of September, dairymen have been successful in getting milk processors to agree to an increase which in general means 50 cents a hundredweight more than the price set by federal milk orders.

This has raised the price of milk at the retail level by five to ten cents a gallon, with indications that the increase is going to the dairymen and processors and not to retail grocers.

The increase that the dairymen get has the effect of raising retail prices 4 to 4½ cents per gallon. The additional increase is apparently going to the processor and not to the grocer.

The amount of the retail increase varied over the area. A price of $1.09 for major brands and $1.05 for private labels was common around Wichita and only the most competitive situations could find milk under $1.05 in the G&G area. In parts of southwest Kansas and in some less competitive retail markets, a gallon of milk runs from $1.15 to $1.20.

Associated Dairymen — a cop merging efforts of milk groups at Topeka, Wichita, Sabetha, Hillsboro and other mid-west dairymen — had attempted to force an increase around Labor Day, but processors sought other sources of supply at that time, protesting the suddenness of the milk producers' demands.

Since then the price increase has been negotiated, with the dairyman winning his fight for more money. The price paid is a blend price with the basic price 29 cents a hundred more than the previous price paid and 50 cents more than the federal order price. This price (ranging from $5.93 to $6.35 in the G&G area) applies only to class I milk, that is, milk sold in bottles or cartons. About 75 percent of a grade A dairyman's milk goes for bottling. The rest goes for cottage cheese, ice cream or other manufactured milk products, which earns a lower price which makes up part of the blend price received by dairymen.

POSTPONE VOTE IN VERMILLION WATERSHED

MARYSVILLE — A vote on special assessments in the Upper Black Vermillion watershed has been postponed because of a legal question concerning the polling place. The vote was scheduled last week and will be reset. The watershed district includes land in Marshall, Nemaha and Pottawatomie counties. Topeka, Kansas City, and Wichita firms.

The total stadium cost is figured at $1.6 million. About $300,000 has been raised thru gifts.

Construction bids will be opened this week. KSU officials hope construction can start early in October.

This sale will be held in conjunction with our regular Saturday sale, with cattle selling 1:00 p.m. We have buyers coming in for this sale from a wide area, so this is a good time to consign your calves and feeders if you plan to sell them soon.

ALREADY CONSIGNED:

- 50 Head high choice reputation Hereford heifers, 475-500 lbs.
- 65 Head high choice Charolais steer and heifer calves.

LONGFORD RODEO QUEEN IS JANICE WELLS

LONGFORD — Janice Wells of Longford was named queen of the 1967 Longford Rodeo. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs.

Doyle Wells. Attendants were Janice Evans of Longford and Glenda Coulton of Oak Hill. About 3500 attended on opening night, and rain scattered about 2500 the second night but they returned for the rodeo finals.

Big Cut In Sweetclover Production

The 1967 sweetclover seed production in Kansas is forecast at 908,000 pounds of clean seed, about half of the 1966 revised production and two-fifths of the 1961-65 average, according to the Kansas Crop and Livestock Reporting Service.

The current forecast of production would indicate Kansas' smallest sweetclover seed crop in records dating back through 1924.

Kansas' sweetclover seed was harvested from an estimated 5,500 acres, one half of last year's harvested acres, and the smallest harvested acreage on record. The indicated yield was 165 pounds of clean seed per acre compared with 170 pounds last year and an average of 147 pounds.

Of the 1967 crop, 95 per cent was biennial yellow and 5 per cent was biennial white. In 1966, biennial yellow accounted for 80 per cent of the total production, biennial white for 15 per cent and mixtures for 5 per cent.

The average beginning date of harvest was July 29, about 2 days later than last year.

United States

The 1967 production of sweetclover seed is forecast at 12,105,000 pounds. The indicated crop is 25 per cent less than last year's revised total of 16,100,000 pounds and 44 per cent less than the 1961-65 average production.

Production this year is below last year in all states except Minnesota. Production in Michigan, North Dakota, Kansas, Oklahoma and Texas this year is the lowest of record.

Before It Fell

Remember this picture in last week's Grass & Grain? Iowa farmer Bob Lockridge checked the angle of his leaning 65-foot silo, which had moved 10 feet off center in four months.

Last week Lockridge's leaning tower of silage toppled. "I had bricks and hay all over," said the Promise City farmer. The silo, one of the largest in the area, contained 800 tons of hay when it finally tumbled into a $10,000 ruin. The contractor will replace it.
