The Household.

At the close of an excellent sermon, enumerating the causes which had so greatly altered the equilibrium of the political parties at the late election, and turned the scales in favor of the Democrats, Dr. Howland, at the Unitarian tollowing terms upon the subject of Temper-church, on the 19th of November, spoke in the The temperance question in Kansas was a factor in the recent election, but whether it was the anti-prohibition sentiment alone which procured the defeat of the present governor is open to doubt. There is reason to suppose that many persons who are in favor of the present law voted against him. They do not believe in hobbies, even if they are good ones, nor in the men who ride them, especially if it is not perfectly clear that they have not mounted it for any other purpose than the nominal one. Some did not like the tactics of his friends who identified him with the temperance cause, saying they went up or down together, and disparaged other candidates and other men who are not only temperate but practiced a strictly total abstinence. Others thought a third 'term was really objectionable. But of course the opposition to his re-election came mainly from those who do not favor prohibition. They believe, they say, in personal liberty, and that the state has no right to prescribe a man's drink. Perhaps it has, perhaps it has not. There are arguments on both sides. I do not wish to discuss the point; but I am inclined to think the state ought to have the right to prevent's man from injuring himself or others, it it can prevent him. I know that physical appetites and desires are almost exclusively a man's own affair, but it the state can belp him in regulating them and keeping them where they belong, it seems to me it have done him a most kindly service, and would it not be generous in those who are so strong of will as to need no external aid in order to stand upright, to forego their own safe gratinot strong enough to walk through life al. ?? one, too. it is an appeal to personal self-denial for the welfare of others. Perhaps I may bake slow and not in too hot an oven. We safety drink a glass of wine every day. I may greatly enjoy it-in which case there would be some danger—but I am no better off the next day for baving drank it, nor a quarter of an hour afterward, and would it not be a small thing to yield such a trifling gratification, and this natural right, or personal liberty, and allow the state to take it away out of my sight for the sake of those who bring woe and poverty upon themselves by the intemperate use of it? It is a small personal sacrifice which the strong and self-possessed are called upon to make for those who are weak and those who are inexperienced. I will cheerfully do it, or almost anything else, if we can rid the land of an enormous evil, or even greatly lessen it. Sobriety exalteth a nation as well as righteousness, and drunkenness as well as sin is reproach. Let the law be honestly enforced and see what the effect will be. I believe it would greatly diminish crime, add immensely to the prosperity of the state, and increase the sum of human happiness in a way and by an amount that a sober family knows but little ot.

And perhaps, after all, a family which isn't sober, or the sober members of it are the best judges of the value of probibition. Very much is to be overlooked in the zeal, or the fanaticism if we choose to call it so, of a wife who has an intemperate husband, or a mother who has an intemperate son while other sons are growing up around her. I do not think we ought to make our own coolness, or our personal indifference the measure of their interest when it touches their homes and their hearts so closely. Think, friends, of the deep and constant agony which comes to so many mothers and wives and then say that you will willingly resign something of your personal enjoyments and rights for the sake of helping in a degree never so small to ease such a hard pain as this. I can hardly keep back my own tears when I think of the misery that might be assuaged but is not; of the strong hands, my own among the number, that might be held

even upbraided by some spirit of tenderness when I sit down in comfortable isolation with hardly a thought of the want I might relieve and the agony I might cure. Above all other luxury of doing good is the rarest that the Most High gives to men, and he who helps the helpless, and removes pain and sorrow and grief and lets in the sweet light and peace of God, and clears the way for mankind to march is the greatest in the kingdom of heaven.'

We planted an early variety of corn that we had shipped from Iowa. It matured in July and was out of the way of hot winds in August. By the way, the press of the country are commenting upon the cause of the great revolution in politics. Some say one thing and some another. We say the cause of the boom, as some call it, is the rottenness of the Republican party. The party had been in power so long that they all wanted office; too much bossism; did nothing in the last twelve years to benefit the people; legthe poor poorer. We left the Republican party in 1874 because we did not think it to our interest to support it any longer, and we have not changed our mind. Now, if the Democrats will do what the Republican party failed to do, there is no reason why they should not be supported, for a while at least. The people demand that railroads be attended to at once; legislate a little for the people-capital will take care of itself. But if they fail to do this thing, off will go their political heads at the next general election. When the people arouse they make the fur fly. Three years ago a seaside summer boarder, while straying along the bed of a stream that had been left partially bare by excessive drouth, discovered lying upon the sand, a conchiferous bivalvular mollusk—vulgus, clam—that seemed to be in the last gasp from exhaustion and thirst. Pitying the sore distress of the unhappy bivalve, the stranger took it up and cast it into the deep part of the stream, and went on his way happy in the thought of a kindness done. He speedily forgot the incident. A week ago, however, as he was enjoying again a summer vacation, and sitting near the spot where the event of three years before had taken place, he perceived a clam clamboring laboriously over the rocks toward him Arrived with much exertion at the feet of the amazed observerthe clam opened its shell and disclosed a pearl as large as a hazel nut. A MINISTER'S ESCAPE.

From the Asylum to the Bosom of Home-How it was Done.

A prominent minister residing at the east has just made the following statement, which is reprinted entire for the benefit of those who may have had a similar experience: To the Editor of the Herald:

I have always shrunk from appearing prom inently before the public, but a sense of the duty I owe humanity and the world prompts me to ask the opportunity for making a brief statement in your paper.

Whether it be true with others I cannot say but during my entire life I have frequently been conscious that something was slowly and cliently working to undermine my health and life. What it was I could not tell, but that some can to further the prosperity of the life. What it was I could not tell, but that some enemy of my being was devouring me within enemy of my being was devouring me within f was certain. At times I would seem comparatively well and then I would be attacked with the most distressing symptoms. I would feel peculiar pains in various parts of my body, my head would seem heavy; my respiration labored; my appetite would be ravenous one day and I would loathe food the day following. Then again I would lose all interest in lite; would feel weary without exertion; would become sleepy at mid-day and restless at night. Occasionally my breathing would be labored and my heart almost motionless, while at other times it would palpitate violently. I thought these troubles were the result of malaria, and I treated them accordingly, but I got no better. Shortly afterward my stomach got no better. Shortly alterward my stomach became deranged, my food failed to digest, and the fl. ids I passed were of a peculiar odor and color. And yet I did not realize that these things meant anything serious. Finally I consulted a number of eminent physicians, each one of whom took a different view of the cause of my troubles. One said I was suffering from one of whom took a different view of the cause of my troubles. One said I was suffering from brain disease; another spinal difficuity; others heart affection, kidney disease, etc. My symptoms were terrible, and in the hope of relief I was cauterized, cupped, blistered and subjected to almost every known form of treatment. During one of these attacks, while at Red Bank, N. J., a physician was called and left a prescription. After he had gone, I requested a friend to go and ask him what he thought of my trouble. The reply was: 'Oh, he will be all right in a few days; it's only an attack of delirium tremens.' He was at once informed that this was impossible, as I had tack of delirium tremens." He was at once informed that this was impossible, as I had never used any kind of intoxicating drinks; whereupon he returned, made inquiries, and changed his prescription. But all the care of my friends and physicians availed nothing. I grew worse constantly, and what is most terrible to think of, 1 did not know what alied me, nor could I find any one who did.

During the summer and fall of last year my pulse ranged from 120 to 130 per minute, I had no relish for tood and was indeed a most pittable object. I continued in this state until last ble object. I continued in this state until last December, when I became unconccious and lost my reason, though I had two physicians in whom myself and friends placed implicit confidence. In this condition I was taken to Brattleboro, Vt., for the purpose of being placed in the insane asylum. I remained there until last March, being attended all the while by my sleboro, Vt., for the purpose of being placed in the insane asylum. I remained there until last March, being attended all the while by my faithful wife who never left me and believed that some disease and not insanity was the cause of my trouble. I regained my conscious ness in March last and insisted upon being taken home. The physicians advised that I remain, but I insisted upon leaving, and we began the journey, traveling slowly. I was met at the dock by a friend whom I recognized, and then I again became unconscious and remained so for over a week. When I once more recognized my friend and knew my surroundings I determined to try, as a last resort, a treatment of which I had heard much but knew nothing. Neither myself nor friends had much faith that it or anything could help me, but we resolved to try. We accordingly dismissed the physicians, gave up all other remedies, and I rejoice to say that with the blessing of Him who guided us, I am to-day a well man; have not been so vigorous for many years, and I owe it all to the wonderful power of Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure the remedy which I used.

You can well imagine how grateful I must

You can well imagine how grateful I must feel under the circumstances and, like a new convert, I carnestly desire that all who are suffering should know and avail themselves of this means of recovery. Had it not been for the remedy above named I should doubtless now be within the walls of an asylum or in my grave. The great trouble with my case was that no one seemed to know what I was afflicted labor and its results, with joys and with and I am positive that thousands of peowith and I am positive that thousands of people in America to-day are in the same condition and do not know its cause. Kidney troubles are the most deceptive of all diseases. They have no symptoms of their own, but often show the symptoms of nearly every known complaint. I know that people are dying every day from supposed consumption, apoplexy, heart disease, spinal complaints and many other diseases, when, could the real cause be known, it would be found to originate in the kidneys. In their advanced stages they are the most terrible of all known maindles, as my own experience can fully verify. dies, as my own experience can fully verify. That I had Bright's disease of the kidneys there can be no doubt. That the symptoms were those of many other diseases is equally certain, and that I was doomed to a terrible death had I not been saved as I was, I am positive.

In view therefore of these facts and with a of the many advantages that must arise from her advice and counsel. Speaking of woman's ability in conducting affairs, he cited the case of the woman's reformatory of this state, saying that noue of our public institutious are managed better or more economically than this.

In response to the governor, Hon. D. W. Aiken, of South Carolina, said :

We come to Indianapolis not with people. We have come from the four ends of the country, and here in the center of our far-reaching agricultural resources, we have assembled to consult upon measures for the advance-ment of the common interests of all. A patron of husbandry in South Carolina will always give welcome to a patron of husbandry in Indiana. Our purpose is to elevate the calling of the American farmer, but in saying this I am not to be interpreted as intimating that his pursuit is not already one of the most honorable. We well understand how the farmer is generally considered the hewer of wood and the drawer of water of all other avocations. How trite has become the reference to the horny-handed farmer! It requires more industry and as much science to master agriculture as any other pursuit. The object of the grange organization is to teach farmers to improve the methods of farming, and to place the pursuit upon a higher plane than is now accorded to it in public opinion.

At 2 o'clock, p. m., the National body of the order reassembled and listened to the Worthy Master's excellent address. We wish we could print the address entire, but our limits this week will preclude the occupation of any large space, and we must content our selves with two or three extracts, which we present to our readers:

The great purpose which we aim to accomplish, cannot be too often repeated or too well understood. We aim to make the daily lives of men and women better and nobler and truer, and holier and lappier; to encourage education, social and moral culture, and a better development of the noble faculties of our natures; to provide for ourselves and our families comfortable homes, unincumbered farms, and a fair remuneration for our labor; to beautify our homes, and to increase their attraction for our children, and their love for them and our profession, and thereby induce the boys to stay upon the farm to prevent family jars, dissensions and separations; to lessen neighborhood strife and disagreements, and prevent litigation, by providing for the settlement of matters of difference between neighbors, by arbitration in the grange; to increase the profits of our farms, by better cultivation, greater diversity of crops, closer study of the market, and better understanding of the laws of trade; to 'systematize our labor,' and blessings which make labor pleasant, healthful and honorable, and the laborer contented and happy; to encourage home manufactures, and every branch of productive industry—bringing the producer and the consumer into the closest and most intimate relations, and thus create a home market for our surplus products; to encourrge the building of railroads and canals, and the improvement of our rivers and harbors, and thereby secure cheaper transportation for our products to market: and to demonstrate to the world that agriculture is a science, and a farming profession, and all who are engaged in it closely allied in interests and sympahope that all who read this may take timely warning, I make this open statement freely and for the good of my fellow-men.

FROM COL. L. T. FOSTER.

Youngstown, Ohio, May, 10th, 1880.

Dr. B. J. Kendall & Co.. Gents:—I had a very val able Hambletonian colt which I prized very highly, he had a large bone spavin on one joint and a smaller one on the other which made him very lame; I had him under the charge of two Veterinary surgeons who failed to cure him. I was one day reading the advertisement of Kendall's Spavin Curs in the Cicago Express, I determined at once to try if, and got our druggists here to send for it. They ordered three bottles; I took them all and thought I would give it a thorough trial. I used it according to directions, and by the fourth day the colt ceased to be lame, and the lumps had entirely disappeared. I used but one bottle and the colts limbs are as free from lumps and as smooth as any horse in the state. He is entirely cured. The cure was so remarkable that I let two of my neighbors have the remaining two bottles, who are now using it.

Yery Respectfully,

B. J. KENDALL & CO., GENTS:—In justice to you and to myself, I think I ought to letyou know the thave removed two bone spavins with Kendall's Spavin Cure, one very large one, don't know how long the spavin had been there. I have owned the horse eight months, It took me four months to take the large one off and two for the small one. I have used ten bottles. The horse is entirely well, not at all stiff, and no bunch to be seen or felt. This is a wonderful medicine. It is a new thing here, but if it does for all what it has done for me, its sale will be very great.

Respectfully yours,

St. Albans, Vt., Jan. 20th, 1880.

Dr. B. J. Kendall & Co., Gents:—In reply to your letter I will say that my experience with 'Kendal's Spavin Cure' has been very satisfactory indeed. Three or four years ago I procured a bottle of your agent, and with it, cured a horse of lameness caused by a spavin. Last season my horse became very lame and I turned him out for a few weeks, when he became better, but when I put him on the road he grew worse, when I discovered that a ringbone was forming, I procured a bottle of Kendall's Spavin Cure and with less than a bottle cured him so that he is not lame, neither can the bunch be found.

Respectfully yours, P. N. GRANGER.

Wilton, Minn., Jan. 11th, 1881.

B. J. Kendall & Co., Gents:—Having got a horse book of you by mail a year ago, the contents of which persuaded me to try Kendall's Spavin Cure on the hind leg of one of my horses which was badly swollen and could not be be reduced by any other remedy. I got two bottles of Kendall's Spavin Cure of Preston & Ludduth, Druggists of Waseca, which completely cured my horse. About five years ago I had a three-year-old colt sweenied very badly I used your remedy as given in your book without roweling, and I must say to your credit that the colt is entrely cured, which is a surprise not only to myself but also to my neighbors. You sent me the book for the trilling sum of 25 cents, and i I could not get another like it I would not take twenty-five dollars for it.

To Whom It May Concern:—In the year 1875 I treated with 'Kendall's. Spavin Cure.' a bone spavin of several months' growth, nearly half as large as a hen's exg, and completely stopped the immenses and removed the enlargement. I have worked the horse ever since very hard, and he never has been very lame, nor could I ever see any diff-rence in the size of the hock joints since I treated him with Kendall's Spavin cure.

Dr. B. J. Keudall & Co.. Gents:—I think it may duty to render you my thanks for benefits and profits which I have derived from your invaluable and far famed Spavin Cure. My cousin and I had a valuable stallion, worth $4,000, which had a very bad spavin and was pronounaed by four eminent veterinary surgeons beyond any cure, and that the horse was done for ever. As a last resort I advised my cousin to try a bottle of Kendall's Spavin Cure. It had a magical effect, the third bottle cured it, and the horse is as well as ever. Dr Dick, of Edinburgh, the eminent veterinary surgeon was an uncle of mine, and I take great interesr in assisting his processioh.

KENDAL'S SPAVIN CURE.

ON HUMAN FLESH it has been ascertained by repeated trials to be the very best liniment ever used for any deep seated pain of long standing, or of short duration. Also for Corns, Bunions, Frost-bites. or any bruise, cut or lameness. Some are afraid to use it on human flesh simply because it is a horse medicine, but you should remember that what is good for Beast is good for Man, and we know from experience that "KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE" can be used on a child I year old with perfect safety. Its effects are wonderful on human flesh, and it does not blister or make a sore. Try it and be convinced.

B. J. Kendali, M. D.—Dear Sir. The particular case on which I used your, 'Kendall's Spavin Cure,' was a malignant ankle sprain of sixteen months standing, I had tried many things, but in vain. Your 'Kendall's Spavin Cure' put the foot to the ground again, and, for the first time since hurt, in a natural position. For a family liniment it excells anything we ever used.

B. J. Kendall & Co.—Gents: I wish to add my testimony in favor of your invaluable liniment, "Kendall's Spavin Cure." In the spring of 1872 is slipped on the ice and sprained my right limb at the knee joint. I was very lame, and at times suffered the most excruciating pain. I wore a bandage on it for over a year, and tried most everything in my reach, but could find nothing that would give me permanent relief. When I overworked, it would pain me very much. In April, 1878, I began to think I should be a cripple of of bottle and experienced relief, at once. The pain left me and has not troubled me since. I feel very grateful to you, and would recommend "Kendall's Spavin Cure" to all who suffer with sprains or rheumatism.

The Paris Gamin.

Ever since Victor Hugo told the story of Little Gavroche in "Les Miserables," there has been great interest in the "gamins" of Paris. These little fellows often leave good homes and wander in the streets in poverty, in order to gain what they call "liberty." But their adventures are often amusing. An urchin of this class was brought into court in Paris the other day, charged with being a vagrant. His mother appeared to make an appeal for him, and the following dialogue ensued:
"Your boy was found sleeping in one of the parks last night," said the justice. "This will never do."

"You hear," said the mother to the

"That will never do! You are a bad boy." (To the judge:) "But excuse him this time, your honor; he is a very good boy."

"So you want to see if you can keep the boy at home in future?" said the justice.

"Yes, your honor; he is my only boy.
(To the boy:) Remember, this is the last time, you serpent, whom I have warmed in my breast!"

"How did he happen to run away?" "I had sent him out in the morning to buy a loaf of bread and a jug of milk. After he bought them, I saw him going down the street after a band of soldiers. I waited an hour, two hours,—all day. You can imagine my feelings. At last, in the evening, he came in with the milk and bread and put them on the table, and only said, 'Here they are!'

"So I caught up the long roll of bread to chastise him,—as he deserved, -but just as I brought it down he fled through the door, and the bread flew out of my hand and knocked over the milk and then rolled into the street. So he did not dare to come back. But he always means well, poor boy! (To the boy:) You little rascallion! Just you wait!"—

"Well, you may try to keep him in order. He is given up to you during good behavior."

"Yes, your honor; I will care for the httle lamb! (seizing the boy by the coat collar.) Now, villian, come home. We will see who is master!"

The spectators laughed. The wo-man's "bark" was evidently worse than her "bite."

An Infernal Machine. A rather sad affair took place in one of our streets the other day, remarks the Belfast (Me.) Journal. A young lady with her arms full of bundles emerged from a dry goods store, when one of them fell to the sidewalk without her noticing it. Just behind her was a young man, and a Belfast young man who is not polite is not anything, and he quickly stepped forward and picked it up. Now a bundle done up in a piece of paper with a dry goods adver-tisement on it is apparently as harmless as a mother's spanking, and there it lay as guileless as an angle worm on a side-walk after a rain. Just as he stooped to pick it up there was a rustling of the paper, the twist began to come out of the ends, and in another instant a bright red thing, a sort of a cross between a balloon and a devil-fish, flew into the under the Eavee, Winner free Lunch Cadets, Sousa (1) the music selected amounts to just $1, send only the fifteen pictures, your name and address. THE SPIRIT OF KANSAS.

HOFFMAN BROS.

Publishers and Proprietors.

BATES OF SUBSCRIPTION: TE Year (if not paid in advance). TO ADVERTISERS:

THE SPIRIT OF KANSAS is the best organ through which to reach the farmers of the West of any periodical published. It has a larger circulation than any agricultural paper published to f St. Louis. It also has a larger circulation than any two papers published in the county. Its patrons are cash customers.

ADVERTISING RATES made known on application.

TO CORRESPONDENTS: In sending communications to this paper de not write on both sides of the paper. A departure from this rule will often withhold the article from publication till next week's issue if not altogether. Do not forget this.

VALEDICTORY.

After a brief sojourn of two months we have again to bid the many patrons of THE SPIRIT OF KANSAS farewell and to resign the management of the paper to other hands. While it is with reluctance (and especially so after past experience) that we bid adieu to our many kind patrons, we are extremely glad that we are enabled to place the paper in such capable hands as we do.

The Hoffman Bros. have taken charge of this paper and the present number is their first issue. Mr. C. S. Hoffman is the jolliest blind man it has ever been our fortune to meet. He is also a man of unusual intelligence and a lecturer of considerable note. He comes recommended by Rev. B. O. Hobbs, ex-superintendent of public instruction of the state of Indiana, has hosts of firm friends all over Indiana and Illinois, that body, and signed John Johntz, J. will make many friends throughout the state of Kansas and we prophecy will make great and wonderful accessions to the subscription list of THE SPIRIT, thereby increasing its power and capacity for usefulness.

Mr. L. A. Hoffman is a practical printer and an old Kansas journalist, having successfully conducted several papers in different parts of the state in the last twenty-five years, and knows, therefore, all the vicissitudes and difficulties of conducting a paper in Kansas as well as how to meet and overcome every barrier, unlike ourselves who started in THE SPIRIT less than of charge during the meeting. two years ago with scarcely any of this experience, and he is therefore better fitted by experience, as well as otherwise, to serve the interests of the paper and its patrons as they never before have been served. We might also appropriately here remark that both gentlemen are temperance men themselves and will not tolerate any intemperate action on the part of any one or anything connected with the paper.

In retiring we leave the paper with a better and broader field of usefulness than heretofore and a much more remunerative advertising patronage than it has before enjoyed.

the paper on business principles, and will therefore expect cash in advance for subscriptions, and we trust those subscriptions at an early date.

In closing we wish each and every patron prosperity and health.

NOTICE.

All subscriptions now owing this paper and all advertising accounts to date (Nov. 24) are due and will be collected by Moody & Davis, who will pay any indebtedness contracted by them while publishing the same. All unexpired subscriptions will be filled by the new proprietors. All subscribers owing on subscription will be notified of their indebtedness to Nov. 24, 1882, and a prompt remittance will be appreciated and expected by the undersigned.

MOODY & DAVIS.

TO OUR READERS.

It is out of place and not in good taste, in assuming control of the columns and management of THE SPIRIT OF KANSAS, to make promises, many of which may be broken, or at least not fully complied with. The only promise, therefore, we shall make will be that ise, therefore, we shall make will be that we will make each number of THE we will make each number of THE BPIRIT the very best our ability enables us to do. We will attempt to make it a good family paper and aim at making it the best agricultural journal in the west, particularly in Kausas. The transit of Venus across the disk of the sun will occur on December 6. The transit begins 9:29 a. m., and ends proved upon as much as possible by us and each department edited with a view of imparting knowledge and information that will benefit its readers.F :A : M : O : U : S To accomplish our aims the more thoroughly, we request the co-operation of all the readers of the paper. Much can be done by the farmer to make his agricultural paper interesting and instructive to his fellow-farmer. To this end we urge upon every farmer the importance of writing for his paper such items and articles as will be benefical to his class. We also invite communications for all the departments in this paper, or upon any subject pertaining to the welfare of Kansas.

No doubt the patrons of this paper will regret parting with its retiring proprietors, but we will do our best to keep THE SPIRIT up to its former excellence and improve it, if possible, by devoting ourselves to the paper and to the interests of its readers.

THE SPIRIT already, has a large circulation throughout the state, but it ought to be double, considering its low price of subscription and the amount of reading matter given. To increase ite circulation, C. S. Hoffman will visit nearly every county in Kansas and to gather information for this paper. He will devote his entire time to this part of the business

Hoping that our relations may be pleasant and mutually profitable,

TO DEVISE MEANS. We are in receipt of a letter from C. B. Hoffman, member-elect to the legislature from the 75th district, inclosing a circular letter, a copy of which has been addressed to every co-member of R. Burton, C. B. Hoffman, A. P. Collins and Geo. W. Martin, requesting all who will be members of the incoming legislature and all who feel that a law should be enacted "restricting railroads in this state from extortionate charges for passengers and freights, and to prohibit them from unjust discriminations against individuals and places" to meet at Abilene, Wednesday, Dec. 13, for the purpose of devising the best means to accomplish the best legislation upon this difficult question. No other question will be considered at this meeting. All who attend will be entertained free

The above is the substance of the cirwill be largely attended, both by members-elect of the legislature and all interested in the regulation of freights and passenger fares. Legislation on this subject is demanded by the best branches at the same time. interests of our state, and the next legislature ought to have back-bone sufficient to enact a law that will protect the people and at the same time do no injustice to railroad companies.

The Shooting Affray of Sunday Last. In regard to the tragedy that occurred in North Lawrence last Sunday evening, we take the following from the Tribune of Monday:

B. F. Bailey, telegraph operator at the Union Pacific depot, was shot by W. D. Hoyt, private secretary of the manager of the Leavenworth sugar company, and son of Rev. F. S. Hoyt, D. D., editor of the Western Christian Advocate, of Cincinnati. The parties had quarreled over the wires, and Hoyt came here yesterday and stepped into the office. He demanded a retraction from Bailey of some epithets he had applied to him. This was refused, and in the discussion that followed Hoyt became exasperated and drew his revolver and fired, the bail piercing the lower lobe of Bailey's left lung and lodging under the right shoulder blade. His recovery is uncertain. Hoyt gave himself up and is now in custody here. the following from the Tribune of Monday:

We are glad to hear that Mr. Bailey is in fair way of recovery. Hoyt, the shooter, has been placed under $1,500 bonds for his appearance at court on the 27th of February. The quarrel that led to this sad tragedy was shameful on both sides. The shooting was a criminal act that should be severely punished. The carrying of revolvers in time of peace and in a civilized community, ought to be prohibited by legal enactment.

Transplanting Trees.

The work of taking up and transplanting trees, whether it be performed in the fall or spring, is often so hurriedly and unskilfully done that the life of the tree is endangered, or its growth so greatly checked that its value as fruit bearer is much diminished. The horticulturist sustains a great loss from the lack of the exercise of care and attention in the first establishment of his or hard. By inattention and careless work here, are to be traced most of the failures in fruit growing.

We will state, for the benefit of the "Young Farmer" and others who are about to begin an orchard, the process of taking up and setting out trees, whether fruit or ornamental, as practiced by our most careful and successful fruit growers.

In preparing a fruit tree for transplantation, the first thing to be done is to dig a trench round it to the distance of from two to three feet, according to the size of the tree. The trench should be dug to the full depth to which any of the roots may extend, and any large roots which may be found running to from the start, and proper attention this distance and depth should be cut given to forming the heads, there would off with a sharp knife. The ground between the trench and the stem is to be reduced as far as may seem necessary or practicable, by means of a digging fork, or the hand, with as little injury to the roots and rootlets as possible. By working this way all around the ball the best roots will be liberated and preserved intact, and the ball freed from all superfluous soil. The tree will then be ready to lift. If carefully pried up from beneath the ball, and it does not lift readily, it will probably be found had proper care been given to the orthat there is some tap root which will, have to be sought out and cut through. Whenevhr practicable it is best to secure a ball of earth round the roots. On the tree being lifted from its hole the roots should be examined, and all that have been severed roughly with the spade, should have the ends cut smooth with the kuite, so as to facilitate the growth of fibres. The tree can then be transplanted to its new locality. The hole for its reception should be of proportions, both as to width and depth, large enough to receive, not only the roots of the tree without the least cramping, but also a generous supply of well rotted manure, ashes, bone-dust and a sprinkling of salt, all well mixed with the soil which has been dug out. In replacing the soil regulate it so as to leave it rather highest in the centre of the excavation. Now the tree may be set in the hole in the position desired and steadied by the hand. Next the roots from the lower part of the ball are to be sought in the open ground. And all this time, when "garden sass" tastes better than at any other time of the year, we enjoyed all the lettuce and onions we loremedy for the speedy and permanent cure out and laid outwards in lines radiating from the stem, being distributed on all sides as nearly as this can be done; the fine, well pulverized and rich soil should be now thrown among another part we sowed tomato seed for and over the roots as they are thus be- early plants. We also put a few rading placed, and worked in well up to the base of the ball. The sail covering substituting them for the spinach, the rocts may be gently pressed down, but the tree should never be "churned" as is frequently done, to settle the soil. This done, another set of roots higher up must be laid out in the same way, and still another, until the whole of the roots thus carefully laid are embedded as firmly as may be in the soil, which may now receive another gentle treading. After the excavation has been filled up nearly to the general level of the ground, the tree may receive a good wattering if the soil is dry, and then the earth may be leveled up and made smooth around the tree. To keep the tree steady and firm in its place flat stones may encircle the stem at a little distance from it. If the soill of the orchard is as rich and deep as it ought to be, apple trees should be set at least two rods apart, though intervening spaces may be filled with peach trees, which will bear fruit and decay by the time the apple trees attain their

The straw and coarse manure should he raked off in the early spring as soon as the heads of the rhubarb appear above ground. If the bed is made in a warm and sunny spot, and the plants well protected in winter, the stems will obtain the largest profits, without rebe ready for use, in this climate about the first of April. Shall We Prune in Winter?

There has been a vast amount of discussion as to the proper time for prunng; some insisting that it should not done in winter, while others hold that the proper time is 'whenever your knife is sharp.' There is one season especially in which pruning should not be done, viz: during the period of active growth, from the time the buds start in spring, until buds for the next year are formed. Winter is preferred y many, as more time can be devoted to the work; and with the apple and pear, it probably does not make any difference at what period it is done between the fall of the leaf and the swelling of the buds in spring. It is not well to prune when the wood is froen, as bad wounds and cracks may result. If your trees are taken in hand be little need of severe pruning in the orchard. The too common method is. to plant an orchard and let it grow un cared for. The trees, after they begin to bear, yield fair crops for a few years and then, when they decline and fail, pruning is suggested as a remedy. Too often the pruning is done by ignorant persons, and as a result nearly as much wood is cut out as there is left. This great waste should be avoided. The labor of the tree, so to speak, expended to produce these numerous branches. should have been directed to the production of fruit, as it might have been pruning are readily understood, and one should never remove a branch, large or small, without having some definite object in view .- DR. My Garden Under Glass.

Last fall, in October, I spaded up a little plot in the garden, twelve feet by six in size, manured it well, smoothed it off and planted onions, lettuce and spinach. Just before winter set in I top-dressed with well-rotted manure and spread corn-fodder over it. Early in February I removed the fodder and part of the manure, made a frame of boards about the bed and covered it with sash bought from a defunct green house. The plants grew rapidly under the glass, and by the middle of March we had all the onions we wanted to use. The lettuce came in by the last of March. This was nearly two months in advance of that which was planted in the open ground. And all this time, when "garden sass" tastes better than at any other time of the year, we enwanted, while those who planted in for Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asththe open ground in April were waiting for theirs to grow. As we removed the onions we filled a part of the space with lettuce, and in ishes in vacant places. Next time I which we do not like. I will mulch with straw, too, instead of fodder.

My experience in this matter has been so happy, and the cost so light, that I heartily recommend my farmer friends to try it. It would pay if it cost five times as much.—W. L. P., in Farm and Fireside.

It is hardly a safe operation for our farmers to buy trees of peddlers who are selling the stock of nurseries, the responsibility of whose proprietors they know nothing, and the kind and value of whose trees they have no guaranty except the representations of parties not often reliable and always interested to make the largest sales and gard to the interests of the buyer. We have heard a great deal of complaint, where purchases have been made of trees, which have proved to be of no value when delivered, being inferior stock and widely different from the representations made at the time the sale was effected. It might be some consolation, perhaps, to purchasers if this refuse stock were obtained at a cheaper rate than good stock purchased at reliable nurseries in his immediate vicinity; but in nine cases out of ten they have to pay more for worthless trees than they would for trees grown in their neighborhood by nurserymen whose word and judgement they can trust, and the value of whose stock can be determined by personal inspection, before purchase is made. The greatest care should be exercised by purchasers in regard to the character of the trees which are intended for an orchard. No one can afford to set out inferior trees, even though he could obtain them at a nominal price. In the sequel poor trees will always prove dear, whatever abatement there may be on their first cost. The best trees, carefully set out, and assiduously watched and cultivated, are the only ones that will make a profitable return to the farmer or orchardist. It is always safe to give tree peddlers a wide berth; they can seldom be touched without loss. Good stock in all the established nurseries of the country is in such demand that it finds a ready sale at home, and is never sold by peddlers. It is the refuse stock that is hawked around.

The Farmer Must Educate Himself and Cultivate Self-respect.

The farmer ought to live as well as any other class in society. If the laborer is worthy of his hire, if the farmer produces more than the trader, the banker, the professional man, the speculator, surely he ought to reap the substantial benefit of what he produces. altogether wanting. The clothing of erties thus: himself and family is coarse, sometimes shabby and uncouth. In saying this we cast no reflection on the farmer. We simply state facts. To this condition of things there are many exceptions. We find the exceptions considerably numerous ail through agricultural districts. That they are the exceptions and not the rule argues something radically wrong. Now wherein lies the difficulty? Can we get at it and state it clearly and truthfully without giving offense?

These difficulties of the farmer are both internal and external. They pertain to himself and to those external circumstances over which he has, at present, no direct and immediate control. The external things we will leave to a future occasion. The internal, the stances which are mixed with them. subjective difficulties, we will speak of

The first difficulty is a lack of selfrespect; and we suppose the average of the past. Three hundred years ago he who cultivated the soil was a boor. He could neither read nor write; he was to humbly petition his majesty, of fertilizing material is mized. the king. To the nobles and landowners he obsequiously took off his generations to get out of our bodies and souls hereditary taints. The sins children. How long it takes a people to emancipate itself from old traditionary feelings and habits. They cling to us like cast of feature, or modes of thought, or traits of character. Is it purchase bone-dust costing not less as good as the best. Those who have strange, therefore, that the farmers of than two cents a pound, simply to enturned their attention to breeding and to-day bow their spirits, sometimes to-day bow their spirits, sometimes rich the soil around and beneath their heads, to the more wealthy and prosperous and intellectual classes? The large pieces were reduced to small atoms. Nevertheless, if large bones be buried three or four feet from a grape vine, the countless numbers of mouths at the end something of the old inherited servile of the roots will soon dissolve, take up spirit which was so universal in the long past? The man who equality with others may be hated, but profit. - Western Farmer. he will never be looked down upon,

A sense of ignorance is another incubus weighing heavily upon the farmer. What shall he do to remove this incubus? He must educate himself. He can never rise to an equality with those who have entered the learned professions till he becomes in the best sense of the word educated. He need not know the same kind of things that the fastened directly to the trees themscholar knows; but he must have a selves. Such fences cannot be used knowledge of his own high art. To know this he need not study books on chemistry. though these would aid him. He can learn these things by observation and experiment. If he engages in stockraising, as most farmers do, he must acquaint himself with this branch of his business. It is not easy to learn. It requires much study, careful observation, long and well directed experiments. Shelter for Stock.

We have often, heretofore, spoken of this subject. We again take up the matter. Its importance demands further attention. Cold weather is approaching and there are hundreds of farmers in Kansas who have made little or no preparation for a winter's shelter for their cattle. This lack of a GEO. LHIS & BRO. Sandy soils, then, are those which consist mainly of grains of sand, or silica, or flint, and is called a silicious soil. Nature never bestowed upon man a soil of greater capability of being made lastingly fertile than this sandy, light soil.

Barb Wire Fences.

The utilities of barb-wire fences are thus summed up by Prof. S. A. Knapp, of Iowa Agricultural college:

The work of one or two days with these materials would construct a shed ample and comfortable for a small herd of cattle. The farmer, who will see his cattle stand shivering with the cold when two days' efficient labor would make them comfortable and warm, ought to be prosecuted for cruelty to animals. The merciful man will be merciful to his beasts. In point of economy also it is cheaper to supply shelter as means of warmth than to supply food. When exposed to the cold a great deal more food is demanded to keep up the animal heat than is required under proper shelter.

Value of Pure Bred Fowls,

The editor of the Poultry Monthly says: Our experience compels us to say there is no stock as productive as our thoroughbred; because they have been bred in accordance with a system, and with the object in view of producing qualities of great excellence. It matters not what branch of sthe poultry trade you breed, the fancy varieties for sale or exhibition, the heaviest kinds for the food market, or the medium size for their eggs alone.

Under the very best management, our pure bred invariably give better satisfaction and prove more remunerative than fowls not bred to any degree of all kinds of stock, or engaging in any enterprise or occupation, the interest and pleasure that is awakened by the first step in the right direction goes a great way to gain in much shorter time the experience necessary to success, which only could be gained through years of arduous labor; and attention, if the wrong course were pursued in the beginning.

Poultry keeping can be made an auxiliary to other pursuits without infringing on the time of the keeper, and will bring in a quick and handsome return for the food and care given them. It costs no more to feed and keep a flock of improved fowls than it does the common sorts. It is a waste of time and money to breed from poor stock, and it is the poorest economy to buy Many horticulturists and farmers poor trash, though represented to be turned their attention to breeding and quality the better the results, and that they never will be, in our generation at least, a drug in the poultry market.

The Latest John Brown and Queen Victoria Story.

A great many stories got afloat from time to time, of which Victoria's servant, John Brown, is either the hero or the subject. No doubt most of them are indebted to a whole piece of cloth for their manufacture, though now and for their manufacture, though now and then an authentic one gets out. I can tell you one about him that is in a measure apropos of the subject just re-ferred to, and also combines the virtues of recent occurrence as to its incidents, and undoubted authority as to its re-cital, my informant of the facts being none other than one of the Queen's equerries. Prince Frederick Augustus of Schleswig Holstein, the elderly German who same a constant of the control of the Country of the man who some years ago married the Queen's third daughter, the Princess Helena, holds the position of Ranger of Windsor Park. The office is of course windsor Park. The office is of course a sinecure, a fat income, and a fine residence in Windsor Park (called Frogmore) being given the incumbent for doing nothing. It seems that during the Ascot races, when the neighborhood of Windsor was thronged with the elite, the German prince was desirous of giving a garden party. His house being within the limits of a royal desmesne, it became his duty, in accordance with the sovereign's prerogative, to submit the list of his intended guests to the Queen for her approval before an invitation could be issued. Her Majesty, who, where her rights are concerned, is more exact and precise about small observances than many people suppose, read over the list with care. Then she sent for the prince, and told him that it had her approbation with but one exception. It did not include the name of be invited. The prince said nothing, but bowed low and took his leave. On the appointed day the party came off, and Mr. Brown was there; but he was the only guest. The prince had obeyed the royal command, but had invited no one else. The Queen heard of it, of course, but thought it wiser to say nothing. The recent appointment, however, of the Duke of Teck as her special parliamentary reporter in place of the prince might possibly indicate a desire to show her displeasure.—London Correspondent.

About Cats.

One of the nuisances of this city, says New York letter in the Rochester Democrat, is its cats, and yet experience proves that they are a necessary evil. They have made Trinity churchyard their midnight resort and the sexton would be glad to expel them, but that is impossible. They are kept in most of our public buildings as a protection of our public buildings as a protection against rats, which are so very destructive. Walking into the Treasury lately. I noticed a fine-looking cat, and in reply to an inquiry the janitor said they had procured two, one of each sex, and were determined to keep up the breed. The cat and kittens, he said, were less trouble than the rats. I asked him how the letter could get into a stone buildthe latter could get into a stone build-ing which has not a crack and where sewer communication is broken by "traps." Oh, said he, I can't tell how they get in, but I saw one at least enter a basement window in broad daylight. As soon as he was inside he could hide among the boxes and piles of paper. The banks have the same trouble, which is much worse in the postoffice, where such supplies of food are found in the bags and leather pouches. One might suppose the postoffice to be rat proof, nimals have and yet the perfect nuisance there. Hence the item of disbursement for "cat feed" which is so regularly audited by the department at Washington. Cat meat is also a specialty in our markets. Speaking of cats, it may be mentioned as a curious omission that this animal is not mentioned in the Bible, while the dog is so frequent. This is the more remarkable since the cat was an object of worship in a country where Israel was held in bondage for 400 years.

Society Notes.

A coolness, growing out of the following conversation, has sprung up between Gilhooly and his friend, Gus De

"I had a splendid time last night," said Gus. "I spent the evening at a little social gathering at the Goodman mansion."

"Are the Goodman nice people?" queried Gilhooly.
"Well, I should say so. They are well, I should say so. They aristocratic. To get in their circle the must have a deal of money or a great deal of genius."

"You don't tell me so—and you say you were there?"

"You were invited, were you?"

"Of course." "And to be invited a man has to have a great deal of money or plenty of genius."
"Precisely."

"Well, Gus, I am very glad to hear ou have become rich all of a sudden. Lend me five dollars?"

THE LITTLE BANANA PEEL.

Like the bar of the beaten gold A gleam in the summer's sun;
I am little, I know, but I think I can throw
A man that will weigh a ton.
I send out no challenge bold, I blow me no vaunting horn, But foolish is he, who treadeth on me; He'll wish he had ne'er been born.

Like a flower of the field vain man
Goeth forth at the break of day,
But when he shall feel my grip on his heel,
Like the stubble he fadeth away;
For I litt him high up in the air.
With his heels where his head ought to be;
When a down-coming crash he maketh a mash,
And I know he's clear gone upon me.

I am scorned by the man who buys me,
I am modest and quiet and meek;
Though my talents are few, yet the work that

I do
Has oft made the cellar-doors creak.
I'm a blood-red republican born,
And a Nibilist fearless I be;
Though the head wear a crown, I would bring its pride down,
If it set its proud heel upon me.

EDITOR SPIRIT :- Seeing my last in print and remembering my promise, prompts me to write again; but, of course, like Gerty H., it's hard to find something to write about. I do not envy 'School Girl's' (No. 1) place at all... I would much rather spend an hour or so each morning and evening doing chores, or at least I should take John Brown. She desired that he should some exercise, and then I should never study until midnight. Why, it is enough to rack the constitution of the strongest man. You see in my effort to obtain education I would not trample future health and I appiness beneath my feet; but while a few are overtaxing themselves in this way, many more are under-taxing their brains in such a way that in after life they will be called dolts, dunces and block-heads. These kind are generally well enough acquainted with physical labor, but notoriously ignorant of mental knowledge. But you say, 'How am' I'to obtain edcucation then? Well, I'll tell you. Don't start after it with headlong precipitency, but with a moderate pace, and like the tortoise you will get there quickest. Remember that he who graspe at much gets nothing, and that whatever is worth doing at all is worth doing well. Every common sense farmer knows the latter motto to their satisfaction, and every scholar would do well to follow it.

Now, Mr. Editor, please express yourself on this.

I remain yours as ever,

A. JAY HAWKER. IOLA, Kan.

A Lie is Never to be Told, Never.

I classify the obligations to speak the truth as primarily a personal duty, and only in a secondary sense a social duty. Truth is indeed the chastity of the lips. Simplicity, honesty, veracity of speeca and action, are all inevitably included in the conception of a perfect human character. Kant even considers lying as the worst personal offense. He says, "The highest violation of duty owed by man to himself, considered as a moral being, singly, is a departure from the truth, or lying. A lie is lation of the dignity of man."

Starting from this nobler view of the law of veracity, nothing is more pitiful than to hear the discussions which not unfrequently take place about the lawfulness of saying that which is untrue in one and another contingency. It is, of course, very easy to imagine these casuistical cases, such as the familiar stock instance of the wife of Hugo Grotius concealing her husband from his enemies, and denying his presence. But the old Roman, Aulus Geilius, asks pertinently: "If any one says that it is lawful to tell lies on this or that occasion, let us ask him where he will draw the line and stop? At one lief or a dozen, which may be needful to cover it?" We may pardon a man or woman who in a great and pressing emergency uses a falsehood, just as we may pardon a man who amid the roar of cannon, loses his nerve and runs away in battle, or a confessor who flinches from the stake. But the true virtue of truthfulness knows no exceptions. It is, as I have repeated, a personal duty; and there is no use in showing that it may be a social convenience to neglect it. The personal law of truth cannot be abrogated for any such reason, any more than the personal law of chastity. Most of the disputes and casulstries which have taken place about lies have arisen from the disputants thinking of truth only as it regarded the person spokenito. If they had thought first of the speaker, as they ought to have done, they would have perceived that the facts on which they relied for cancelling the obligations of truth only touchad the social and secondary obligation, and left the personal duty as fixed as before. If we keep clearly in view that we are dishonored by suffering a lie to pass our speak has any right to have truth told to him.

It is a double sin to tell a lie to an honst, truthful person; but it is a sufficiently henious personal sin to the sufficient su lips, we shall not feel much concern to inquire Stuffing an Elephant.

The carcass of an elephant, who last year figured prominently in a circus, is now being prepared for exhibition in the National Museum at Washington. All the bones have been preserved and have been cleaned, and are now being carefully articulated. When this is completed, the elephant in his bones and the elephant in his skin will be set up, side by side, on pedestals in the Na-tional Museum, and an unprejudiced public can judge as to the respective merits of these costumes for summer wear. The method employed in preparing such a huge mass as this ele-phant for the museum is a very inter-esting one. As the bones were to be used, another skeleton had to be made. This was effected by building a wooden framework of the proper dimensions. Over this framework tow was spread, and on the top was placed a coating of soft mud. The skin was then drawn over, and the pliable mud foundation preserved all the irregularities of the skin, so that it looks exactly as it did when on the live elephant. The trunk hangs in a natural position, with the end slightly curled up from the ground. The eyes, made by a celebrated opti-cian, are exact counterfeits of the natural eye; so that, when the elephant gets mounted on its pedestal in the museum, it will look deceitfully alive. .

Metaphors.

Speaking of national affairs and ambitious politicians, a Methodist preacher lately used in his sermon this pretty strong metaphor: Rather than undertake to establish a throne, it would be better for a man to go to sea in a stone boat, with iron oars and leadon sales. with the wrath of God for a breeze, and hell for the nearest port."

SARSAPARILLA a fair trial.

It is folly to experiment with the numerous low-priced mixtures, of cleap materials, and without medicinal virtues, offered as blood-purifiers, while disease becomes more firmly seated. Ayen's Sarsaparilla is a medicine of such concentrated curative power, that it is by far the best, cheapest, and most reliable blood-purifier known. Physicians know its composition, and prescribe it.
