It's too late to control marijuana this year because the seeds were mature on most plants Aug. 1, but Dr. Ben Eaton, K-State weed control specialist, is confident that it can be eradicated if farmers identify and kill it before the seeds mature. Eaton said the estimated acreage of marijuana in Kansas is considerably less than first thought.

DRAGE CUTTING FINALS

Nearly 700 farmers watched silage cutters breeze through a field of feed it was over ten feet high. "It's more a race than a demonstration of age cutters," one farmer said. The age cutters blew their chopped duct on the ground giving farmers chance to compare the silage. Most portant it gave farmers a chance see several different brands of silag tters working under the same nditions.

PLANT POPULATIONS

With corn ranking third in production among the crops grown in Kansas getting maximum yields with population control and plant spacing could add considerably to production without increasing costs. Studying corn populations is part of Dr. Richard Vanderlip's job and his research show that evenness of planting in corn increases the yields.

Nearly 700 Kansans, most of them from the Grass and Grain area, converged on K-State for the Fall Storage Field Day conducted by KSU Extension Service agronomists and researchers of the Kansas Agricultural Experiment Station in cooperation with the university's agronomy department. The Manhattan event was the "kickoff" for 12 other KSU agronomy and irrigation field days to be held throughout the state during the month of September. Cities include Minneola, St. John, Columbus, Republic, Scandia, Hutchinson, Colby, Newton, Garden City, Ottawa, Belleville and Manhattan.

Dr. Hyde S. Jacobs, head of the KSU department of agronomy, pointed out that a recent official economic projection study for Kansas shows that by the year 2000, Kansas' population will have increased 150 percent. This means, he said, that Kansas agriculture must increase its sorghum production 15 percent, corn 204 percent, wheat 21 percent.

Commercial production of meat in Kansas slaughter plants during July 1972 totaled 143 million pounds, 6 percent below July 1971, according to the Kansas Crop and Livestock Reporting Service. Cumulative production during the first seven months of 1972 totaled 992 million pounds, 5 percent greater than in the same period last year.

Beef production in Kansas during July was 121 million pounds, 1 percent less than in July last year. The number of cattle slaughtered totaled 196,000 head, a decrease of 1 percent from July a year ago. Average live weight per head slightly from July 1971. Total beef production during the January-July period of 1972 was 898 million pounds, compared with 836 million pounds during the same period last year.

Production of pork in Kansas during July 1972 was 22 million pounds, 12 percent below July 1971. The 140,000 hogs slaughtered were down 12 percent from July 1971, but the average live weight per head, 140 pounds, was slightly higher. Cumulative production of pork during the January-July period this year totaled 194 million pounds, 1 percent below the same period last year.

Nearly 700 Farmers See Fall Field Forage Day

Nearly 700 Kansans, most of them from the Grass and Grain area, gathered on K-State for the Fall Field Day conducted by KSU Extension Service agronomists and teachers of the Kansas Cultural Experiment Station in cooperation with the university's agronomy department.

The Manhattan event was the "off" for 12 other KSU agronomy and irrigation field days held throughout the state during the month of September. Sites include Minneola, St. John, Ambus, Republic, Scandia, Winson, Colby, Newton, Garden, Ottawa, Belleville and Gato.

Hyde S. Jacobs, head of the department of agronomy, pointed out that a recent official economic projection study for Kansas shows that by the year 2000 the population will have increased 150 percent. This means, he said, that Kansas agriculture must raise its sorghum production 190 percent, corn 204 percent, wheat 212 percent, soybeans 370 percent and cattle and hogs 230 percent.

Jacobs said such large increases demanded within so short a time can be met but they present a challenging task particularly in the production of wheat, corn, sorghum and soybeans.

Needed, he said, are vastly improved varieties, more effective use and management of land, water, crops and natural resources.

The Manhattan Fall Forage Day was different from any the agronomy department and Cooperative Extension Service have presented in the past.

Co-chairman of the event, Frank Bieberly, head of the Extension crops and soils section, and Clarence Swallow, superintendent of the KSU agronomy farm, developed a "walking tour" over six acres that took about an hour and one-half to tour. Formerly field day participants rode busses and wagons to cover research plots covering several dozen acres.

GETTING DOWN TO WORK

Dr. Orvill Bidwell has been working in a hole a good many years. As a soil specialist Bidwell believes that the best way to find out what type of soil you have is to expose the soil layers and identify. Here he points out the various levels to farmers attending the Fall Forage Field Day at Kansas State.

American Hereford Assn. Gearing Up For Special Ag Advisory Service

Traditionally conservative over its long history, the American Hereford Association now is gearing up at a considerable cost to offer a business advisory service unique to agriculture.

Beginning Jan. 2, 1973, the A.H.A. will offer subscribers from any phase of the agricultural world sophisticated answers to any vexing questions users may have. The answers will be given by telephone immediately after the questions are posed.

Called the Livestock Business Advisory Services Division, it is expected to have as subscribers ranchers, farmers, feeders, packers, feed manufacturers, bankers, grain elevators, commodity firms and others. The service will be headed by William C. Helming, formerly of Cattle Fax of Denver, who will be general manager.

The range of questions the service is expected to be capable of handling ranges far beyond the Hereford and, in deed, the cattle industry. A staff of approximately 10 professionals, backed by computers and data research facilities, will answer questions like these:

- When is the best time to buy corn and milo in the next 90 days?
- Should I buy grain on a day-today basis, or buy corn and milo futures?

- Should I buy 1,200 feeder cattle now, or wait 60 days?
- Where can I buy 900 head of Hereford-Angus steers weighing 60 pounds for October 1 delivery?
- They said I can feed steers for 23 cents a day — what do you think?
- Will there be changes in the Bureau of Land Management and Forest Service grazing fees by next March?

• Will hog, or boiler, prices be lower over the next three months?

"The answers, or at least opinions, concerning those questions are around now, but they're available only on a piecemeal basis," Helming explained. "What we're going to do is have a unique, sophisticated and timely system of marketing information by putting it all together in one package."

"A service of this kind has been sorely needed. The question was: Who was going to do it?"

The service will range in cost from approximately $30 a month for a rancher running less than 300 cows to up to $500 a month for a large bank or a feed lot with a capacity of 50,000 head or more of cattle.

Helming said the A.H.A. hopes to have at least 300 subscribers signed up by Jan. 1. He estimated conservatively that number would grow by at least 100 a month once the service is on the line.

The series 800 telephone number here at the A.H.A. headquarters will be answered by an operator acknowledging with the words "Beef-Grain Call." Anyone subscribing will have access to the service 15 hours a day, starting at 7 o'clock in the morning.

As a supplement to the toll-free telephone service, the subscribers will be mailed every week a 1-page market bulletin highlighting and summarizing the market forecasts, analysis and trends.

The board of directors of the A.H.A. employed Helming some months ago to develop such a program. Some observers believed that if the service is successful it might one day overshadow activities of the parent association and become a case of the "tail wagging

September 5, 1972

However, W. T. Berry, Jr., executive vice-president of the A.H.A., explained: "A breed association on the go must be adaptable to the times and maintain close liaison with both its breeders and those with whom they do business."

"Our association and its members produce seedstock that contributes substantially to beef production efficiency and serves as models to the nation's $20 billion beef industry. The board of directors and staff felt we would be neglecting our duty if we did not take steps to provide the mature leadership and consulting service that we found were being asked for by our members and others at every turn."

STATE HORSESHOE TOURNAMENT SET SEPT. 3-4 IN WICHITA

Grain Marketing System Handling Soviet Purchases

Rod Turnbull
Kansas City Board of Trade

The huge sales of wheat and other grains to the Soviet Union in recent weeks have tested the U.S. grain-marketing system and found it functioning adequately.

In fact, the way the system has responded to the impact of the Soviet sales has served as a dramatic demonstration of its abilities. The system has, from farmer through elevators, Boards of Trade, and port cities, experienced in recent weeks what is perhaps its busiest period in history, yet there has not been a major breakdown.

Of course, the grain sold has not been shipped. Actually, only a small part of the total has left U.S. shores to date.

While official figures have not been publicized, the grain trade appears to be assuming this country sold or will sell the Soviet Union 10 million bushels of wheat, far more than was anticipated.

It also has sold Russia millions of bushels of soybeans and corn, and the assumption is more of these commodities will be covered in later transactions.

Because of the drama of the great sales to the Soviet Union, what often is being over-looked is the volume of the "normal" export trade. In the last wheat marketing year which ended June 30, this country sold overseas 632 million bushels of the bread grain. The estimate is that in the soybean marketing year which ends Thursday, our exports of this commodity will total 425 million bushels. Corn exports by September 30, the end of the corn marketing year, are expected to reach 650 million bushels.

Included in the corn total are substantial sales to Russia early last winter, but otherwise the 1971-72 marketing year totals exclude any business that followed the July 8 announcement that the Russians would buy a minimum of $750 million worth of grains from the United States in the next 3 years.

While not all U.S. farm exports are grains, they dominate the total. In the fiscal year ending last June 30, this country's agricultural exports amounted to $8.2 billion, the highest in history. All these figures emphasize the fact that the business with the Soviet Union starting as of July 8, comes on top of the greatest "normal" export trade in the history of the country. This statement accentuates what has confronted the nation's grain marketing system.

The Soviet transactions have found this nation with an ample supply of wheat and corn on hand. Although the wheat harvest still was in progress July 8, most of the bread grain was in bins on farms, in country elevators, and in sub-terminal and terminal elevators. It was not in port elevators waiting to be loaded on ships. Most of it still was owned by farmers.

With the announcement of the Soviet intentions to purchase, prices began to rise on both futures and cash markets. As prices rose, farmers who previously had held on to their wheat, began to sell to their local elevators. The local elevators, in turn, either sold the grain to terminal elevators or hedged it on the futures market.

With this hedging process complete, the elevators had wheat in their bins which they owned, and they also had the same wheat "sold" on the futures market. They were protected on price until they could sell the actual wheat to an exporter and then "lift" their hedges.

Likewise, the exporting companies making deals with the Soviet Union, went into the futures market and bought wheat for future deliver. Thus they had wheat sold on the one hand and wheat bought on the other at established prices and they too, thus protected themselves on price until they could buy the actual wheat from the elevators.

Meanwhile, the elevators with their inventories hedged, and not worried about drastic price fluctuations, could go to banks and borrow up to 90 percent of the value of the grain they owned and thus get the money to pay farmers. Similarly, the exporters, with their deals hedged, could go to banks and borrow the money to buy the grain from the elevators. Exporters do not get paid until the grain actually is on board a vessel bound for the country which has purchased the commodity. Thus a tremendous financial burden must be assumed on these big transaction until the final deliver is made.

The hedging as described here is what boomed business at the Kansas City Board of Trade to record levels both in volume of trade and in volume of "open interest." The latter term refers to open futures contracts — that is contracts for either delivery or acceptance of delivery on grain in future months. Open interest, for the first time in history, has exceeded 100 million bushels in Chicago.

Most of the wheat being exported and to be exported to Russia will be of the hard winter variety, the kind grown on the Great Plains and on which trades are made in the Kansas City futures market.

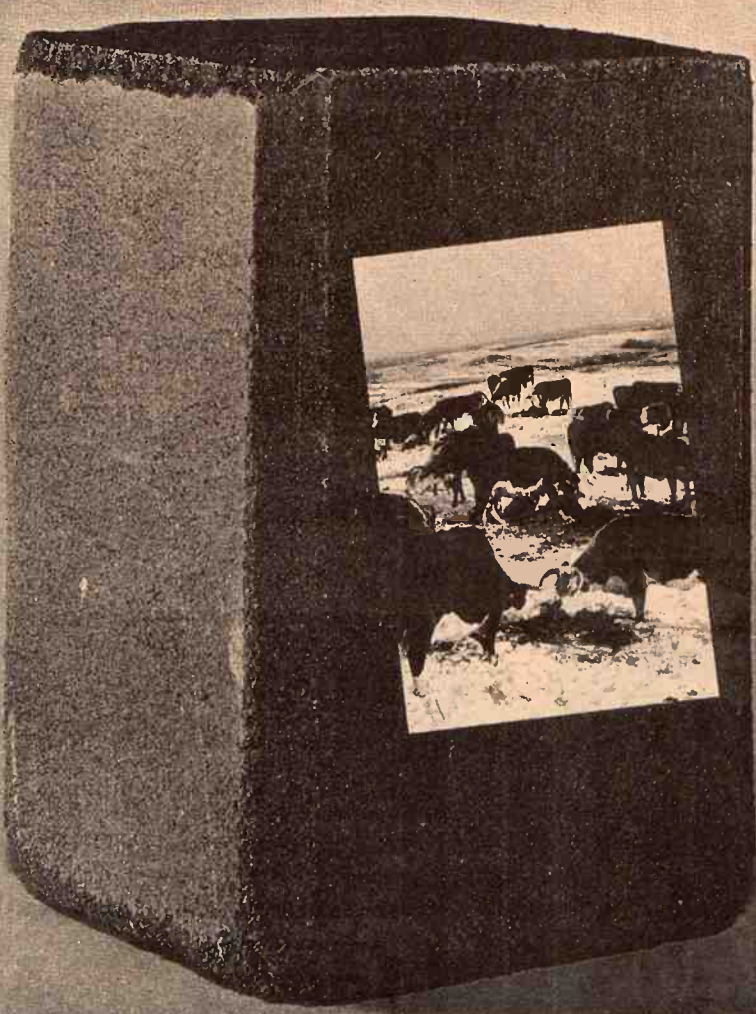

As mentioned, our "normal" wheat exports last year totaled 632 million bushels. The U.S. Department of Agriculture estimates this country will use as human food, as livestock feed and for seed about 800 million bushels in this marketing year. If normal exports this year are around 600 million bushels and if exports to the Soviet Union do reach the 400 million figure, then total disappearance of wheat will be around 1,800,000,000 bushels, a figure far exceeding that for any other year in history.

With all this old and new export business, this country, according to current estimates, still will have 600 million bushels of wheat on hand when the harvest gets well under way next summer.

BARTON COUNTY FARMERS TO GET TRASH SERVICE

Trash pickups for farmers soon may be a reality in Barton county. They're working on a county-wide, solid waste disposal system which would comply with the law which now prohibits farmers from dumping trash where it would "annoy the environment."

Kansas Landowners Missed Chance To Eliminate Marijuana This Year

Landowners may have missed their chance this year to eliminate the tall, ripening marijuana along fields and creeks, but they can look forward to a report this fall on two years' hemp research in Riley County to the Kansas Legislature's Marijuana Steering Committee.

Benny Eaton, an assistant professor of agronomy at Kansas State University, who headed the research, said it was too late to eradicate marijuana this year as of Aug. 1. At that time, the hemp plant's first seeds were matured and falling to insure more plants next year.

Eaton explained that marijuana reproduces only from its seed, unlike other plants that may grow again by means of surviving root systems. Eaton said marijuana seeds live a maximum of three to four years in soil, so if new seed is prevented from developing there will be no more hemp plants.

Eaton's team began exploring marijuana in Kansas in August of 1970. They looked into means of controlling marijuana, how it grows, its chemical makeup and activities, including potency as an intoxicant, and where marijuana fits in the ecology. Much of the team's findings will be available by next month in the second printing of a K-State extension bulleting, "Controlling Wild Hemp." Other information will be initially published in the committee report, Eaton said.

The study team also found that the Kansas marijuana has only about 10 percent of the potency of most varieties of Mexican hemp, measured by the amount of tetrahydrocannabinol (THC) by weight.

THC is the active chemical in marijuana and hashish which causes intoxication. Prior to the studies, Kansas marijuana was considered to be less potent than imported varieties, but K-State study was the first to break the potency down by THC content, Eaton said.

Eaton explained that potency varies with the age of the plant, being low at both the early and late stages, and highest when the plant is flowering.

There is a preferred method of controlling marijuana at each stage of its growth and the plant should be controlled, Eaton said. Marijuana is not classified a noxious weed, so farmers are not bound by law to get rid of it. Eaton emphasized social responsibility in asking farmers to eradicate hemp.

He said marijuana would not be missed among the wild biological systems of plants and animals, either, because it is not native to Kansas and is a vigorous competitor often proving harmful to native plants.

Eaton claims the most effective months for control of marijuana are March, April and May. He found no diseases or insects to halt the spread of marijuana, so he concluded the only ways to effectively control hemp are with mowing, chemicals and burning.

The best time for chemical application is when the plants are germinating or just seedlings, Eaton said. He explained that it takes lower rates of chemical application to kill the plants then and there is less danger of the chemicals harming neighboring broadleaf plants like soybeans, which are planted in early summer.

He recommends using a tool like a suburban lawn spreader to apply granular herbicides over a marijuana stand before the plants come up. After the plants are up, spraying with a herbicide like 2, 4-D is most effective, Eaton said. He cautioned, "We feel environmental impact is at a minimum of the 2, 4-D is confined to marijuana."

He said later in the season control may be better achieved by mowing or by scorching the plants with liquid petroleum gas so the vegetation dies.

Eaton said he was relieved to find that initial estimates of the amount of marijuana in the state believed 2,000 to 3,000 acres exist in Kansas, he said.

Hay Prices Will Rise This Winter Says USDA Report

Pastures and ranges nationally were in above-average shape on Aug. 1, but livestock producers and dairymen who rely on hay for winter feeding can expect smaller supplies and higher prices.

The Agriculture Department says grazing conditions averaged 81 percent on Aug. 1, down seasonally by one point from July but four above last year and three points higher than the 10-year average.

But 1972 production of all types of hay was forecast at 127.8 million tons, down 2 percent from last year's record of 131.0 million.

Alfalfa and alfalfa mixtures were estimated at 76.1 million tons, down slightly from last year, but other types will be down 5 percent to around 51.7 million, the department said.

Further, says USDA, hay quality has been lower in some major producing areas, including the Northeast dairy region where excessive moisture was a factor in early cuttings.

Industry sources say the hay situation has become critical in some parts of the Northeast where many producers report hay supplies reduced sharply.

Also, according to department reports, continued poor summer grazing in California and some areas of the Southwest point to below-par winter pasture feed supplies. That also could put a drain on the national hay reserve.

Plan 'Rec' Room To Please All In Family

Some family rooms cause more fussin' and feudin' than fun. And, when they aren't a source of enjoyment for all, it's usually because the room wasn't properly planned.

To be sure the family room suits all of the family all of the time, keep these suggestions in mind:

- Furnishings should be comfortable—for everybody. Beanbag chairs and plastic hassocks are great for youngsters, but older backs need more support. If you use "fad" furniture, also include a conventional sofa or a couple of easy chairs.

- Agree on the decor. No one can relax surrounded by decor that sets his teeth on edge. Way-out posters and geometrics are fine if everybody likes them. Otherwise, select a more "neutral" theme.

This doesn't mean the room should be dull. Family rooms are often the most stylish in the house. Evidence of this is the popularity of prefinished hardboard wall paneling for family rooms. The panels are available in a variety of styles that make them suitable for any decor: formal, "mod" or casual.

- Make sure the room is abuse-proof and easy to care for. Use modern fabrics, upholstery, carpeting and wall coverings (even the most elegant-looking) that are designed with durability and minimal maintenance in mind.

- Make sure the room is large enough for the family to spread out. If there isn't enough physical space, create the illusion of roominess by the adroit placement of furniture. For instance, set up a conversation corner, a reading corner, a TV corner and a game corner.

- Provide essentials such as good reading lights, tabletop space for games or hobbies, bookshelves and storage space. The latter is easily created with a panel of perforated hardboard, available in finishes that match regular panels. "Hanging" hardware shelf brackets fit into the perforations to make an attractive convenient storage wall.

Easy Way To Iron Sheets

If you like your sheets ironed, lay them flat on a large surface, such as the ironing board, and lay the articles on them. After a few items have been ironed, you are able to fold a sheet and put it in the linen closet, then put another ironing board and begin ironing again.

Use Clay To Bait Traps

Use modeling clay to bait mousetraps. It does not attract as food does and it cannot be removed from the trap easily without breaking it, making your catch more sure. And mice really go after the

New Mascara Problem Of Sm

Mascara makes eyes look large and lashes longer. But have you ever blinked while trying to apply it? Smears and smudges will quickly ruin your careful makeup job.

There now is a mascara to solve the problem. It's an automatic comb-on mascara with a tiny comb applicator instead of a brush wand. The comb is pulled slowly over the container, allowing the mascara to seep between the teeth of the comb.

To apply it, simply tilt the chin up and look down into the mirror and stroke the comb upward through the upper lashes. Use a downward stroke through the lower lashes.

The comb works both to separate and color your lashes. Because the teeth of the comb are able to hold more mascara than a brush, it is easier and easier to apply. Your lashes will appear longer and thicker the more you comb.

The mascara dries quickly and is smudgeproof. It won't run if water gets by rain or tears. It is available in shades, including black, brownish black, brown, navy blue, green and plum burgundy. Select your shade with care. Brunets with natural black lashes should use black mascara. But brown is a better choice for blondes and brownish black for in-between colorings. Black mascara looks especially good with Political Gifts From Corporations On Way Out?

Affiliated political funds, one of the principal covers which allow big corporations and labor unions to make campaign contributions, have suffered a serious legal setback and may be on the way out.

The potentially crippling blow came in a stipulation of dismissal filed in U.S. District Court here this week by lawyers for TRW Inc., and Common Cause, the self-styled citizens' lobby.

TRW, a major defense contractor with over $200 million in government contracts, agreed to dissolve its TRW Good Government Fund and return the unspent money to the executives who coughed it up.

"This is the beginning of the end for affiliated political funds," said John W. Gardner, chairman of Common Cause. "The effect of this will be to effectively terminate this practice."

While it has always been illegal for corporations or labor unions to contribute directly to political causes from company or union funds, they have been able to manage and distribute money for this purpose given voluntarily by their executives or members.

But the Federal Election Campaign Act of 1971 makes it illegal for government contractors to maintain an affiliated employee fund to make political contributions.

Ag Income Looking Better

MANHATTAN — With another bumper wheat crop already in the bin, and a near-record corn and grain sorghum harvest in prospect, it signs point to a profitable year for Kansas farmers in 1972.

But economists at Kansas State University are already looking ahead to 1973. They see still another year of good income potential for Kansas farmers.

Source of much of the optimism is the export situation, brightened by recent announcements concerning the sale of U.S. grains to the S.S.R. Latest indications are that the Soviets may buy between 250 million and 450 million bushels of U.S. wheat, or up to one-fourth of this year's crop.

Add to this development the predicted record 1972 U.S. farm income of $18.1 billion, and you see why things are beginning to look up down on the farm.

Although there is little chance that farmers will receive the $2 wheat prices of a decade ago, Roy Frederick sees prices averaging near $1.60 next year. That's up 20 to 25 per cent from 1971-1972 levels. Wheat exports may be 50 to 75 per cent higher next year, he says.

Even though the export picture is bright, Frederick cautions that too much optimism may be dangerous in the face of a large carryover, estimated at 500 million to 600 million bushels on July 1, 1973. Still, the price outlook for wheat is the brightest it's been for years.

Prices paid for most other grains will be higher next year, even though supplies will continue to be large, Frederick says. Cattle feeders will continue to feed large amounts of corn and grain sorghums, and may be shooting for slightly higher weights.

The soybean price bubble does not appear to be on the verge of bursting. Frederick looks for prices to be near $3 a bushel at harvest, with a seasonal increase to the $3.25 to $3.30 level next summer.

The picture is only a little less optimistic for the livestock producer. Consumers' demand for red meat, coupled with a substantial decline in pork production, will keep prices above year-earlier levels.

The beef cattle market, which has held up in the face of greater production and higher imports, is expected to weaken seasonally during the rest of the year, then gain additional steam in 1973.

Richard Fenwick sees fed steer prices at Kansas City slipping to $35 to $36 by year's end, then rebounding to $36.50 to $37.50 by June, 1973.

Feeder cattle are expected to follow a similar trend. Fenwick looks for choice 600-700 pound feeder steers at Kansas City to dip seasonally to $38 to $39 by December, then advance to $41 to $42 by mid-1973.

Hog prices will continue to be favorable, Fenwick says. Prices are expected to decline seasonally from $25 to $27 in early fall to $20 to $23 by the second quarter of 1973.

Higher lamb prices are expected the rest of the year. Prices in 1973, however, will hinge on labor negotiations in the packing industry.

Farm prices for milk in 1973 are expected to reach record highs for the sixth straight year.

The outlook for the poultryman is anything but optimistic. Egg prices are expected to average near production costs. Turkey and broiler prices do not encourage an increase in production.

and hogs for $24.60, for a ratio of 21.5.

The current situation is a sharp contrast from early 1971. Then, says the department, corn averaged $1.45 per bushel and hogs $17.25 per 100 pounds—an 11.8 ratio.

Historically, when the hog-corn ratio remains relatively high for a year or two farmers begin boosting pork production and then cut back when hog prices drop in relation to feed costs.

The outlook for the remainder of 1972 and through mid-1973, however, is bright, according to department economists. Winter pig farrowings were down 11 percent in the spring, and are expected to be down 4 per cent this summer.

Hog-Corn Ratio Signals Good Year, But Trouble Ahead

An indicator called the hog-corn ratio is likely to establish a record high for all of 1972, a welcome sign to farmers. But it is a signal also that producers can expect trouble later.

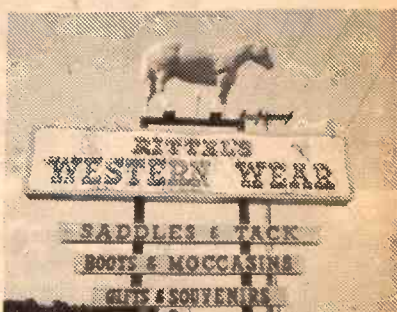

The ratio expresses in bushels the amount of corn equal in cash value to 100 pounds of liveweight hogs. For all of this year, according to Agriculture Department analysts, the ratio is likely to exceed 20 for the first time.

Two things have happened: Producers have reduced hog production following disastrously low 1971 prices, and feed costs have dropped following a record 1971 corn crop.

Equalling 1969

In the first six months of this year, No. 2 yellow corn averaged $1.24 per bushel and hogs about $24.60 per hundredweight. That meant a ratio during the period of 19.8, equalling the record high for an entire year set in 1969.

By mid-year according to USDA, corn at Omaha was selling for $1.23

$10 Million In Short Term Loans Helps Speed Kansas Grain To Russia

An estimated $10 million in short-term loans to grain warehousemen in the state is helping to speed the shipment of Kansas grain to Russia.

The American exporters are in turn selling this grain to Russia under the provisions of the recent U.S.-Russia trade agreement. Under this agreement between $750 million and $1 billion in U.S. grain will be sold to Russia over the next three years.

THE U.S.-RUSSIAN grain deal was announced July 9. It was termed the biggest grain transaction in history between the two countries.

Under the provisions of the deal, Russia will purchase the grain on the commercial market from private grain dealers. The initial plan called for the purchase of at least $200 million worth of grain during the first year—Aug. 1, through July 31, 1973.

The grain warehousemen are purchasing mostly wheat at this time, a Kansas warehouseman said. "There may be some purchases of other types of grain—corn or milo—later, but not at this time."

The wheat being purchased is being shipped to Gulf Coast ports, he said, for transshipment to Russia.

It has been estimated that to date the Russian purchases of grain, from all U.S. sources, now totals 18 million tons.

This Total includes 10 to 14 million tons of wheat. This includes the recent purchase of 100,000 tons—3.7 million bushels—of spring wheat in northern United States. Another is one million tons of soybeans.

A local warehouseman said the unexpected grain sales will help reduce the surplus supply of wheat, which has been something of a problem for many years.

He did not anticipate any problems in meeting the demand for grain. He also noted there was not likely to be any shortage of grain develop as a result of the sales.

There have been two side effects of the heavy grain demand. They are:

o An increase of some 35 cents per bushel in the price of wheat.

o A prediction that a shortage of railroad grain cars will develop

"We are now paying from $1.69 to $1.70 a bushel for wheat," he said. "This is about 35 cents a bushel more than was being paid three or four weeks ago."

This price increase has brought some demands for price increases in the price of bread. Millers and bakers have complained to the U.S. Department of Agriculture that the sales abroad may result in what they term a "runaway" market.

So far the government is holding the line on wheat acreages. A great increase in acreages holds the danger of new surpluses of grain if record wheat crops occur.

The 1972 wheat crop, one of the largest on record, will assist in meeting this unexpected and unplanned demand for grain.

There is no current shortage of grain cars, a warehouseman said. "But," he added, "we do anticipate a shortage may develop as grain shipments increase."

He added that this was one problem that remains to be solved.

Local warehousemen do not have any estimates as to the total amount of grain to be shipped from this area. "There are just no figures available," one said.

He said the shipments from the area would be "substantial" but he could not supply any exact figure.

Future grain purchase deals between the U.S. and Russia could increase the current totals or extend the three-year term on the purchases.

U.S. Milk Sales Appear Headed For Record Year

Despite the possibility of higher feed costs, particularly for high-protein supplements, dairymen appear to be headed for another record year for milk sales.

Agriculture Department

September 5, 1972

economists predict milk prices continue strong and probably average around three percent higher this year than in 1971.

But smaller feed grain prices plus a big demand for export narrow milk profit margins.

Regardless, the USDA is predicting a record $7 billion in receipts for 1972, up at least $1 billion from last year. By then they already had hit the $1 billion mark.

One economic indicator is the milk-feed price ratio, which presses in pounds the amount equal in value to one pound of feed sold by producers. In July, it was 1.71 which was up three from June and 10 points above last year.

The July ratio reflected milk prices and lower feed prices compared with a year earlier.

all-milk price in July was $5.67 hundredweight, compared with a year earlier. Feed was $3.30 in July priced at the formula, 1971.

Last fall, as record feed went to market, the ratio hit a record high of 1.88 in November. Whether producers can expect a favorable situation is a questionable, USDA economists privately.

The soybean supply will be tight despite another crop. With the Russians buying and soybeans, U.S. demand probably will see a continuation of high meal costs.

By Year 2000 Americans Will Pay Less For More Beef

By the year 2000, Americans will spend only 12.5 percent of their disposable personal income for food, compared with 16 percent today, according to Dr. Roy M. Kottman, Dean of the College of Agriculture and Home Economics, Ohio State University.

"Higher incomes will permit consumers to continue to choose more animal products," Kottman told representatives of the nation's livestock and meat industry attending the 50th Anniversary Meeting of the National Live Stock and Meat Board in Chicago.

Speaking on "Future Prospects for U.S. Animal Agriculture," he based his projections on a three year long-range planning project, "Life 2000," conducted by faculty members in the institutions which he heads.

Kottman predicted that each U.S. citizen will consume an average of 667 pounds (retail weight equivalent) of animal products in the year 2000, compared with an average of 634 pounds for the years 1967-9.

"Consumption of beef and veal will increase to 140 pounds per person per year, compared with 115 pounds today," he said "and pork consumption will climb to 75 pounds, 15 percent above present levels, reflecting favorable public reaction to dramatic improvements in pork quality along with more aggressive marketing and promotion of pork products. Lamb and mutton consumption may decline slightly, however.

"This means that by the year 2000, U.S. farmers will need to produce 70 percent more beef and pork, and the same amount of lamb and mutton as at present," Kottman said, adding that his projections were based on a U.S. population of 280 million in the year 2000.

"Much of the publicity today about high food prices fails to recognize that U.S. families were spending 25 percent of their income for food 20 years ago, compared with 16 percent today," Kottman said. Continually increasing livestock production efficiency will help hold down relative costs, he said, explaining that "despite recurrent conjecture that U.S. animal agriculture has reached plateaus in production efficiency, genetic variation in today's livestock indicate that the biological potential for efficiency improvement and cost reduction is tremendous."

Kottman said that studies which are frequently cited to show that a given quantity of protein from plant sources costs considerably less to produce than an equal quantity of protein from animal sources "do not give sufficient attention to several significant factors," such as:

1) "the current retail cost of protein from soy-based analogs may well be higher than the cost of protein from red meats and poultry, because the process of texturizing and shaping soy flour into a form that caters to the preferences of U.S. consumers is costly"; and

2) "food consumption projections based solely on comparative cost ignore the fact that few people who have sufficient income to eat as they choose select their diets on the basis of the lowest cost per unit of nutrient or food energy. Instead, they choose foods that satisfy physiological, psychological, and social needs."

Besides the question of comparative costs, Kottman said that there are three other major challenges which the animal industry will face in the future: the alleged relationship between animal fats and heart disease, pollution from livestock waste and the adequacy of land and other resources to support a continually growing livestock industry.

"In no important dietary matter, except perhaps in his gullibility with respect to fad diets for weight reduction, and the so-called 'health' foods, has the U.S. consumer been so thoroughly confused and so grossly misled as has been true with respect to saturated animal fats and cholesterol," Kottman said.

"Today, more than 15 years after nationwide publicity caused cholesterol to become a word to be feared in many households, and after years of research, there is still no solid evidence of a cause-and-effect relationship between heart disease and consumption of animal products."

Kottman, who heads a three-pronged organization which includes nutrition research and education among its many missions, added that "growing numbers of medical and nutritional scientists are concluding that heart disease is probably caused by a complex of factors, many of which may be as yet unidentified, and that the indictment of saturated animal fats appears not only to have been premature, but quite probably incorrect."

As for pollution, Kottman said "we believe that great strides will be made during the next 30 years in reducing pollution—waste and odor—arising from animal production. Long before the year 2000, large quantities of animal waste will be processed and recycled back through livestock. In addition to consuming their own recycled wastes, animals may well make a major contribution to disposal of other wastes, such as garbage, and waste from food and timber processing industries."

The increased feeding of processed wastes may help reduce the cost of feeding livestock, Kottman said.

Regarding the adequacy of resources, Kottman said that studies at The Ohio State University and the USDA indicate that "there appears to be little question that sufficient land, water and other resources will be available to produce the feed grains, hay and pasture that will be required by a substantially larger U.S. animal agriculture in the year 2000 and beyond."

"Except for isolated instances, synthetics and substitutes will not make significant inroads into the demand for animal products over the next 30 years," Kottman concluded.

Sunflower Variety Tests Blooming At K-State

For the first time in nearly a decade, sunflower varieties are being tested on the Agronomy Farm at Kansas State University, Manhattan.

The sunflower varieties — there are eight of them on test — currently are in full bloom and "look gorgeous." But Dr. E. L. Mader, K-State agronomist in charge, notes that "this is the fifth or sixth attempt we've made."

With three to four weeks yet to harvest, Mader says anything can happen.

There are two reasons for renewed interest in sunflowers as a Kansas crop at this time, Mader explains.

"First, the Russians have developed new varieties with much higher oil content. We felt we should check them out against our present commercial varieties. Second, sunflowers may be grown on diverted acres with little payment penalty."

In the past the KSU sunflower tests have been plagued by insect problems.

"We've had insect problems affecting the whole plant — roots, stems, leaves, and seeds," says Mader. He notes that at the current tests the ground is honeycombed under some of the varieties — apparently by rodents that are feeding on insects that are feeding on root systems.

Mader reports tremendous interest in sunflowers throughout the world, and especially in developing countries where the crop is seen as potentially a new source of oil and protein. But the K-State agronomist believes that wild sunflowers in Kansas provide a reservoir of insects and diseases which will continue to make commercial sunflower production difficult and hazardous.

American Farmer Degree To Seven Kansas FFA'ers

Seven Kansas FFA members have been recommended by the National FFA Board of Directors to receive the American Farmer Degree according to Dan R. Marrs, Topeka, executive secretary of the Kansas Association of Future Farmers of America. The American Farmer Degree is the highest degree of membership presented by the youth organization for students of vocational agriculture. It will be presented during the national FFA convention in Kansas City, Mo., October 11-13.

The seven Kansans named are Frank Buchman, 21 son of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Buchman of Alta Vista, member of the Council Grove FFA Chapter; Doug Deets, 19, son of Mr. and Mrs. Max Deets of Beloit, member of the Arkansas City FFA Chapter; Elmer Donley Jr., 19, son of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Donley of Ellsworth, member of the Ellsworth FFA Chapter; Ernie Goering Jr., 22, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Goering of Galva, member of the Moundridge FFA Chapter; Ted Odle, 20, son of Mr. and Mrs. Gale Odle of Glade, member of the Stockton FFA Chapter; Paul Westerman, 19, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Westerman of Ellsworth, member of the Ellsworth FFA Chapter; and Gary Worcester, 20, son of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Worcester of Hill City, member of the Hill City FFA Chapter.

The seven Kansas FFA members were among 471 FFA members throughout the nation recommended for the American Farmer Degree. The degree is presented to approximately one FFA member in a thousand in any given year. Each degree recipient will be presented a certificate and gold key from the FFA organization, plus a cash travel allowance to the national convention from the National FFA Foundation, Inc.

FFA members are eligible for the American Farmer Degree after having earned the State Farmer Degree in their state. They must have been an active member of the FFA continuously for at least three years and have a record of participation in the activities of the local chapter and state association.

In addition the FFA member must have earned at least $1,000 by his or her own efforts from a supervised farming or other agricultural occupational experience program money he or she earned or productively invested or deposited in a bank. The degree is demonstrated their leadership ability during school and who are established in an agricultural occupation.

Sound of Cash For Hog Farmers

The sound of music may be money to hog farmers. That is preliminary results of a study by Kansas State University Extension veterinarians are valid.

Dr. Lowell Breeden has conducted a survey on 43 Kansas swine farms to determine the effect of music on production. "We've known for years music in the dairy barn has increased milk production and reduced nervous cows," Dr. Breeden says. "Now it appears that the effect of music on pigs is on the disposition of the individual animal."

Sound of Music Makes Cash For Hog Producers

The sound of music may be money to hog farmers. That is, if preliminary results of a study by a Kansas State University Extension veterinarian are valid. Dr. Lowell Breeden has conducted a survey on 43 Kansas swine producing farms to determine if music in the farrowing and finishing houses has an effect on production. "We've known for years that music in the dairy barn has increased milk production and made or less nervous cows," says Breeden. "Now it appears that pigs respond in similar fashion." The veterinarian said the main effect of music on pigs is on the disposition of the individual animal.

"More pigs are weaned per litter, they are more contented, less nervous, and there is less incidence of tail biting," he indicates. Breeden says the animals in both the farrowing and finishing houses were less apt to jump up and run around every time there was a sudden noise, or when someone came into the building. While this all sounds encouraging, Breeden says there are some dangers involved. "Too many decibels—units for measuring the volume of sound—may cause a temporary or permanent type of ear damage to the sow as well as to her offspring," he warns. Breeden recounts one incident where a farmer had the volume turned up "full blast" in the farrowing house. "We were standing two feet apart and still had to shout at the top of our lungs to be heard by one another."

"It was interesting to note upon reviewing his farrowing charts, that he was losing two to three baby pigs per litter as a result of being smothered when laid upon by the sows," he continued. "The only logical conclusion to draw is that either the sows were becoming deaf or that the music was too loud and the sows couldn't hear the baby pigs squeal, or possibly a combination of the two," he concluded.

Breeden advises keeping radio volumes down to a pleasing, soothing tone in the farrowing and finishing houses. Install extra speakers in other parts of the buildings if necessary.

The veterinarian feels more research is needed to determine if his preliminary results are valid, and if there might possibly be an inter-relationship between a certain type of music and an increase in weight gain and feed efficiency.

Breeden says his survey to date has shown the pigs do have a preference for certain types of music. "At the present time, the music of the 30's and 40's seems to be the best," he concludes.

MUSIC TO GROW BY

Pigs listen to the radio? They do on 43 Kansas farms. A K-State Extension veterinarian, Dr. Lowell Breeden, has conducted a preliminary study to see if pigs react to music the way dairy cows do. Early results show more pigs weaned per litter and the pigs are less nervous when music is played in the farrowing and finishing houses.

Marion County Finds Four Bridges Closed

MARION—Kansas' bridges continue to fall.

Marion county engineer Lysle Russell has ordered 4 major county bridges closed and load limits drastically cut on 3 others after a bi-annual inspection required by the U.S. Department of Transportation. The 7 bridges are on Federal Aid Secondary (FAS) routes, county blacktop roads partially maintained by federal funds.

The bridge closures will halt all traffic on 3 of the most heavily traveled secondary roads in the county.

The load limit slashes, to 3 tons on one bridge and to 5 tons on 2 others, will close other roads to school buses, grain trucks and commercial haulers.

Other county bridges have had their limits cut to 6, 10 and 15 tons. Russell said a bridge should have a 20-ton capacity to adequately handle traffic.

The bridges were inspected in April by an independent professional engineer.

Russell said the cost of replacing the 4 condemned bridges would total $385,000. The county now receives only $68,000 per year in FAS funds, and the 1972 grant already has been spent.

County workers are currently removing dirt and asphalt surfacing from the low load limit bridges in an effort to raise their traffic capacity. The surfacing from one to 1½ feet deep, weighs as much as a ton for each foot of bridge length but adds nothing to the strength of the bridge.

Russell said the Department of Transportation would not approve "unloading" the surfaces of the 4 closed bridges. They are "not even adequate to carry their own weight," he said.

County commissioner said the bridges might be repaired at an estimated cost of $100,000 and opened to passenger cars. The closed bridges all are at the end of the lake near Durham, Marion lake, one at the southeast end between Hillsboro and Marion, and one south of Hillsboro. Bridges west of the edge of Marion have new load limits of 5 tons or less.

Manhattan Hills Railroad Still Roundhouse

Schmidt, Mulvane, and a dozen other developers are planning for an Interstate Commerce Commission permit for their 32-mile Hills Railway. "We'll be ready in two weeks after we get the permit," he said. The railroad will operate as a tourist attraction, and would haul passengers and some freight between Burlington and Alma. "We don't have any idea where

1970 Health Act Discussions Set For This Fall

Seminars designed to clarify provisions of the Williams-Steiger Occupational Safety and Health Act of 1970 have been scheduled in three Kansas cities this fall.

Sponsored by the Occupational Safety and Health Administration of the U.S. Department of Labor, the training meetings will be held at the Co-op Center in Garden City October 10, at the Barton County Community Junior College October 11, and at the City-County Building in Salina October 12.

Dr. Robert A. Bohannon, director of Extension at Kansas State University, said the meetings should have particular appeal to agribusiness interests, such as grain elevators, farmer cooperatives, feed mills, machinery dealers, chemical and fertilizer dealers, garages, fuel handlers, and processing plants.

The law applies to every employer engaged in a business affecting commerce. It requires each employer to furnish each employee a place to work that is free of hazards "causing or likely to cause injury or death." Employees must comply with the law, too. In general, job safety and health standards consist of rules and regulations designed to avoid hazards which have been proved to be harmful to personal safety and health.

However, some confusion among employees has created a need for further explanation of the standards. The fall meetings are designed for that purpose, and to dispell rumors that have been making the rounds among employers.

The agenda for the seminars will include discussions on why the bill was passed, businesses affected by it, duties of employers and employees, enforcement, safety and health standards, and illustrations of compliance inspections and conditions encountered during inspections. Each session will begin at 9 a.m. and conclude at 3:30 p.m.

Fertilizer Sales Hit Record High

Fertilizer sales in Kansas for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1972, totaled 1,244,960 tons, better than the previous all-time record of 1,229,083 tons set in 1969-70. The 1970-71 sales were 1,167,589 tons, third all-time high. The report, based on commercial fertilizer sales by manufacturers to Kansas dealers, was issued by the Control Division of the Kansas Department of Agriculture.

Robert Guntert, Director of the Control Division, said actual plant food content of fertilizers sold in Kansas in 1971-72 fiscal year amounted to 682,053 tons, a high, as compared to 648,925 in 1969-70, and 633,041 tons in 1968-69. "Anhydrous Ammonia 330,766 tons showed a substantial increase over the 305,577 tons of the previous fiscal year," Guntert said. Grades of mixed dry fertilizers led by 18-46-0 with 194,102 tons; 16-16-16 with 34,208 tons; and 16-44-8 with 17,658 tons. Forty-five percent Superphosphate, with 17,658 tons, was up from 30,299 tons in 1970-71.

Fertilizer sales for the six-month period ending June 30, 1972, recorded a slight increase of 761,226 tons compared to 723,134 tons for the same period ending June 30, 1971.

A total of 399,486 tons of plant nutrients were sold during the spring period, an increase of 21,660 tons from the same period in 1971. Nitrogen sales showed 291,078 tons, up 559 tons; available phosphoric acid sales totaled 76,576 tons, up 4,244 tons; potash sales were 17,658 tons, up 5,096 tons.

Nemaha County led the spring sales with 21,660 tons, followed by Marshall, 18,443; Doniphan, 18,443; Gray, 16,742; Washington, 16,742; and Adams, 16,695.

Copies of the detailed report will be secured by writing to the Control Division, Kansas Department of Agriculture, State Office Building, Topeka, Kansas 66612.

A new soybean marketing year began September 1, so this is a good time to study the outlook for the crop. We will consider the prospects for supplies, domestic and foreign demand, and prices.

Processors and exporters are scraping the bottom of the bin for soybeans. The carryover for September 1 apparently was about 65 or 70 million bushels. It was a million a year before, and

Growth In Kansas Swine Industry Reflected At Fairs

Growth of the swine industry in Kansas will be reflected in the year's judging contests at fairs.

Wendell Moyer, superintendent of the swine shows at the Mid-America Fair at Topeka and the Kansas Fair at Hutchinson, said the parallel interest in swine judging has increased since 1972.

An added feature is the State Barrow Futurity scheduled for Hutchinson September 20.

White Corn Prices Likely To Advance

White corn prices may overcome a current low because of this year's small crop, the Agriculture Department says.

According to department surveys, white corn producers planted only 150,000 acres this year, less than half the 1.1 million in 1971. The department began only last year keeping track separately of white corn output.

Consequently, the Statistical Reporting Service in USDA is not sure whether the 1971 production, about 81.3 million bushels was large or not.

Officials said white corn prices however, "May move up" later this year because of the sharp cutback in acreage for 1972 harvest.

White corn is used in breakfast cereals, meal and hominy, snack feeds, syrup, starch and similar consumer products. Although small in comparison to over-all corn production, the white varieties sometimes have enjoyed price advantages for the limited markets. The white varieties usually sell for a few cents per bushel more than yellow corn. In May 1971, growers were getting $1.95 to $2.05 per bushel, while yellow corn producers received 50 cents less.

This season, however, apparently because of the big crop last year, yellow corn in Kansas City was selling at $1.31 to $1.34 per bushel in May while the white was bringing a nickel less, the department said.

Corn prices generally are expected to be higher this fall than last, partly because of the smaller crop estimated at 4.9 billion bushels—compared with the record 5.5 billion in 1971—and the larger export outlook as a result of grain sales to the Soviet Union.

White corn is grown commercially in 10 states, with Kentucky accounting for about one-fourth. Others include Illinois, Tennessee, Missouri, Kansas, Indiana, Texas, Iowa, Nebraska and Ohio.

Gulf Coast Exporters Shipping Wheat To Soviets

Grain exporters in New Orleans

are expected to get about 20 percent of massive wheat shipments to Russia which will leave through Gulf of Mexico ports.

Houston and Galveston are expected to get most of the remaining business.

C. B. Fox of the C. B. Fox Grain Co., the largest exporter of grain in New Orleans, said that Houston ships a hard winter wheat grown mainly west of the Mississippi River, while New Orleans exports soft red winter wheat grown east of the Mississippi.

Hard varieties of wheat are used in baking bread, while the soft varieties are used for "cakes, biscuits, and things like that," Fox said.

Under a purchase agreement negotiated earlier this year, Russia has agreed to buy about $750 million of American-grown grains over the next three years.

In addition to wheat, Russia is expected to purchase large quantities of soybean and corn, which would be shipped through New Orleans.

"We've been shipping corn to Russia since March," Fox said, estimating that about 150,000 tons of corn have already gone behind the Iron Curtain from New Orleans.

Dr. Bill Roy MEMBER OF CONGRESS Report from Washington

MY RECORD ON FISCAL RESPONSIBILITY

Fiscal responsibility is my number one responsibility to you as your Representative in Congress. I want you to understand that my considerable concern for the needs of the people in the areas of education, wealth, and full employment (Among others) has always been balanced by the ability of government to pay for these things. Many of our votes in Congress express our view of the priorities. We cannot pay for everything proposed.

If you are a typical American, you are paying 30 cents of every dollar you earn in federal, state and local taxes. In addition to this heavy tax bill, you are also burdened by continuing inflation. It takes $11.92 (on the average) today to buy what $10 bought in 1967. And it takes another 15 percent to buy an imported item, due to the recent devaluation of the dollar.

During the past four years, the Federal Government has spent nearly $100 billion more than it has taken in. You and I could not spend in such a reckless manner without facing insolvency and bankruptcy, and neither can our government. Inflation will not end until we balance our budget.

Because I believe in a prudent taxing and spending policy, I have done the following as Congressman:

- Voted against spending totaling $20 billion.
- Voted three times against raising the national debt.
- Co-sponsored a bill asking Treasury to collect $1 billion owed to us by nations.

I have always been conservative with my own money, and for a small home mortgage, I do not owe money to anyone. I have been and will continue to be as careful with your money as I am with mine.

As your Congressman, I refused to become swept up in many spending proposals in Washington, and my record proves this. I will continue this responsible, conservative fiscal policy.

I believe, in fact, I know we cannot continue to spend money that we do not have. It is why I recently voted for "revenue sharing." We should share something which we have.

Geological Survey and the U.S. Geological Survey reveal the water table of western Kansas is slowly declining.

Hydrologic Investigation Atlas, which provides data on ground water in Kearny County, shows the aquifer in one small but heavily developed section has been depleted as much as 30 per cent since 1948 by extensive pumping and heavy irrigation.

Officials of the state and federal geological surveys and cooperative agencies are continually monitoring the ground water levels in this area while seeking alternative or supplementary water supplies.

A second atlas describes water resources in six northwestern counties, Cheyenne, Decatur, Rawlins, Sheridan, Sherman, and Thomas, which have experienced rapid development of irrigation in recent years.

The average decline of water levels in this area from 1966 to 1969 was about two feet, and in some exceptional areas of heavy industrial and agricultural growth, levels have dropped as much as 16 feet. The average ground water depth in this area is about 100 feet; however, levels vary from below the 100-foot figure up to 200 feet in some places.

The general decline indicates that pumpage exceeds recharge and that water is being slowly depleted. However, the atlas shows that ground water of suitable quality and quantity is still available for domestic and stock use in most of the six-county area and for irrigation in a large part of it.

A growing idea from Allis-Chalmers:

2-stage threshing, 3-stage separation in the new Gleaner L Combine.

There's more going on inside the new Gleaner L Combine to help you get more crop out of a day's work.

Take the Gleaner L Combine's exclusive two-stage concave. It starts threshing with the aggressive rasp action of a rugged closed concave. Then finish threshes with a free-flowing open stage. No other combine lets you thresh both ways at once.

And that's only one part of the Gleaner L that's new and different... ready to change all combine design. Kernels travel on an extra-long front separator.

Husks and trash are blown away as grain moves to the shoe. Then open-bottom walkers on six-inch throw cranks sort out the trash. And let more clean grain fall through to the pan. With less trash. And less dockage at the elevator.

Two-stage threshing. Three-stage separation. Yet they're only part of the many Gleaner L Combine features that can increase your harvesting capacity. Compare them all at your Allis-Chalmers dealer now.

We can help you grow.

Exclusive two-stage concave.

Pot Harvest Starting, September Peak Month

Researchers and users alike agree that Kansas-grown marijuana is not "as potent as the imported variety," but each year at this time an army of transients passes through Kansas collecting hundreds of pounds of the weed for their own use and sale in other parts of the country. Pottawatomie County sheriff Dean Taylor, who has arrested nine out-of-state youths recently for harvesting in that county, said "they all say its no good, but they keep coming back every year." Large patches of marijuana, with stalks reaching eight feet in height, can be spotted along the highways and backroads of counties in northeast Kansas. Lawmen say that staking out every patch would be impossible.

Taylor said that during August, when the marijuana harvesting is at its peak, a number of "unfamiliar faces" begin to show up around the county.

In Riley County, Sheriff Wayne Anderson said that most of the people arrested in that county for marijuana possession this time of the year also are transients.

"Out of towners and GI's make up most of these arrested for marijuana possession," he said.

Anderson said that many people associated the increase in arrests with the reopening of Kansas State University, but adds that is a misconception.

"It just happens that harvesting time and the beginning of school are about the same time," he said. "As I said, most of our problems are from transients and soldiers."

Ten persons have been arrested in Riley County recently for possession or sale of marijuana, Anderson said.

Jim Owens, Wabaunsee County undersheriff, said there are a lot of pickers beginning to come into the county now—"September is the biggest month." It won't be clear how big the marijuana season was this year until it declines in October, he said.

Owens knew of no public effort to spray-kill marijuana although he said most farmers try to eradicate it by spraying or chopping it out. He called the idea of declaring marijuana a noxious weed so landowners would be subject to fines for not eradicating it on their land "unrealistic." He explained marijuana is much more widely spread than most noxious weeds so it might be prohibitively expensive for farmers to try eradicating it. He said it might be more realistic "to start harvesting it for hemp rope again and get another market for it."

The Jefferson County sheriff's office has made 33 arrests for marijuana harvesting since the beginning of the year, 28 of them during June, July and August.

Sheriff Carl Eisenhower said this seems to be running a little—but not much—behind last year's figures. He added that the "peak season" for pot pickers has just begun, running usually from the end of August to the first frost.

Eisenhower said he thought, before checking the record, that arrests have declined drastically this year, but found they were down only a little.

"Last year we'd sometimes have 16 in jail at once, trying to make bond and so on. This year, it's all worked out, everyone is ready to make bond as soon as you pick them up. And they seem to be more spread out. We haven't had the big bunches of arrests we had last year," Eisenhower said.

He added that while the quantity of confiscated marijuana has gone down "We aren't getting any truckloads this year" the quantity of "hard" drugs, such as amphetamines, hallucinogens and genuine narcotics like heroin, has increased.

"Of course, you find something every time you arrest someone," Eisenhower said. "Off hand, I don't remember ever picking up a pot picker who didn't have some pills or something stronger on him."

Eisenhower said most of the arrests continue to involve persons from out of state, rather than local people, but he attributed that largely to a matter of familiarity with the area.

"Somebody from Detroit comes out here and when he gets five miles out of town he thinks he's in a national forest or something, that he can do anything he wants and nobody will see. The local kids know where we're likely to be and where we're not, so we don't often catch them."

Set-Aside Farm Payments Based On Quality Of Land

The Agriculture Department has issued tightened regulations for computing payments to farmers for land set aside from production under 1973 crop programs.

Under the rules, farmers must set aside land of comparable quality to acres they keep in production or else have their governmental payments reduced.

The deductions next year will be increased in cases where adjustments are necessary to meet the intent of the set-aside program, officials said.

"For wheat and feed grains, when low-quality acreage is offered for set-aside — that is, acreage not representative of land on which the farm's crops are grown — the entire payment will be based on the productivity of the set-aside land," the department said.

The deduction rate for cotton will be comparable to wheat and feed grains, officials said.

Studies of 1971 and 1972 operations showed some farmers with poor and good land offered the poorer land for set-aside and accepted deductions from payments.

"The deductions were not enough to offset the monetary advantage gained by producing crops on the quality acreage rather than setting it aside from production," USDA
said.

SILAGE HARVEST

Stan Schurle runs a dairy farm west of Manhattan. This year he has put up 12,000 bales of prairie hay and alfalfa, and there will be over 2,000 tons of feed harvested. The silo pictured is eighty feet high and will hold about 700 tons of silage. The augering system feeds cattle with the pushing of a couple of buttons. With 275 head of Holsteins and 40 head of Angus cows and calves Schurle needs plenty of feed and this mechanized operation.

Stan has the help of his dad, George, and his uncle David Schurle. George finds that retirement doesn't take away the desire to be in the field during silage season.

K-State Graduate Finds Shearing Sheep Profitable

When 1972 Kansas State University graduate Galen Dreier started shearing sheep seven years ago "because I couldn't see paying someone else to do it" he had no idea it would be a part-time profession which would more than pay his way through school.

Dreier invested $10 in an electric sheep shears when he was 14 so he could shear his small flock of registered Suffolk ewes, which served for both 4-H and FFA projects.

After he attended a school sponsored by the Kansas Purebred Sheep Breeders Association and the state's Extension Service when he was a freshman at K-State, he started shearing commercially.

This business venture required a $300 investment for equipment—a one-quarter horsepower electric motor, a six-foot flexible shearing shaft, one handpiece, and numerous sets of combs and cutters.

Dreier, a native of Hesston, spent the summer of 1971 on the Aleutian Islands off the coast of Alaska. "The islands were 700 miles from Russia and 600 miles from Japan," says Dreier. "All we did for eight weeks was shear sheep."

When Dreier takes a job he sets a fast pace: one sheep every five minutes, 12 sheep an hour, 100 sheep a day. "I'm paid 65 cents a head for ewes and 50 cents a head for shearing feeder lambs."

Feeder lambs are smaller and easier to handle so it takes less time to shear them, says Dreier.

Dreier, who stands six feet tall and carries 180 pounds on a strongly muscled frame, says there are "a lot of sore muscles when I first start shearing sheep each year."

"It takes a strong back, weak mind, and a lot of practice to shear sheep," he jokes.

Dreier lived at the K-State sheep barns all four years he was in college and he considered it a sort of scholarship. He not only had a place to live, but in caring for the sheep and showing them he learned many valuable management practices.

The fall of his sophomore year he won the junior sheep shearing contest at the Kansas State Fair. Since then Dreier has been a member of a sheep shearing crew which tours Kansas, shearing up to 500 ewes in a day.

"One of the benefits has been the opportunity to meet others interested in sheep and to observe their operations," says Dreier.

Two years ago while showing K-State's flock of sheep at the Chicago International Livestock Show he met his wife—she, too, was showing sheep.

A serious young man, Dreier faced a dilemma when he was graduated last spring with a degree in animal science and industry. He had to choose between a salaried job and his father's offer of a partnership on the family farm four miles north of Newton.

Dreier, who decided to go back to the farm, says: "It was hard to turn down a salaried job and go home because I knew it would be a struggle to make ends meet. But I was determined to raise my children on a farm. And besides, farming isn't an occupation, it's a way of life and I decided I just couldn't leave it."

Possible Boxcar Shortage Worries Railroad Officials

The grain car supply, which sailed through the wheat harvest without the worrisome shortages which have plagued most summers for Kansas farmers and grain handlers, now has become a matter of concern as the fall harvests approach.

It all has happened in the last few weeks. Until then the railroads, except in a few minor instances, had grain cars on hand when they were needed. There was an ample supply in most sections of the state.

Many elevator operators now look upon September, October and November as critical months for transportation as corn and milo harvests come on and wheat, much of it bound for Russia, continues in heavy movement.

"We are now taking box cars instead of hoppers," Jack Conlee, general manager of Gano-Horace Grain, Inc., Hutchinson, whose company has elevators in a number of points in the big wheat country of both Kansas and Colorado, said.

Conlee said during harvest the preferred large, covered, hopper cars were available at all points along the Santa Fe but his company experienced trouble with points on other railroads. As an example of the latter, he said he had 35 to 40 cars on order for a period of 30 days at one point and was getting only from one to two a day.

The wheat movement has slackened in the last few days as farmers are holding in the face of rising prices. Grainmen speculate heavier traffic will develop in the event of further price advances or a sharp break in prices.

The Union Pacific was able to keep up with the record grain movement of the summer.

"We had empty cars stored all over the system 30 days ago," Jack Bowen, U.P. general superintendent of transportation said. "Two weeks ago we still had an ample supply of cars for the harvest. Today I'm worried."

Bowen believes the Russian wheat order will place a heavy demand on rail cars through the fall and winter. It has spurred wheat prices and increased trading between domestic elevators.

Conlee said he would not be surprised if an embargo of Gulf ports was necessary in the next two to three months, due to the heavy pressure of grain movements.

The Santa Fe has been experiencing the same difficulty as other western carriers in the past two weeks when minor delays have developed in the supply of hopper cars. However, the Santa Fe has plenty of box cars to supply elevators.

"We feel we can continue to handle shipments satisfactorily," one official said.

The Union Pacific, which bought 1,000 hopper cars this year to add to its purchase of 750 last year, expects to feel the first shortage pinch in these cars. "When the hoppers run out, we'll start throwing box cars into the battle," Bowen said.

Grainmen generally feel that a mild fall will spread out the corn and milo harvests, relieving somewhat the grain car pressure.

Most are guessing the milo harvest to be later than that of last year, coming about the middle of October. Corn picking should start about the first of October.

prices are mainly the speculators in the grain trade, "as usual", Wayne Worthington of Burrton, charged.

Worthington, Reno County farmer-stockman and president of the county Farmers Union, said a canvas of several county elevators has shown that a great percentage of the wheat was sold at harvest time or shortly after "to meet the high taxes, high interest and other farm production expenses."

"There have been waves of misleading information in the news releases of recent weeks concerning the benefits farmers have received as a result of the higher wheat prices," he said.

"The catastrophic repercussion will be fully realized through a reduction in the amount of the 1973 wheat certificates," Worthington said. "The general public and even many farmers are unaware that the wheat certificates are the difference between parity and the market price of wheat for the first five months after July 1."

The farmers who were forced to sell at the lower prices lose on both ends, he said, "yet the Department of Agriculture reporting service will show a rise in farm income."

G&G Area Farmers Find Downpour On Irrigation Tour

The observations of the men attending the State Irrigation Tour in Garden City were not how to apply water, but how to get rid of it.

The irony of the second day was the observation of the irrigation practices in the Garden City, Lakin, Ulysses, and Sublette areas in a constant downpour of rain.

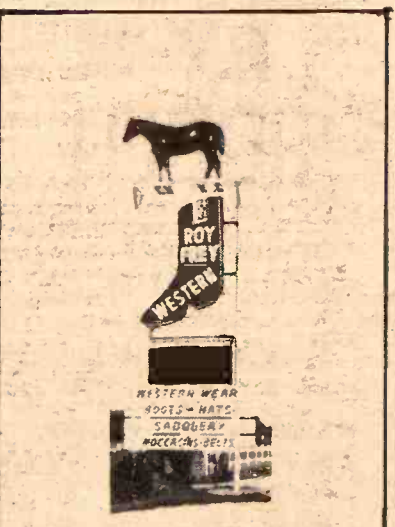

Irrigation in this area has had an unbelievable growth the past four years. Expanded feed production has caused a proportionate increase in the number of cattle being fed in the area.

The most startling sight was seeing 150 bushel corn growing out in the middle of the sandhill and sage brush country southwest of Garden City. The center pivot self propelling sprinkler systems were throwing water as far as you could see. These producers talked in terms of so many circles of corn. A circle consisted of 131 acres, some firms having as many as 42 circles.

WELLINGTON—The Riverdale Cemetery is sinking and no one knows for sure when it will stop.

A large depression at least 50-by-20 feet and several feet deep has developed in the northwest corner of the cemetery and is spreading southeasterly.

Located just outside Riverdale, a small community north of Wellington, the rural cemetery was once nearly flat.

Now, the storage shed tilts so it is hard to stand straight on its floor and the tombstones, elm and cedar trees—even the fences—are leaning.

Many area residents who have relatives buried in the cemetery are concerned about the future. About a dozen bodies have been exhumed and moved elsewhere. Most people seem to agree more will probably have to be moved.

James E. Meyers, an assistant professor of geology at Wichita State University, said the cemetery is probably experiencing a natural sink caused by groundwater erosion.

He said the Hutchinson salt member, a salt vein at a depth of nearly 600 feet at Hutchinson, surfaces near Wellington. The area bordered by Wichita, Newton, McPherson, Hutchinson and Wellington has underlying salt at varying depths.

Meyers said: "The salt under the cemetery has probably eroded and washed away by groundwater, and like a sandwich that has some of the middle taken out, the ground layers have to settle to fill in the void."

He also said it is rare for a natural sink of this type to get any deeper than 5 to 10 feet, but without drilling and taking samples it is hard to predict how large it will get or when it will stop.

Nebraska Loses Hog Cholera-Free Status USDA Says

Nebraska's third hog cholera case within two months has caused that State to lose hog cholera-free status, the U.S. Department of Agriculture reports.

Veterinarians with USDA's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service said hog cholera had been diagnosed in Adams County, Neb., swine herds on June 10, July 13 and Aug. 3. These herds and one other that was exposed to the infection were destroyed to stop the infection; indemnities were paid to the owners and quarantines placed on the surrounding area.

APHIS officials said Nebraska lost hog cholera-free status because the disease spread within the State in spite of prompt elimination of the primary outbreaks, which originated in hogs shipped in from another State.

Under the standards of the Cooperative State-Federal Hog Cholera Eradication Program, States lose "free" status unless primary hog cholera outbreaks are eliminated promptly without further spread. Prior to this action 46 States were hog cholera-free.

State and federal officials currently are surveying all swine herds in the area of the recent outbreaks to locate any other herds that may have been exposed to the disease. Surveillance will be maintained for a minimum of 30 days following the most recent case. If no further cases occur Nebraska will regain "free" status in six months.

APHIS officials are also concerned about recent cases in other States. Within the past two months, hog cholera has been discovered in Florida, Kentucky, Nebraska, New Jersey, North Carolina, and Texas, indicating that the virus is present either in raw pork or is being spread through movements of swine or contaminated vehicles.

Federal quarantines against hog cholera are now in effect in all or parts of 15 counties in six States. To date this year, 71 hog cholera cases have been reported in the United States, compared with 106 cases for the same period a year ago.
