

We Did It!

A Collaborative Collection Development Project at the KU and KSU Libraries

Lea Currie – University of Kansas Libraries

Mira Greene – Kansas State University Libraries

CULS Conference – April 28, 2017

How We Did It

- Let's collaborate on a DDA project!
- KSU Joins Yankee Book Peddler (YBP) – We approached YBP first.
- When YBP could not come up with a collaborative DDA project, we approached ProQuest.

How We Did It

- ProQuest suggested we choose publishers based on usage.
 - 8 were chosen.
 - 4 were willing to participate:
 - Springer Publishing
 - Wiley
 - Taylor and Francis
 - Wolters Kluwer

How We Did It

- ProQuest agreed to set up a DDA program with short-term loans.
- When a purchase is triggered, KU and KSU together pay 150% of the list price.
- Both schools have perpetual access to purchased books.
- The project was delayed until EBL and ebrary migrated to ProQuest Ebook Central for both institutions.

How We Did It

- Other questions to consider:
 - How much money does each school contribute to the project up front?
 - How does invoicing through YBP take place?
 - How often are the schools invoiced?
 - How would the new account be set up with YBP?

How We Did It

- And more questions:
 - How does each school track their short-term loans and purchases?
 - How often are catalog records received and loaded?
 - What are the tech specs for the full catalog record?

How We Did It

- The first records were compiled on February 20, 2017.
- Records were loaded and went live on February 27.
 - So far, tweaks have been made. Non-linear lending preference knocked out many Routledge titles.
 - Going to 1 simultaneous user as secondary preference caused turnaway problems.

How We Will Do It in the Future

- ProQuest continues to negotiate with more publishers.
- More time, more records in our catalogs = more purchases.

Questions?

- Lea Currie – lcurre@ku.edu
- Mira Greene – mirage@ksu.edu