

Triplet Calves

Their mother keeps a protective eye on triplet calves owned by Elmer Taylor of Eureka. The calves weighed 48, 48 and 52 pounds at birth on September 24. The Taylors use appropriate identification for each of the trio to assure an equal intake of nourishment at meal time. The herd owned by the Taylors produced four sets of twins last year.

Fraud Charges Around Area Implement Firm

One of the major small town financial empires in the G&G area has apparently waned in the face of a series of charges of bank fraud against E. C. Riley, longtime implement and gear dealer in Cawker City and Colby.

Creditors have apparently chopped off a prosperous career of 40 years. Fraud charges have been filed in his home Mitchell County. Riley is accused of using fictitious names on promissory notes owed to him used as collateral to borrow from the Traders State Bank at Glen Elder, Banks at Denver, Kansas City, Salina, as well as local banks at Downs, Beloit and Glen Elder are among his creditors.

The implement firm at Cawker City is no longer owned by Riley. Its owner instead is James Warren, former owner of the Glen Elder bank, which loaned $45,974 to Riley on the strength of fraudulent notes, according to charges filed in Mitchell County District Court. Preliminary hearing is set for October 23.

Once mayor of Cawker City and a candidate for Congress, Riley apparently has the sympathy and support of many fellow citizens in his home community.

Knowledge of his troubles has been fairly well known since August, when the Traders State Bank was sold to J. Rex Duwe, who also owns banks at Lucas and Sylvan Grove.

Don't Rush To Catch Train

One's chances of catching a train going anyplace are getting less and less.

The Santa Fe Railroad announced last week it intends to discontinue all passenger service except for a few runs.

The U.S. Post Office last week removed all mail from Santa Fe passenger trains, and Santa Fe spokesmen, saying that mail revenues served as a backbone of passenger trains, announced they would cut all trains except the Super Chief and El Capitan runs from Chicago to Los Angeles, the San Francisco Chief between Chicago and San Francisco, and the Texas Chief between Chicago and Texas.

St. Marys Pews Find A New Home

When St. Marys College closed this summer, 24 solid oak pews from the Catholic church there were the prize available for the winning bidder at an auction. The community Congregational church at Maple Hill, a village in the eastern Wabaunsee County grassland, got them and used them in a major sprucing-up of the church. Thomas Blaney, pastor of the Maple Hill church, admires the new interior.

Set Up Water District In Republic County

COURTLAND — Republic County's first water district has been established, to bring soft, sweet water to the communities of Courtland and Lovewell and to the rural areas of Formoso and Kackley, Kans.

Already 147 prospective users have signed up.

Construction of the district's water system is expected to start in December now that arrangements have been completed for a $290,000 loan from the Farmers Home Administration.

It will take 80 miles of pipe to supply the district. Two water towers will be erected.

The water system will tap wells 15 miles northwest of Courtland, to get the necessary water.

The water system will make water softeners unnecessary, Andy Thompson, district president, said, because the water tests only 12 grains hard. Some water in the area tests as hard as 40 grains.

Thompson said that the benefit user fee is $265, which figures 10 per cent of the cost of individual service.

LIMIT LOSS ON ELLSWORTH FETE

Financing centennials, celebrations and pageants is a major problem for all G&G area towns, but one area town last week thought it did pretty well with its week-long centennial.

The committee which handled the Ellsworth Centennial said that stockholders of the corporation formed to provide operating capital will get back most of their money. Payback will be 80 cents on the dollar.

French Farmers Demonstrate Vs. Low Prices

Farmers rioted in scattered parts of France last week as they took part in a nation-wide demonstration against sagging agricultural prices and rising operating costs.

The demonstration by 100,000 peasants was intended to coincide with the end of the summer recess of the National Assembly, which is expected to get a leftist censure motion against government economic policies Tuesday.

The most violent fighting broke out in the western city of Quimper, where farmers battled police to a bloody standstill after sacking a police station and local Gaullist party headquarters.

The rampaging farmers, armed with staves, paving stones and bottles, withstood repeated police attempts to clear them

More Meat In Overseas Diets

More persons in western Europe and Japan are eating meat today — and that's good news for American producers of corn and other coarse grains.

A study of trends in foreign trade indicates that U.S. exports of coarse grains, which averaged 10,536,000 metric tons annually 1959 through 1961, should expand to 29,000,000 metric tons by 1970, according to Robert C. Liebenow, president of Corn Refiners Association, Inc.

Liebenow reported there are strong indications that grain is replacing potatoes in livestock rations in European countries, and that in both Europe and Japan hog production is expanding rapidly.

"Production of corn and other coarse grains — sorghums, oats, barley — is lagging behind consumption in those areas, which means there will be greater demand for imports of these grains in the future," Liebenow noted.

154 Places Have Slot Machine Stamps

A hassle between the attorney general's office and some local law enforcement officials over who's supposed to do the most about enforcing gambling laws in the state has produced a current list of 154 places which have federal coin-operated gaming stamps.

Seven locations or persons are also listed which have federal wagering stamps.

Publication of the list by the attorney general's office was made last week, following a statement by Sheriff Vern Miller of Sedgwick County who hinted that Att. Gen. Robert Londerholm may not be doing his job.

Miller said he had seen slot machines in several other counties, which made him wonder "if he (Londerholm) is doing his job."

Dick Seaton, head of the attorney general's criminal division, said it is the policy of the attorney general to come into a county only when the situation is serious or if he has been invited.

The gaming stamps are mostly held by fraternal clubs and veterans organizations. A few private businesses also hold them, principally in Leavenworth, Pittsburg and Fort Scott.

The wagering stamps are held by Club Royal, Salina; Leo Horne, Topeka; and Joseph Kostelac, James Lano, Harry Maas Jr., John Priddey and Melvin Smith, all of Kansas City, Ks.

Because they fear federal enforcement and penalties, clubs by federal gaming stamps and take the risk of state and local enforcement, which are informed of what groups and individuals hold gaming and wagering stamps.

Enforcement has been spotty over the years but the number of federal stamps has declined in the last couple of years, indicating that either local enforcement has followed up disclosure of the holders of federal stamps or that more clubs and gamblers are risking federal enforcement for not having stamps.

Most noticeable change in the federal stamp list in recent years has been the drying up in Wichita. For the second year federal authorities list no clubs or firms or gamblers with federal stamps in Sedgwick County.

Holders of federal gaming stamps presumably are running slot machines, which of course are contrary to state law and in most cases, to local ordinance. Here is the current list of holders of gaming stamps:

GEHL ROTARY SHREDDERS

Gehl now offers you two new rotary shredders for weeds, grass and pasture clipping as well as stalk shredding. These Clean-Cut Shredders are available in a 72-inch model which easily handles two rows of stalks and the giant 144-inch unit that cuts a full four rows.

CC-6 The handy 6-ft. Clean-Cut gives you 20% more cutting capacity than the conventional 60-in. shredders. Available in either pull-type or pick-up models, the Gehl is especially useful in controlling the corn borer.

CC-12 One of the many features of the 12-ft. Clean-Cut Shredder is the "V" shield attached to the rear bottom side of the hood. With the "V" in place, you get perfect spreading with your shredding. Without it, you leave an even windrow. A heavy-duty hitch enables you to pull a disc behind the shredder.

Stop in soon. Ask to see the new Gehl Clean-Cut... the right move in rotary shredding.

Kansas Ranks 8th In Angus Registrations

Kansas ranked 8th and Nebraska 9th in the numbers of Angus cattle registered in the past year with the American Angus Association at St. Joseph. Kansas registered 16,827 Angus calves during the fiscal year ended September 30, and Nebraska 15,154.

The leading Angus state was Missouri with 44,356 registrations. Texas was next with 36,000 and Iowa had 30,000. Oklahoma, Tennessee, Illinois and Kentucky ranked right ahead of Kansas and Nebraska.

The number of transfers fell slightly from 1966, with numbers about two-thirds that of the numbers of registrations.

After six years of experimentation, Russian scientists have developed a dramatic system of controlling hail storms that drastically reduces crop loss and property damage.

They do it by radar — pinpointing hail stones in the heart of a storm as they begin to form and firing anti-aircraft shells, loaded with silver iodide particles, into the specific cloud area.

The experiments and methods used are revealed in a publication recently translated into English. Soviet scientists have recommended that the system be used on a national scale.

American weather experts are quietly excited over the prospect of beginning similar tests in this country. They believe the effort could lead to multimillion dollar savings to agriculture and other sectors of the economy that are vulnerable to hail devastation.

Results with precise firing and supporting equipment have been obtained at such an apparent low cost that American meteorologists believe it inevitable that the experiments will be repeated here to see if they can duplicate the figures.

In the final large-scale test, the Russians set aside 486,000 hectares (about 1,200,000 acres) to be protected from hail storms. Approximately the same amount of "reference"

Save Seeds?

It's always a temptation to save seeds from a particularly fine flower, but if it is of a hybrid variety there is little advantage in so doing. The seedlings grown from your home-saved seeds will not produce flowers like those of the parent bloom. In fact the blossoms will vary in size and color and many will be inferior.

Durable Press Products Make Mark In Home

One of the most important scientific advances in recent years to the busy housewife may be the advent of easy-care durable press fabrics.

Concentrated effort went into the development of Kodol polyester by the Eastman Fibers division. Polyester fibers are a basic component of most durable press fabrics, because they can withstand the chemicals, extreme heat and great pressure used in the durable press process. They also increase the life and easy care features of the products.

Durable press offers one of its greatest advantages to the housewife in the curtain and drapery area. Frothy, fragile sheer curtains, for example, become downright livable. Drapery fabrics come from the dryer with their soft folds falling into place as neatly as when they were new.

Today, with durable press table cloths, napkins and place mats, table linens can once

Trapped by rising costs?

consider Purina BIR

If labor and equipment costs are putting the squeeze on you, it may be time to consider a Purina BIR program.

"Built-In-Roughage" rations bring cattle the roughages they need, right in the supplement. That means reduced production costs in handling and delivery. And, you can control the intake of grain and roughages.

Purina Steer Fatena BIR, mixed with your grain, may help cut investments and still improve feed efficiency. It's the convenient way to bring cattle the protein, roughage and energy they need for fast gains and good conversion.

If rising costs are on your mind, stop in at our sign of the Checkerboard. A Purina BIR program may be your best investment yet.

Using Dried Flowers

use indoors in winter. Interesting ways of using these and other dried flowers are in article.

The gardener who grows flowers likes to keep them with him as long as possible. Given the right flowers this can be all winter.

The blooms of strawflowers, acroclium, blue salvia, celosia and cockscomb, bells of Ireland, Chinese lantern, gomphrena, baby's breath, honesty and statice all can be dried for indoor use. Perhaps you already have a supply of these hanging upside down in a warm, dry place. Next thing is to decide what to do with them.

An obvious answer is to make mixed bouquets of them, of the type often referred to as "winter bouquets." But that's not the most interesting use for these blooms you've grown so carefully.

How about making a design of them on the underside of your glass-topped breakfast or coffee table? Fun to do, beautiful to behold! Arrange the blooms on a sheet of clear plastic cut to the size of the glass of your table. Glue them to this sheet. When your design is finished, glue the whole sheet to the underside of the glass. Then stand back and accept praise modestly.

A flower picture is a pretty way to use dried flowers. For use in a bedroom, mount them on a velvet-covered piece of cardboard, cut to fit any picture frame you may own. Plywood can take the place of velvet if the frame is to be used in the living room.

Just to be different mount the dried flowers on a piece of glass. Cover with another of the same size. Bind the edges of the two together with passepartout tape and hang the picture in a window so the light shines through the flowers.

Flat flowers like those of pansies and cosmos, with the gray leaves of artemisias added for contrast, make a lovely picture used under the glass on a dressing table top.

These are just a few of the ways to use dried flowers. By growing your own from seeds you'll have a wide variety available.

Irrigators See Pickers As Output Breakthru

Mechanical harvesting equipment, now on trial in southwest Kansas, may be the breakthrough that irrigators in that portion of the Sunflower State have been waiting for.

"Plenty of good irrigation farmers who cultivate a million acres of good irrigated land have been giving serious thought to large-scale vegetable production," says Milam T. Jones, area Extension horticulture specialist, Ulysses. "But competent labor to handle these special crops is very scarce. So a high degree of mechanization is essential to extensive production here."

On a trial basis, a U.C. Black-welder Tomato Harvester is being used to process the 160 acres of tomatoes in Stanton County this fall. The crop is on contract to a LaJunta, Colorado, canning company.

Two mechanical cucumber harvesters are also being tried in southwest Kansas in field trials for a Michigan manufacturing company. Although these mechanical vegetable harvesters do require some workers to man the grading platforms, the overall labor requirement to handle these relatively fragile crops is greatly reduced.

These mechanical harvesters perform best in large fields such as are common in the southwest part of Kansas, Jones points out. If the harvesting problems can be solved, then interested Kansas producers can concentrate on finding suitable markets to make commercial vegetable production practical.

This interest in vegetable production has been present in southwest Kansas for several years, Jones notes. At various times, individual producers have planted test acreages in such crops as lettuce, cabbage, carrots, onions, cantaloupes, cucumbers, tomatoes, sweet corn popcorn, dry beans, black-eyed peas, and potatoes.

MONOPOLY FINALLY LOSES GAME LEAD

For the first time, Monopoly is not the highest-selling parlor game. Parker Brothers say Ouija boards are selling at the rate of 2 million a year now, compared to 1.75 million a year for Monopoly. Monopoly has led the game field for 32 years.

Still Time To Plant Cool Season Grasses

There is still time to plant cool season pasture grasses, such as smooth bromegrass and fall fescue, in eastern Kansas — provided the weatherman cooperates — says Dr. Robert M. Hyde, Extension range management specialist at Kansas State University.

But get the seed in the ground as soon as possible, the K-State agronomist advises, to take advantage of cool fall temperatures and good soil moisture. If frost comes when seedlings are

The main disadvantage of winter seeding is that some seed is lost — it may rot in the soil, be washed out, or be covered too deeply.

Early spring seeding should be between March 1 and April 1. Seeding done after March 15 in eastern Kansas or April 1 in western Kansas is susceptible to weed competition and high summer temperatures before the grass becomes well established.

	Zone 1	Zone 2	Zone 3	Zone 4
Fall	Aug 25- Oct 1	Sept 5- Oct 1	Sept 10- Oct 5	Sept 15- Oct 15
Winter	Nov 15- Mar 1	Dec 1- Mar 1	Dec 1- Mar 1	Dec 1- Feb 20

small, there is danger of winterkill.

Under normal conditions, the seeds germinate rapidly in the fall, and seedlings get established before severe winter weather arrives. These seedlings will grow rapidly next spring, and become well established before there is much competition from weeds.

An alternative planting time is during the winter when the soil is too cold for the seed to germinate. This usually means after November 15 in western Kansas and after December 1 in eastern Kansas.

Ark City Feedlot Progresses

An 8000-head feedlot construction is progressing near Arkansas City. Workmen here are working on the office of the $225,000 feedlot, which manager William Baucus says should be open in December. It is anticipated most of the cattle fed here will go to the Arkansas City Maurer-Neuer division of the John Morrell Co., meat packers. The facility is financed thru an SBA loan.

Iowa Packers Not Interested In Emporia Plant

DAKOTA CITY, Iowa — Currier J. Holman, chairman of the board of directors for Iowa Beef Packers here, last week denied his firm is buying the Armour Packing Co. beef slaughtering facility in Emporia. There was a persistent Emporia rumor the Iowa firm was buying the plant following an Armour announcement of its closing.

Armour officials in the closing announcement declared they were unable to buy beef at sufficiently low prices to warrant keeping the plant in operation.

Holman said he had understood Armour built the Emporia facility in hope of curing labor and administrative problems plaguing the Kansas City Armour plant causing its closing some time ago.

A number of beef feeding operations in the immediate vicinity of Emporia could furnish beef to the plant, which has a capacity of only 470 head daily, most observers believe. Actual operation of the plant seldom, if ever, reached full capacity, it was reported.

Holman admitted his firm had visited the Armour Emporia facility during the time it was being built and had visited the plant since it began operations nearly three years ago.

But, he said, at the present time "we do not contemplate buying it."

Sure, crooked noses are ugly. But worse, they eat into hog profits. Atrophic rhinitis wastes feed in at least half the herds. And most damage is done long before they show up with crooked noses.

Now you can fight back. There's a new drug combination, Tylan and Sulfamethazine, which keeps weight gains steady even in the presence of atrophic rhinitis. Plus they control vibronic dysentery, another costly disease.

We have Tylan and Sulfa in complete pig feed to protect your investment up to 75 pounds. And we can add Tylan to promote growth all the way to market. Fight back. We can help.

Gates Rubber Sees 18% Return In Corporate Farming

DENVER — Denver-based Gates Rubber Co. is putting a big bundle of cash on the line to back up its conviction that corporate farming is the answer to supply the food and fiber needs of the world in the future.

Next spring, Gates Farms, Inc., a subsidiary of Gates Rubber Co., will begin seeding crops on 5000 acres of dry farm and range land that the company has purchased — at an average price of $132.50 per acre — to convert into irrigated farms. The 5000 acres, purchased from about 12 different owners, is located in scattered blocks in the Ogallala reservoir area of north eastern Colorado.

Company officials outlined plans for the huge farming project and denied charges by some farm groups and individuals that some kind of a tax gimmick is involved. They also denied charges that the company is pressuring small farmers off of the land.

"When a company like Gates goes into a new operation it is in it to make money," said Loiue E. Dequine Jr., manager of Gates' agricultural division. "Gates has to diversify to stay alive," he added, citing the large number of companies that have disappeared from the rubber industry scene which is now dominated by the big five. He indicated that Gates has no intention of getting into the disappearing act.

Three years of research on irrigation methods, equipment, crops and studying the economic potential of large-scale farming convinced Gates officials that a good return on investment could be made "if you know what you are doing."

Dequine estimates that the return on investment the first year will be 12.1 percent. Within five years the return will be up to 18 percent, he said.

Dequine sees the food industry as a growth industry, one that will never run out of a market. Population expansion will result in an ever-growing market.

Gates officials estimate that they will have to invest about $200 per acre over and above the cost of acquisition for wells and equipment. This means that they will have nearly $400 per acre invested before they harvest their first crop.

"Where dry land can gross, say $30 an acre, that same land can produce eight times as much when a good underground water supply is developed and modern, efficient operating procedures are applied," Dequine declared.

The Gates operations will provide a fringe benefit for the counties in which they operate

Up To Workers Says Armour At St. Joseph

ST. JOSEPH, Mo. — Workers in the old Armour & Co. plant at St. Joseph can help insure that a new plant will replace it, a company official said.

Last week Armour announced it was closing its plants at Emporia, Ks. and West Point, Nebr. immediately, and will close those at Omaha, Denver and Lubbock, Tex., within six months because of unprofitable operations. That will leave the company with 19 plants.

Most of the St. Joseph plant was built in 1898, and officials estimate its remaining lifetime at two years.

The plant manager, William R. Miller, told employees in a letter that annual losses have occurred, and the estimated loss for this year will be extremely heavy.

"Low productivity, delays and other inefficiencies are causing unnecessary expenses," Miller said in the letter. "These costs are controllable."

The letter said a new cost-reduction program will start October 16, and explains that the possibility of a new plant depends on the cooperation of the workers.

"I personally feel that we can put ourselves in position to prove that St. Joseph can make money and that a new plant is justified on a sound, economical basis," Miller said.

The plant employs about 1000 persons with a weekly payroll of $130,000.

TWA BUILDS HOSTESS SCHOOL IN STATE

TWA plans to build a school in Overland Park to train airline hostesses. The campus, on 34 acres, should be ready for use in 1969. TWA has a maintenance base in Kansas City, Mo., just 20 minutes away from the location of the proposed school.

since irrigated land is taxed five to six times as high as dry land, Dequine said.

The company estimates that about 25 full time employees will be hired to run the operation. Each of the farm units will have a resident manager. At harvest time, many times that number will be employed on a temporary basis. Dequine said Gates is offering jobs to the farmers whose land they have purchased.

For the first year, the company will probably grow only corn and sugar beets. For the future, many other crops are under consideration — cucumbers, pinto beans, potatoes, onions, lettuce and other truck crops.

Another possibility for the future is a livestock feeding operation in conjunction with the farming. If things go as company officials hope, they will look into the possibility of further vertical integration.

Dequine said that the present trend toward huge corporate farms "might be a healthy thing for this country." He added that, in his opinion, the salvation of the young people now on farms who want to stay in the business is to get together and incorporate. This would give them the borrowing base needed to develop the land to its highest possible potential.

The Gates firm is not exactly a newcomer to the agricultural field. It owns extensive ranch interests in Wyoming and has an egg factory with some 360,000 laying hens in the Denver area. Each of the operations — the farms, the ranches and the egg factory — is a separate corporate subsidiary of Gates Rubber Co.

State Poultry Assn. Convention Set In Wichita November 1-2

MANHATTAN — Kansas poultrymen will take a look at themselves as businessmen and their industry as a part of the vast, growing agribusiness sector of the economy at the State Poultry Association's 33rd Annual Convention in Wichita, November 1 and 2.

Zoning, feeding programs, selling eggs, working with the banker, and the industry's future are topics poultrymen will review during the 2-day event, reports M. E. Jackson, Extension poultryman at Kansas State University and secretary of the group.

Interest runs high among producers in the dressed turkey and egg shows held in conjunction with the meeting, Jackson says. Lloyd Peterson, Paynesville, Minn., National Turkey Federation, will address the conventioners at the opening luncheon Wednesday, November 1. Egg show entries will be taken 8:30 a.m. to 2 p.m. Wednesday, and entries for the dressed turkey show are due at Ray-Al in Hesston by 2 p.m., Tuesday, October 31.

On the first afternoon of the convention, a panel headed by Dr. Donald Erickson, Extension economist at KSU, will discuss the question, "Will Zoning Put You Out of Business?" Another topic for the afternoon session will be "Me and My Banker," discussed by a panel of hatcherymen.

Educational sessions get top billing on Thursday of the convention as Charles Deyoe, of the Department of Grain Science and industry at KSU, discusses "Feed Programs Designed for Your Farm." Jack Pardee, of the Poultry and Egg National Board, Chicago, will tell the producers "How To Sell Eggs," and "The Future of the Poultry Industry" will be discussed by Monroe Babcock, Ithaca, New York, of Babcock Poultry Farms.

Polled Hereford Assn. Eases AI Regulations

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — The directors of the American Polled Hereford Assn. have amended the rules regarding artificial insemination to allow the registration of up to 100 calves resulting from AI after the death of the sire.

The rule change provides that after a bull dies his semen may be used up to a limit of 100 registered calves conceived during the first five years after his death.

Breeders must notify the association when the bull dies. This rule will become effective Jan. 1, 1968.

Other APHA registration requirements are unchanged.

For a calf produced by artificial insemination to be eligible for registration, the applicant breeder must own the calf's dam and be one of not more than four co-owners of the bull at the time the calf is conceived. Permits to breed a bull by AI must be obtained from the association by registered breeders.

sed by Monroe Babcock, Ithaca, New York, of Babcock Poultry Farms.

Harold Ensley, "The Sportsman's Friend," will present the banquet program Thursday evening. His topic will be "Philosophy of a Sportsman." Dr. Sykes Trieb, KSU Extension economist, will be toastmaster at the banquet.

Falcon Price Test On Bug

What would happen to sales of small foreign cars if American compacts were priced competitively with them?

U.S. carmakers are apparently interested in making it tougher on Volkswagen and other small imports, and Ford in an experiment during the summer on the West Coast found that it could markedly increase the sales of its Falcon by getting its price down around the $1850 price of a new Volks bug.

The test was carried out in several Ford districts, mainly covering California, Washington, Nevada, Northern Idaho, Arizona and parts of New Mexico. Ford encouraged the dealers to cut prices roughly $300 to get down to the Volks price. While the slash cut into dealer's profits, Ford made cash rebates in amounts varying with the numbers of units sold.

Result: Falcon sales in the test area went up 20% while sales in the rest of the country declined 15% from the same period in 1966.

The West Coast was chosen for the test because foreign imports sell well there, accounting for 17% of the total market.

Best Lamb At Wichita Show

Steve Menzies of Manhattan had the champion lamb at the Kansas National Junior Livestock Show at Wichita. He's shown here, right, with his 105 pound Hampshire, along with Jim Wyant of Peck, who had reserve champion. Menzies also had the top pen of three of the show. He's the son of Carl Menzies, a K-State professor of animal husbandry and sheep expert.

FARMERS OUTLOOK

Here's What Pig Report Means

Some new light was thrown on the hog outlook by the September Pig Crop Report. The report (released by the USDA on September 21) was based largely on reports returned by farmers in 10 leading states as of September 1.

These are the highlights of the report:

1. The number of market pigs and hogs on hand September 1 was 39.3 million — 2 percent fewer than last year.

2. Farmers reported the intention of having 2,132,000 sows to farrow in the fall quarter (September-October-November) — 1 percent less than during the same three months a year ago.

3. Farmers expect to have 1,703,000 sows to farrow during the winter quarter (December-January-February) — 2 percent less than last year.

Weights of hogs on hand. The number of market hogs weighing over 180 pounds on hand as of September 1 was listed at 6 million head — up 2 percent from last year. Most of these hogs will be marketed by the end of October.

Hogs weighing 120 to 180 pound on September 1 were estimated at 9.4 million — 1 percent below a year ago. Most of these pigs should make pork in December and January.

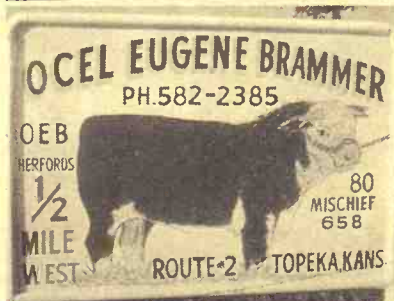

Pigs weighing less than 60 pounds were estimated at 13.7 million — 1 percent more than a year ago. They are expected to reach market weight mostly in February and March.

From these figures, we conclude that market supplies of hogs will be about the same — maybe a little less — during the next 6 months, compared with the same 6 months last year. Supplies of competitive meats are also expected to be near the levels of last year.

Price prospects. Our guess is that hog prices will average about the same this fall and winter as they did a year before, but with a different trend.

Last fall, prices of barrows and gilts at central markets averaged $21.57 in October, then held around $19.50 through February. Average prices sagged to $18.43 in March, to $17.62 in April, but climbed to $21.83 for May, and to $22.29 for June.

Since prices have already come down substantially from their summer peak, there may be little or no fall or winter decline this year.

Grass & Grain

October 10, 1967

It now appears that the hog corn price ration will be very favorable this fall (October-November-December). For example, $20 hogs and $1 corn would make a ratio of 20 to 1. Such a favorable price relationship for hog producers would encourage many of them to increase spring farrowings. Any large expansion would bring low prices (possibly $15 or less) in the fall and winter of 1968-69.

U.S. Farm Know How Doesn't Hike Foreign Yields Without Reception

Experienced American vocational agriculture teachers could provide real stimulation for agricultural gains in developing countries.

This was one of the suggestions incorporated into a scholarly paper presented by two Kansas State University educators before a Seminar on the Role of Agricultural Education in Social Change and Economic Development in Washington, D.C.

The K-Staters, Dr. Joseph Hadja, director of the Office of International Activities, and Dr. Ray Agan, professor of agricultural education, pointed out that agricultural assistance to developing countries rarely has the impact expected and they explored some of the reasons for the failures. They suggested that rarely are present patterns of assistance coordinated, that there is needless duplication and lack of follow through and that there is a failure to understand the necessity for converting "policy makers" to the support of the programs undertaken.

"Agricultural advisers and teachers can provide the necessary stimulation and encourage innovations," the K-Staters noted, "but they will meet opposition and delay or failure if they are insensitive to the culture of those who are being encouraged to accept the innovations."

Hadja and Agan believe that graduates from agricultural schools in developing countries offer the best prospects for progress.

"Egypt and Taiwan, which have increased rice yields 20 percent or more in one generation, had at least two agricultural graduates per 1000 farm people. Mexico, which has increased wheat yields 120 percent, had at least one agricultural graduate per 1000 farm people.

By contrast, the K-Staters noted that countries with less than one agricultural graduate per 1000 farmers (India, Pakistan, Turkey, Tunisia, Thailand) had the smallest yield increases — and some even experienced yield decreases.

During the same period in the United States, rice yields increased 56 percent and wheat yields 90 percent. America has 5.6 agricultural graduates per 1000 people.

In developing countries agriculture often is considered as part of the least attractive social and economic strata and it cannot compete with other fields for the trained leadership it needs. But even where countries are sold on development, time limitations severely hamper improvements.

"If a developing country were to decide today to expand the number of graduates in agriculture, the results could not be achieved rapidly. If new facilities are needed the results could not be achieved in less than six years. If faculty must be developed, ten years becomes a more realistic figure as a 'starting' time." Yet the K-Staters pointed out that in ten years a developing country may have 35 percent more mouths to feed.

Rename State Brand Sleuth

GREENSBURG — Allen Richards, Oberlin, has accepted a position as special livestock brand investigator with the Kansas livestock brand commission.

Richards' employment was approved by the Kansas Livestock Association Board of Directors.

Richards is no stranger to the organization, since he is a former employee of both the sanitary commission and the brand commission, officials said.

Veteran special livestock brand investigator Scott Dillon, Salina, has been working the entire state the last few months. Normally, Dillon will work the eastern part of the state while Richards works the western part.

Governor Names His Livestock Man

BULLETIN, LATE MONDAY A.M., OCTOBER 9:

He Quits Before He Starts

Ralph Warren, Governor Docking's appointee to the Kansas Livestock Sanitary Commissioner post, said Monday morning that he had decided not to accept the appointment, because it was proving embarrassing to his cousin, Ward Warren, incoming president of the Kansas Livestock Association.

Governor Docking said Warren's change-of-mind would not alter his strategy to appoint his own man to the job and then take the matter to court if the Kansas Livestock Association declined to approve Docking's man.

Governor Docking finally named his livestock man last week. The pick was a man who has been in and out of the cattle business over four decades, joined the Kansas Livestock Association just a few days before his appointment was announced, and is a cousin of the incoming president of the Kansas Livestock Association.

The appointment apparently was a surprise to the KLA president-elect, Ward Warren of Silverdale. And perhaps an embarrassment too, for Ward Warren is almost certainly going to be called to oppose Docking in a clash between the association and the governor which seems sure to end up in the court.

Docking's appointment of Ralph Warren is to the post of state livestock sanitary commissioner. By law the job must be filled by a man who has the recommendation of the livestock association. The association has insisted on recommending only

A. G. Pickett, longtime commissioner who served as association executive secretary in addition to his state role.

Editorials by Pickett in the association's magazine, The Kansas Stockman, before the 1966 election were not specifically antagonistic to Docking but espoused tax policies which were conceded to be favorable to Docking's opponent, then Governor William Avery.

Since election Docking has been critical of Pickett's holding dual roles, one as a state-paid employee in a position of control over the livestock industry and the other as the paid employee of a private association representing that industry.

In addition Docking has contended that the Kansas Livestock Association's recommendation of only one man for the job removes his rights of appointment.

The latter contention also covers the jobs of state brand inspector and those on the Kansas Livestock Commission.

The clash between the association and the governor seems almost sure to end up in court. If decisions by lower courts were appealed all the way to the Kansas Supreme Court, it seems likely this would take more than a year to settle. Perhaps the 1968 Legislature could

About Docking's Livestock Man

Ralph Warren, named by Governor Docking last week to be his man for the livestock sanitary commissioner's post, is 65, and has been in and out of the livestock business for 40 years. Now of Wichita, Warren started in a cattle partnership with his father at the Silverdale Ranch in 1927. In 1941 he assumed full responsibility for the business.

Governor Docking said, "He now leases extensive pasture land in South Central Kansas. Mr. Warren breeds and handles more than 2000 head of cattle per year. He is a member of the Kansas Livestock Association."

Warren added that he had just joined the association a few days before. He is a cousin of the president-elect of the KLA, Ward Warren of Silverdale. Both are Democrats. State Senator Joe Warren of Maple City is another cousin, and Warner Moore, Wichita attorney and Sedgwick County Democratic chairman, is a nephew.

NATURICH GETS A SAFETY AWARD

ABILENE — Naturich Mills, flour and feed processor here, has won a Grand Award in a 1967 fleet safety contest sponsored by the Kansas Motor Carriers Association. Naturich drivers had a no-accident record with nearly half a million miles driven. The company operates seven trucks using six drivers. Only Kansas mileage was considered in the contest.

solve the problem by writing a new law for naming the livestock sanitary commissioner. Whether a Republican-controlled body would side with a Democratic governor seems improbable, altho newspaper reporters seem to agree that Docking has gained considerable popular support in this disagreement.

Officers of the association requested a meeting with the governor this week, but it seems unlikely either party will change its position.

Docking has given the KLA until October 13 to accept or reject Warren. If he is rejected by the association's executive committee, a lawsuit will be filed in Warren's behalf, challenging the present commissioner's right to hold office.

Pickett's term expired March 31, but he has continued in office until his reappointment is made or another's is accepted. The job pays $7000 a year. Pickett also gets $7000 a year from the Kansas Livestock Association for being its executive secretary.

Armour Plans to Close 2 Packing Plants Now, 3 Others in 6 Months

Modernization Move Will Affect Facilities at West Point, Neb., And Haporia, Kan., Immediately

By a WALL STREET JOURNAL Staff Reporter
CHICAGO—Armour & Co. said it would close two meat-packing plants immediately.

Oops

Rainy Day At K-State

The stadium at Kansas State was a collage of umbrellas Saturday, but rain which dripped thru the first half didn't limit a near full-house. Joy wasn't limited much either as K-State nearly pulled off one of the major football upsets of the past decade. Powerful Nebraska finally prevailed, however, 16-14.

Farmers Holding On To Wheat

Wheat farmers were given a little hope for stronger prices the past week in news from Washington. It seems that many farmers are hanging on to their wheat from this year's crop in an effort to slow down supply and bring prices up.

Reports from the USDA show that during August 40.255 million bushels of wheat went under government loans — about double the amount for August 1965 or 1966.

This would indicate a strong effort on the part of farmers to get a better break in the market.

Many wheat farmers have hoped for early legislation from the Congress to improve the U.S. position in the world market and possibly issue export certificates to farmers to bolster prices.

Movement of Public Law 480 grain has strengthened but most of it is to make up prior commitments and does not represent new allotments to countries to date.

Wheat men in general have favored establishment of a strategic reserve supply of the grain insulated from the market and to be kept for a relatively high release price.

Congressional groups have stalled on what the level of resale price should be. Farmers want it to be high enough so that the grain cannot become a factor in market prices at any time. Congress has wanted to keep the supply in such a condition that it can be dumped without cost to the public treasury.

The House sub-committee on livestock and grains has the bill, but has made no move to pass it to the full House Agriculture Committee — a necessary step to gaining the legislation.

RILEY COUNTY FARM BUREAU MEETS OCT. 17

MANHATTAN — The annual meeting of the Riley County Farm Bureau will be held Tuesday, October 17, at 6:30 pm at the K-State Student Union. Guest speaker will be George Logan, Topeka television farm editor.

Corporate Farming Debate Draws 5-County Crowd

PHILLIPSBURG — Lud Strnad, Farmers Union backer and Brewster farmer, said a large corporation which has purchased 100,000 acres of land in Colorado illustrates the adverse economic impact corporate farming would have on northwest Kansas.

Strnad spoke last week against the hotly-debated farm corporation bill which has passed the Kansas Senate and will be voted on in the House.

State Sen. Claude Bell, McDonald, co-sponsor of the bill, was present to defend his position.

The bill, if passed, would eliminate all restrictions on ownership of farms by corporations. Strnad said:

"These corporations are large operators. They don't buy gas, tractors or other supplies on a local level. Farmers sell out will end up moving to the edge of town and living off rocking chair insurance the rest of their lives."

He also said that through its holdings, the Colorado corporation new controls a fourth of the egg production in that state.

Bill Daniels, Cimarron, president of the Farmers Union, also was on the program sponsored by the Agriculture committee of the Phillipsburg Area Chamber of Commerce.

He echoed Strnad's sentiments, and lamented the fact that farm income had been steadily declining while some farmers are deeply in debt. But he said corporations buying the land would not solve the problem.

"The family farming system is so good that each farmer produced enough food and fiber to feed and clothe himself and 30 other people," he said.

"No other country in the world can do this. Japan is now using our system to an advantage and Russia is even starting to copy it.

"The family farmer and family businessmen are allies and should work together.

"It is said that a farm corporation needs at least 80,000 acres for proper efficiency. A farming community has one business for each six farmers. How much business would you lose if a corporation bought up 80 farms averaging 1000 acres each?"

He also said a large Kansas City based corporation is now buying up large blocks of land in Missouri.

"If corporations are allowed in farming, they will drive the farmers into city ghettos," he declared.

Bell said that under present law, any corporation owning or supervising more than 5000 acres of land cannot grow wheat, oats, corn, barley, rye, potatoes or dairy cattle.

There are no restrictions on cattle feeding, sugar beets or soybeans.

Sen. Bell said his primary concern also was the preservation of the farm.

Restrictions on estate planning hamper the passing of farms to children without burdensome taxes, he said.

"Too many farms are sold at auction because inheritance and estate taxes are too high to pay or families would rather sell than split up ownership.

"My position is simply to change the present law and eliminate all restrictions.

"It isn't fair to restrict some kinds of farming and not others. The way the law is written, it is hard to enforce. Either we should restrict everyone from corporate farming or we should liberalize the law.

"I'm not saying that farming is for everyone. Go to your tax consultant, lay property valuations before him and find out how best to transfer your land.

The bill's co-sponsor, Sen. Jack Barr, Leoti, was also scheduled to appear but he had airplane trouble enroute and was forced to land for repairs.

It was obvious from the loud applause received by Strnad and Daniels that the 200 farmers from a 5-county area in the audience favored more restrictions on corporate farming, not less.

Lyon Creek Out Of Banks

The year 1967 still hasn't seen the end of floods. Heavy rains in the G&G area last weekend sent a number of streams out of their banks. Torrential rains in the Herington area sent Lyon Creek roaring out of its banks, shown south of Junction City across the US77 bridge. Lyon creek empties into the Smoky Hill river south of Junction City.

Good Corn

Odell McCurry of McCurry Brothers Farms drives a combine thru a field of 150-bushel corn in southern Harvey County north of Mount Hope. The irrigated land had 150 pounds of actual nitrogen per acre treatment.

Grasshoppers Late Alfalfa Threat

Grasshoppers have come to be a real threat this fall to new stands of alfalfa and wheat. Some spraying and bait killing of the pests is reported in many sections of the state.

Kansas State University officials have recommended fence row and roadside spraying or baiting to partially halt the rapid invasion.

Special precautions must be taken if the land sprayed is to be pastured or used by livestock, officials warned.

Malathion or chlordane both are recommended for stopping hoppers. Recommended rate of application is one pound of insecticide per acre. Malathion can be used if the sprayed area is to be grazed.

Poison bait made with wheat bran can be used in fields having no vegetative cover. This bran mixture is approximately five pounds of bran with three or four quarts of water and two tablespoons of 40 percent chlordane or 60 percent toxaphene or one tablespoon of 25 per cent heptachlor.

Insecticide is added to the water before the bran is mixed in, officials said.

NEWTON GIRL IS KANSAS PORK QUEEN

Carol Ann Sauerwein, daughter of the Ardith Sauerweins of Newton, has been selected as Pork Queen of 1968. The award was presented at Wichita during the Kansas National Junior Livestock show. She's a junior at Newton High School and vice president of the Butler County 4-H council.

A Swinging Ceiling For K-State

By 1969 Kansas State University will have a new auditorium, replacing the old one which was set afire by a student in early 1965. Construction started on the new one last week.

Costing over $3 million, the new auditorium will soar seven stories and will be most noteworthy for an adjustable ceiling which can be positioned in three different ways to improve sound for different events.

The stage design will allow sets to be built in the wings and wheeled into position for dramatic presentations. A hydraulic lift will create an orchestra pit and function as an elevator moving stage props.

Part of the building will house the K-State music department. That part of the structure is financed by a federal grant of $166,000.

HOLTON, KANS.

This is as good a feed business as you will find in this part of the country. If interested come in and see our 1965-66 records. Come in, call or write for particulars.

A good opportunity for a farmer or two that don't have enough land to stay in farming. Or an opportunity for any feed company that would like to get started in this locality. Will not take much money to handle it, we will carry most of it back. We also have personnel in the company that would stay and help manage the business.

We truly hope that this business, equipment and property will all stay together and go right on serving our community.

First we will sell the property, then each individual piece of equipment. Then we will tie the business, property and equipment all together. When we tie this equipment together we will give you the option of taking 1, 2 or 3 of the mobile mills.

ELEVATOR — 80,000 bushel with a new lag. 2 large rooms for warehouse — scales — on 3 lots. If not sold for business purpose, this elevator would make a farmer or two a lot of good grain storage.

Best At Wichita Show

Marleen Deewall, 16, of Coldwater showed the grand champion steer at the Kansas National Junior Livestock Show at Wichita last week. Her father, Ralph Deewall, took the same honor in 1937.

Defunct, Bankrupt—Kansas Farmers Union Left Only With National Tie

The business collapse and involuntary bankruptcy of the Kansas Farmers Union earlier this year ended that organization, but did not kill the local chapters or end National Farmers Union activity in the state, a spokesman said today.

"The Kansas Farmers Union is dead: it doesn't exist anymore," said John Harvey, a Topeka member of an eight-man steering committee for the National Farmers Union of Kansas.

He identified this group as "the only thing operating in Kansas today," and stressed it has no connection with the KFU.

ANOTHER MOVE ON US 77 SURFACING

Approval has been given for surfacing of another section of US 77 8½ miles into Marshall county from the Riley county line. The total project — for 12½ miles south of Waterville — will cost $593,930.

Harvey said its main purpose is to lobby for beneficial Kansas farm legislation and oppose those measures members feel would be harmful. The group now is campaigning to defeat a corporate farm bill in the state, which it says would mean the end for small farmers.

Harvey pegged current membership of the NFU of Kansas at about 35,000, while the old KFU "at one time had about 45,000." He added, "we do not have the same membership," and explained those who did belong to the old KFU and now belong to the NFU of Kansas had to renew by paying dues directly to the national organization.

Charles F. Brannan, Denver, general counsel for the NFU, said the Kansas division surrendered its charter Feb. 23, 1967 but "efforts are now being made to re-establish and charter a new Kansas division."

Brannan reported the NFU

was organized in 1903 under Texas law as a non-profit, non-stock organization for "educational, fraternal, benevolent and cooperative" purposes and can't engage in any form of business for profit — a limitation that didn't apply to the defunct Kansas affiliate, which owned and operated farm land and distributed a line of livestock biological products.

The failing KFU issued more than $200,000 in unsecured debt certificates between 1958 and 1963, and the state securities commissioner last month obtained a permanent injunction against issuance of any more such notes.

Martin J. Byrne, former KSU president, now is sought by Rush County authorities on three counts of violating the State Securities Act.

Brannan said there are no Kansas directors or officers at this time. He said all Farmers Union members belong to the NFU, even though they are organized into subdivisions by states. In addition, Harvey said the local chapters have always been semi-independent, and explained the NFU now is working with 97 county organizations, including one in Shawnee County.

"We tried selling direct ...and came back to the K. C. Market"

Damon Shannon and his sons market over 1,000 fat cattle yearly from the Circle-S Ranch near Merwin, Mo. He gives two reasons for returning to the Kansas City Market after selling a few lots "direct" from the ranch:

1. "Higher net return due to open competitive bidding (and no pencil shrink!)"
2. "Extra help I get from a real pro the Livestock Marketing Specialist at my commission firm."

On a recent trip to Kansas City, Mr. Shannon sold 60 Angus steers averaging 1055 lbs., at a price near top of the market.

Pictured with him at the Kansas City yards are Peter Stratton of Warminster, Wilts., and Chris Holloway of Maplehurst, Sussex. The two boys, who are students at London University, were guests at the Circle-S Ranch learning about land use and land income in the American Midwest, to compare with English practice. Not shown in the photo are Larry and Dennis Shannon, who are actively associated with their father in the cattle feeding enterprise, and a third son, C. J., who is presently in college.

Mr. Shannon buys most of his feeder cattle at Kansas City. Special stocker-feeder auctions are held every Thursday at 10 am—or you can deal by private treaty 5 days a week.

Drive For State Hog Promotion

Kansas hog producers have made vigorous plans to enlarge membership in the Kansas Swine Improvement Association and promote their industry.

Membership drives in eight areas of the state were charted at the organization's recent semi-annual meeting on the Kansas State University campus. Dr. Berl Koch, KSU swine researcher and secretary of the group, reported.

The organization seeks the support of all producers to bolster pork promotion, research, and marketing. They want to organize active producers groups in the eight districts to work with local production activities such as area schools and shows, Koch explained.

In carrying out the first stage of the planned organizational expansion, Jasper DeVore, Arkansas City producer and president of KSIA, appointed eight district chairmen who will direct membership drives.

Meetings are scheduled in eastern Kansas at Hiawatha, Noember 7; Ottawa, November 16, and Chanute, November 15.

Meetings in central Kansas will be at Concordia, November; Salina, November 6; and Wichita, November 7. The southwest district will meet November 17 at Dodge City, and the northwest district meeting is set for November 6 with Goodland the probable site.

The Kansas swine organization now has 175 members and has been active in supporting programs of disease prevention, pork promotion, and marketing. The boar testing station at K-State is a project of KSIA.

Take an inventory of the pesticides in your garage. How long have you had each one. Long enough so it is no longer useful? Rotenone powder, for instance, will be ineffective the second year. Might as well throw the remainder out each fall.

Farm Real Estate Up 7%

Farm real estate prices in the nation rose 7 percent during the year ended March 1, 1967, according to a recent report of the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

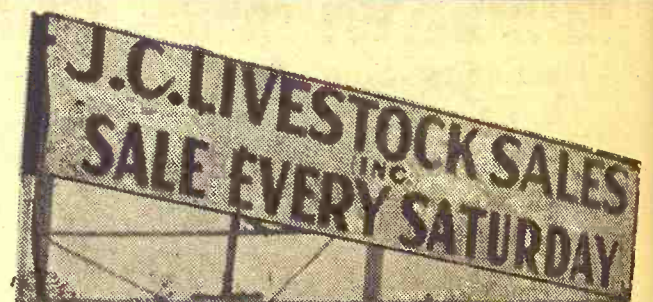

The national index of value per acre reached 160 percent of the 1957-59 average.

Regional increase ranged from 1 percent in the Pacific states to 9 percent in both the Lake States and Corn Belt regions.

Gains of 12 per cent were recorded for Iowa and Missouri. The USDA says that sharp reductions in the availability of credit and increases in interest rates held the November 1966-March 1967 advance to 2 percent nationally.

Among the states, only Florida showed a decline in the average value of farm real estate for the year ended March 1. California values were unchanged for the year, despite a 3 percent decline during the November 1966-March 1967 period.

In Montana, Idaho, New Mexico, and Arizona, decreases of 1 percent were registered for the four-month period.

HOGS START AT 11:00 A.M. CATTLE AT 1:00 P.M.

Due to muddy fields and roads, as well as some flooding in our area, most of our cattle consignments failed to reach us last Saturday, but there still was a fair run of hogs.

There were not enough cattle of all classes to make a market, although there were good receipts on cows. Prices were strong throughout. In summary they were:

Steer calves	375-450 lbs. @	30.00 to 32.60
Heifer calves	450-525 lbs. @	28.00 to 29.50
Feeder steers	700-900 lbs. @	23.70 to 24.80
Feeder heifers	700-850 lbs. @	21.00 to 23.60
Cows	$16.00 to $17.50; Thin cows	$15.00 to $16.00.
Hogs	weighing 190-260 lbs. went at	$17.75 to $18.25.
Sows	$15.00 to $16.80; started pigs	$16.00 to $19.00 @ hundred
Smaller pigs	brought	$13.00 to $15.50

FOR NEXT SATURDAY, OCTOBER 14, we are expecting most of the consignments that did not get in last Saturday on account of the weather. In addition we will have 8 real good black cows with calves by side.

As we are expecting a large sale this coming Saturday, we want to remind our buyers and consignors that we start the sale of hogs promptly at 11 a.m.

27 Horses Killed in Barn Fire

A fire swept thru a Topeka horse barn last week, killing 23 horses and four colts at the Circle C Ranch owned by Jerry Chaffee. Ten of the horses lost belonged to the Chaffees, and the rest of the horses were being boarded there.

Higher Taxes Necessary?

By Jack A. Richards

Kansas State University

Are taxes too high? Should they be higher? The issues involved in the proposed 10 percent surtax to boost Federal revenues should be clearly in focus.

Supporters of this increase say it is needed to reduce the $29 billion deficit predicted for the 1968 fiscal year. Demand pressures must be reduced to avoid a dangerous period of inflation. They argue that a tax increase is needed now to neutralize inflationary forces expected in coming months.

Opponents of the tax increase can be divided into several camps. One group opposes the tax boost on the grounds that inflation is unlikely to be a serious problem in the next year or so.

They favor waiting until economic trends become more definite before taking action. According to their projections, a tax increase now could restrict economic growth and prosperity.

A second group opposing a tax increase agrees that inflation is a serious danger and that corrective action should be taken soon. However, they favor a cut in spending rather than a tax increase.

A third group wants tax reforms rather than a tax hike.

All three groups essentially agree on the need to correctly interpret the direction of the economy. It takes time to pass new tax legislation or reduce government outlays. Thus, government action, or fiscal policy, must be planned for up to a year in advance for the proposed remedy to coincide with needed adjustments.

Fear of serious inflation is due mostly to expected heavy demand pressures on an expanding money supply at a time of high employment when the economy will be crowding production limitations. Even with the proposed 10 percent surtax, deficits are expected to run between $14-$18 billion.

An anticipated large federal deficit means government will pump more purchasing power into the economy than is taken out through taxes.

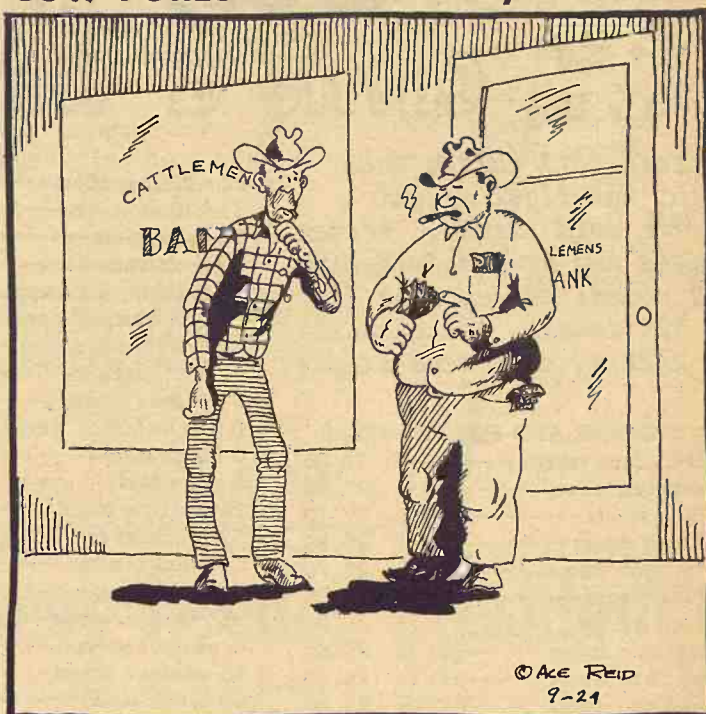

Consumer confidence appears to be high and is expected to lead to additional purchasing by this sector. This is where the proposed surtax comes in. It would shift buying power from consumers and business — the private sector — to the public sector.

As consumers, we dislike sacrificing purchasing power thru higher taxes. At the same time, we demand more government services: welfare programs, superhighways, education, price supports, and FHA programs.

The final solution may be a compromise: higher taxes, more inflation, greater national debt, and limitations on government spending.
