WHOLE NO. 205.

WHY?

BY DE. C. D. GARDETTE.

Why should the Autumn days be called The saddest of the year? To me it seems they give as gleams Of loveliness beyond our dreams. And in the glorious hues they spread Beneath the foot and o'er the head. A lesson of good cheer spread To all who choose to hear.

What though the forest boughs grow bare Their leaves still clothe the sod! These gauds they cast to fight the blast Of Winter's legions, and at last They conquer in the season's ring. And don fresh jewels with the spring-So flowers shall bloom, and birds shall sing New hymns to Nature's God!

The gray of sky, the gloom of earth, The weariness of rain. The snow, the frost, are but the cost Of Nature's triumph o'er the lost That ever still was found anew, And brighter, braver, better grew From pain and peril ventured through To life and light again!

So, say not that the Autumn days Are saddest of the year; But learn to know that here below Each season hath its weal and woe; That Summer's bloom is only blest Because of Winter's frosty rest. And of Earth's changes, each is best In its appointed sphere.

"CURSED WITH HER HEART'S DE-SIRE."

BY ANNIE SHIBLDS.

"It must be pleasant to have the power to de so much good," Mrs. Hillman said, as her aunt handed her a handsome cheeque for a

Myrtla's face was so expressive of genuine soon as she said: "My wealth is the price of my life's happiwass. Myrtle. I will tell you the story, if you care to hear it, dear." For answer Myrtle drew her low eushioned seat a little nearer her aunt's, and lifted a listening face. "When I was eighteen," Mrs. Monroe said gently, "I had two lovers; one, Mark stone, a young carpenter; the other, Will, Monroe, a cabinet-maker, making a comfortable income by his trade. I was the daughter of a storekeeper, and brought up upon a very limited income, your father being the only other child. When Mark asked me to be his wife, and I re fused him, he sold his shop and left our little village for California, then in its first flush of the gold fever that so soon infected the entire country. Two months later I married Will. Monroe, loving him with my whole heart, Myrtle; loving him with my whole heart !"

For a moment the agitation upon the sweet sad face was so great that Myrtle whispered: "Don't tell me if it grieves you."

"Yes, dear, I will tell you. The grief that haunts me night and day, will be no greater because I speak of it, for the first time in many years. When Will. and I were married, we had a small but cosy cottage, that was bought with my husband's savings, and furnished almost entirely by the work of his hands. We were thoroughly happy there, Mrytle, for two years. Looking back now, I wonder how the demon of discontent could have found entrance into our home. Will. was kind and thought ful, our boy Harry was a healthy, happy child; we had perfect health; and if our income was not very large, we had no fear of want, no extravagant desires.

"But when Harry Was a year old, Mark Stone same back from Califernia, with one of those suddenly acquired fortunes that were the from New York, were all the wonder of the home, and went to seek his fortune in Boston. pretty little woman, who wore diamonds with comfort of my lonely life, was taken from me her morning dresses, and excited the envy of dying atter an illness of only four days : all the village maids and matrons. Most of all mine! I had never had wealth, and its power to dazzle me was unlimited. It blinded me to all my own happiness, and I was wicked enough to regret my refusal of the man who had become so successful. I hide nothing from you. Myrtle. In those miserable days my husband' devotion, my boy's baby beauty, my pleasant home, all were as nothing to me in the shadow work of Will.'s hands, every piece of which was a proof of his love for me.

"Had I carried my bitter envy silently it would have been bad enough, but I was wicked you such an income as I hope will satisfy even her own happy home, her heart was full of pity they are all ready now. These things go on enough to let my husband see it. For many your desires." months he bore my grumbling at our poor surroundings in silent patience. for he leved his home, his wife, and his child, and asked no greater wealth than the slowly increasing gains of his own honest industry. But he loved me so unselfishly, so entirely, that my evident discontent became a weary burden for him to bear." "It is hard to imagine you fretful and ropinng, Aunt Louise," Myrtle said, caressing her

"Yet I was both, dear. Once my husband asked me if I regretted my refusal of Mark Stone. I had been visiting Mrs. Stone, and admiring enviously a large box of dry goods she had just received from New York. When Will. put this question, sadly, wistfully, I answered pettishly

"'Of course not; but I wish you had his money. It is rather provoking to see how splendidly his wife lives, and think it might have all been mihe.'

"Myrtle, I wonder now what demon in my heart prompted that speech, the key-note to all the misery to follow. From that hour Will. with fever. Fever Myrtle, brought on by exblank astonishment, that her aunt could not changed. As quickly as possible he arranged help smiling, though smiles were rare visitors his business, sold the stock he had, and when he had and when he had so the head and when he had so the head and when he had so the head and when he had and wh all was ready told me he was going to California."

"With you?" asked Myrtle.

"No, dear, there was no thought of my go ing! When Will. first spoke of going I felt a momentary regret, for I knew well I had driven him to the resolution. But after a few tears I exulted in the idea that he would return soon with the riches I was placing above his happiness and mine. I did not then appreciate his self-sacrifice. He was a man who hated change, to whom the evening home-coming was the dream of the day's work; who was utterly contented, and only the desire to please me could have spurred him on to the change he proposed making."

"He must indeed have loved you!"

"Yes, I held such love, Myrtle, and I threw it away. I let him go! I felt only pride and triumph when he hade me farewell his face pale as death, his hand grasping mine with convulsive force. I can see him now, as he stood upon our little porch, Harry clinging to his coat, and his eyes, haggard and imploring, fixed upon me. One word would have kent him, and I did not speak it. One look of regret in my face would have made him abandon his journey even then, and I let him go."

Again the agony of regret convulsed Mrs. Munroe's face, and Myrtle softly caressed the hand she held between her own, realizing that no words of hers could carry comfort to this long past sorrow.

After a moment's silence, Mrs. Munroe spoke again :

"My punishment began very soon, Myrtle When the thoughtful care that had surrounded my life was gone, utterly gone, I began to learn its inestimable value. I can never tell vou what bitter loneliness fell upon me when I I thought. But he passed from earth in a deep looked no longer for Will.'s home-coming, heard no more his loving voice, and missed every day the tokens of his affection I had so ungratefully undervalued. A month after he all her long, painful narration, but at these last left, I began a letter to him imploring him to words she bowed her head, and the tears coursreturn, promising never again to express one ed each other down her cheeks. Myrtle was wish for more than I already had, if only he crying silently, her whole heart full of tender would come back to me and love me."

"Surely he came," Myrtle said. "Child, he never saw the letter, No word came to use for five weary years—five years great wealth I hold to-day. After Will, died I

"Yes. But in those days the house that now full of tearful prayer to Heaven for his safety, transferred my property to this place that I has many rivals, stood alone for magnificence his return to me. I thought him dead, and might more readily control it, and a city has in the whole country. Mark's horses and carthen I thrust that agony from me, and was sure grown where there was but a little village, so riages, his splendid new house, his furniture he lived and would return. My brother left place. He brought a wife home with him—a My father died. Last of all, my child, the only Again Myrtle's tender caress told of her sympathy.

"When every hope seemed dead in my heart, Myrtle, there came a letter from my husband. A letter that was beart-breaking in its erne brevity. He wrote:

"'I would not write to you before, because ! had learned at a bitter cost that your love could only be given to a rich man. I came here to of Mark Stone's great house, his wife's dia- give you the wealth that was your only estimends and his newer to gratify every desire mate of happiness, and at last I can promise of her heart. When I saw his velvet carpets, you an income far exceeding that of your old his conservatories, his magnificent furniture, I friend, Mark Stone. But I have invested the hated my humble home, adorned only by the gold I wen by actual hard labor in this fastgrowing city of San Francisco, and I must remain here for the present. It you care to come to me, you can do so. If not, I will remit to kissed Mrs. Munroe for farewell, and went to morning, you made these quite neat, so that

"That was a harsh jetter," Myrtle whispered.

"I deserved nothing kinder. Enclosed was cheque for my expenses, if I wished to join Will. in California, and I lost no time in going. It was not the easy journey in those days that it is now, but had it been twice as difficult I bould not have hesitated. All the time that was hesitating to join my husband I was tortured by the impossibility of proving to him that love, and love only, prompted. Had he written that he was a beggar I should have hurried to his side as quickly, but he would never believe that. Oh, Myrtle, I can never tell you the agony of that certainty. He was rich, and I would come to share his riches That would be ever his thought of me."

"But you made him understand," Myrtle said gently. "Surely, when you told him, he knew you came from love alone." "Ah, Myrtle, I could never tell him! When I arrived in San Francisco, the lawyer who conducted Will.'s business met me with the cessive labor of body and brain, to amass wealth me strong, vigorous, and in perfect health, a prematurely-aged, broken man, raving in delirium. And in that raving I learned what it had been to that loving heart to cut loose from home, to take away a bitter contempt in the place of the love he had held for me. He would call my name with all the old tenderness, and then curse me for my avarice that drove him

"Oh, auntie, that was a bitter welcome!"

"But worse than that was to come! Past the very portals of the grave, we nursed him back to comparative strength and idiocy! For nine years I watched for one look, one word o recognition, and never saw or heard even one! The last sane act of my husband's life was to will to me all the wealth for which he had given so fearful a price, and every investment he had made prospered. I was cursed with my heart's desire.' Every year the loathsom riches increased, and every dollar of it would have failed to give me the loving word for which my heart sickened. Leaving my property with responsible agents, I brought Will. home, hoping that familiar scenes and habits might bring back the lost powers of reason. I had the best advice to be obtained, both in Boston and New York. One year I would try perfect quiet, the next travel far and wide for change of scene. I had a nurse to accompany me, but I never left my husband's side, fearing I might miss the one flash of reason I hoped would answer my weary prayers. It never came! It never came! Nine long years of idiotic wandering, of querulous imbecility followed the fever, and then my husband sank slowly, painlessly, but not utterly unconscious of my presence, or my love, into the grave. To the very last I did not despair. Surely in death's grasp he would know me, if not before slumber, and never knew of my repentance or my love!" The voice of the speaker had not broken in sympathy. When Mrs. Munroe grew calmer, he said gently: "This is the price I paid, Myrtle, for the again my riches have increased. I have given freely wherever I thought my charity might bring a blessing." "And surely it has brought many blessings,"

Myrtle said, eager to pour some balm of comfort into the sorrowing heart. "There is not the dinner alone, your first care is to see that a charity that does not owe some measure of the fire is right, and that there is the right its success to you, Aunt Louise; and how quantity of water in the pots. Always have many unknown acts of mercy you do every day, will never be guessed except by the poor you aid."

"So I try to atone, Myrtle. But. oh, dear child, my life is one long, long remorse, and I all the vegetable dishes and meat platter, for it ask no greater gift of Heaven than to soon end keeps the dinner hot and nice to have all the the weary pilgrimage, and let me join my hus- dishes it is served in nicely warmed. Cut a band and child."

Myrtle spoke from her heart in answer, recounting the many, many blessings she had it will soften but not melt. Then put the casheard showered upon her aunt for gentle char- tor in the center of the table, and the salt curs ities, and that sympathy that was even more of whatever kind they may be, in their proper precious than her gold. Yet when at last she places. I suppose, in clearing the table in the for the rich woman who was the envy of all her friends.

Only a few weeks later, as Myrtle was seated at the breakfast table, her husband chatting pleasantly, her three rosy children gathered around the well-spread board, the messenger of sorrow came to tell her that Mrs. Munroe was dangerously ill.

She hastened at once to the house, and found her aunt anxiously watching for her.

"Only a little time now, Myrtle," she said. And her niece wondered. even with the story fresh in her mind, at the light of happiness upon the wasted face. All the habitual sadness was lost in the hope that illuminated the soft eyes and tender lips. Even in her sleep, she would murmur:

"I am coming soon, Will. The weary waiting is almost over, love!"

Almost over! Bitterly as she would miss her tender love, Myrtle could not wish to keep back the spirit so longing to be free. She nursed to be had, put on the cups, sugar bowl and her with all the gentle patience she had learntidings that my husband lay dangerously ill ed from her example; but knew that nothing could save the life so near its end.

At the last, Mrs. Munroe, looking lovingly You have been my only c years, Myrtle, All the wealth I have will be yours, dear shild, and surely my heartfelt prayers will make it a blessing to you, instead of the weary burden it has been to me!" She lay silent for some moments, then heavenly smile lighted her face. as she whispered:

"At last! In heaven Will, will recognize me!" She spoke no more after this, and Myrtle, sobbing, closed the dark eyes that had shed such bitter tears of penitence, but were full of heaven's light in death.

▲ French money lender, complaining to the late Raron Rothschild that he had lent a nobleman ten thousand francs who had gone off to Constantinople without leaving any acknowledgment of the debt, the Baron said, "Well write to him and ask him to send you the seventy thousand francs he owes you."

"But he only owes me ten," said the moneylender. "Precisely." rejoined the Baron, "and he will write and tell you so, and thus you will get his acknowledgment.".

Old Mrs. Duflicker, of Franklin, Kentucky, said to a neighbor, the other night, while comfortably sitting in front of the fire, that she had "always had a great notion to learn to smoke," she did so love the "aromy of tobacker." She added: "I would have learned long ago, dear knows, but I heerd wunst that a man had his tongue paralyzed by smoking and that skeered me out. Lord knows I wouldn't want my tongue paralyzed, fur I couldn't talk none of it was."

in their places, as we were speaking of two or three weeks ago, it becomes a very pleasant task to set the table for the next meal. Suppose now your mother is called from the kitchen atter the dinner is all cooking, leaving you for the first time to set the table and dish a tea kettle full of hot water ready to fill up with. Then set the table. Put the cloth on square and even and neat. Next, for cold neat square of butter, and, if very hard, set the plate on some shelf near by the stove where every time there is meat, and it is not pleasant to have them torgotten, and some one must leave the table to go for pepper, salt or a spoon. So learn to put on the things always wanted next to the cloth. Now, place plenty of spoons, the large ones neatly crossed, near the corner or corners, next the place for the meat platter, the small ones in the spoon dish opposite. Now bring out your table mats and napkins and put in their places, and then the knives. In putting on knives and forks, place them all alike for each one. It gives a very disordered look to the table to have them thrown on any how. You can lay the two side by side, or you can put knives at right angles with the forks, but always have the edge of the knife so placed that it will be from the person when seated. Bemember the carving knife and fork, the butter knife, one also for the pie, if you are to have one. Provide now for the drink-the glasses and the pitcher of cold drink. If warm is also milk. This will remind you now to stop and make your tea or coffee, (the water is already hot.) Now the table is ready for the food. Place on it the pickles or apple sauce, or whatever of cold relish you are to have. And now our plate of bread, the slice cut even and not too thick, and all crumbe should be left on the bread board. And you can put on the pie or pudding properly warmed in cold weather. But if your pudding is just baked, wipe the bottom of the dish as you draw it from the oven, and place it on its proper mat. Set on the butter if softened enough. New we will suppose the dinner is cooked. and your father and brothers are preparing to eat. Put your kettle boards upon the sink or table where it is to be dished, get your ladle and skimmer, old spoon and meat fork right at hand; also your plate of bits of butter, and yoursalt and pepper boxes that are used in cooking. Some of your vegetables will probably require the water drained off and mashing and seasoning performed in the kettle. When that is done, leave them there until the meat is on the platter and any vegetables.served whole or in slices, are in the dishes. Then spoon out your mashed vegetables and make an even smooth mound of them. Wipe the edges of the dishes neatly and carry to the table. Set on the warmed plates and the hot drink place the chairs and call dinner, and if mother is still absent, sit down in her place and help serve. And if your brothers don't pronounce you a "jolly" little sister and your father say "well done little daughter," I shall be much

ANNUAL ADDRESS.

Delivered by Worthy Master, M. H Hudson, Before the State Grange.

BROTHERS AND SISTERS OF THE STATE GRANGE, FELLOW PATRONS :-- Again we have ome together in annual convention, to spend a short time in social intercourse, and to plan and work for the interests of the Order, and facilitate its growth and usefulness. We meet to-day, in this beautiful young city, nestled here in the valley of the Neosho, far in the interior of our State, where but a few years ago roamed the buffato and the red man, undisturbed in their wandering by the noisy progress of civilization. But how wonderful the change in these few years. As the sturdy pioneer advanced, the savage retreated. The covered with buffalo skins, have disappeared and in their places have been raised these stately buildings and neat, comfortable farm

The Council Lodge of the warriors has been mighty engine of civilization. Looming up in gence and perseverance of our people is the State Normal School building. The slow-moving pack train of ponies, laden with the scanty supply of the Indian has disappeared in the far west, and to-day you see the iron horse following in their wake, freighted with a rich commerce, an evidence of the thrift and industry ot our people. But we pause to inquire how those changes were brought about, and who wrought out these grand results. We answer, the husbandmen and matrons-the workers of our land have done this; that class with whom we are identified and whom we this day represent, and for the advancement of whose interests, socially, intellectually and financially we are called together at this time.

We occupy an important position. The duties imposed upon us are important, weighty and responsible. Let us see to it that they are faifhfully discharged. Our every act will be closely scrutinized by the tens of thousands of Patrons scattered all over our State, as well as those without our gates, but belonging to our class, and having a common interest with us, in all that pertains to the advancement of our agricultural interests. To the delegates composing the voting members of this body, let me say, may you prove equal to the emer gency, may you meet by your labors here the reasonable expectations of those for whom you are working, and receive from them the welcome plaudit, " Well done, good and faithful servant." In order that you may be thus successful, let there be earnestness in your work, harmony in your deliberations, and a sincere desire on the part of all to advance the interests and promote the general welfare of

How different are our circumstances and surroundings now from when we last met, only ten months ago. Then sadness and gloom were depicted on every countenance. Want and starvation were staring us in the face, many not knowing how their families were to be provided for until a crop could be realized. While laboring under this terrible depression of spirit they were illy prepared to take hold of the work of that session. But now the scene has changed. The gloom is dispelled. the clouds have lifted and passed away; a kind Providence has blessed us with an abundant harvest. The earth, wherein is garnered the richest treaures for man, has yielded to the magic touch of the husbandman her choicest fruits. · Let us be thankful to the great Provider for the blessings we now enjoy. Let us be encouaraged to put in the tenets of our Order. Faith, Hope, Charity. We, as good Patrons, should have faith in the great Master of the Universe when depositing the seed in the earth, that it will germinate and bring forth bundantly, looking forward in hope to the harvest when we shall, as a reward of our industry, have plenty and to spare to those of our fellows who may be in need of our charity. It gives me pleasure to be able to report the prosperous condition of our Order, not only in our own State, but throughout all the States. Notwithstanding the terrible ordeal through which we, as an Order, have passed in Kansas, yet we are not discouraged; our Granges are rallying; a cheerful, hopeful feeling prevails among our members. Many of our weak Granges are rallying, and with renewed energy and determination are going to work. The mmense crop of the past season grown in Kansas was an agreeable surprise even to the farmers themselves; and how different the inquiry coming up from them now, from that of ne year ago. Then it was, "how can bread and seed be procured, for we are destitute." Now the inquiry from every quarter of our State is, "how and where can we dispose of our surplus products so as to realize the greatest margin of profit to ourselves?" This is an important inquiry, and when made by Patrons, our Order should be prepared to give a prompt and satisfactory answer. Our circumstances heretofore, caused by the failure of crops, afforded us some excuse for not being better prepared to answer that question. But this excuse will not avail us longer. We must meet this pressing demand. You will permit me to suggest that in my judgment this question is first in importance with the Patrons of our State, and should claim your earnest attention at this season. Co-operation in buying organization. Our Order is now sufficiently in their transit between producer and consuselt was sufficient to accomplish this work and various attempts have been made by a a single Grange, or two or three Granges uniting, to carry out the plan of buying and selling to gether. While these efforts may be partially successful, they never can be generally so. As a rule they will fail, and there are many good reasons for this failure. An insufficioncy of capital, too small volume of trade, incompetent managers, &c., are among the causes we might name.

It was never contemplated by the founders of our Order that our Granges should be commercial organizations. Had such an idea been entertained, some, at least, of the essential elements necessary to have made them such would have been provided. Our Granges are not organized on a business basis. The fees herds of buffalo have retired, and the thous- and dues charged are only sufficient to provide ands of cattle dotting these beautiful valleys, the necessary furniture and implements for have taken their places. The rude wigwams, the comfortable working of the Grange and to meet current expenses. The prime object of the Grange, then, was not to engage in commercial transactions to any considerable extent, but bring the farmers together, as it were, into a primary organization, there to be taught removed, and in its stead has been erected the the great principles, of co-operation. This work is now going on in our subordinate the distance a proud monument to the intelli- Granges, and already favorable results are being realized, and many important truths have been brought out.

First, we have learned what all should have known at the beginning, that in order to carry on a commercial business, we must have men of experience and ability to conduct it. Second we must have a sufficient amount of capital as a basis to operate upon. Third. honesty and integrity must characterize all but especially those who are entrusted with the management of our business. These will secure confidence and patronage—the foutrh essential element indispensable to ssucces.

Now, as a class, we are not wanting in any of these; we have in every county men competent to conduct the business of the Patrons we have the capital, but it must be combined in sufficient amounts to do the business desired. This our farmers have been slow to do. It will be your duty at this session to devise some general system of business which may be adopted by the Patrons of the State, thus securing uniformity in the work.

Allow me to suggest, that, to my mind, the joint stock co-operative plan of business is the most feasible and presents the surest guarantee of success. There should be in every county having any considerable number of Patrons esiding therein, a joint stock association orcanized with a subscribed capital of from five to twenty-five thousand dollars, in shares to be fixed low enough so that every Patron could subscribe at least one share, and every shareolder to be entitled to one vote in the management of the business and no more. Our policy, heretofore, has been to disburse the profits at the time of purchase-that is, we furish to Patrous their goods at cost. There are, in my judgment, several objections to this course. First, there is no inducement in the way of interest on investments, or dividends of profits arising from the business to those who patronize our agencies, and hence stock annot be raised to do business on that plan. econd, it places us in competition with the regular retail dealers of the locality where we operate, and in attempting to undersell them we invite their opposition, and as it is natural for every one to seek to protect their own inerests, they will combine against us, and with their advantages-plenty of capital and a business built up-it would be impossible for us, with these odds against us, to sustain our business and build up a trade; and, third, by this plan, our capital does not and cannot inonstrated to be a fatal objection. We must have capital to work with; we cannot change the established laws of trade. If we attempt to do businsss, we must do it on business principles. These cannot be ignored. For these reasons and for many others we might name, I am of the opinion that we should conduct our business on the same margin of profits as do all other regular responsible dealers, these profits to be returned in annual or semi-annual dividends. First, a reasonable per cent., to go to the paid up stock, and the remainder to be divided, pro rata, among the purchasers or patrons of the busines, thus securing to ourselves the control of our own business, and the profits arising therefrom.

If our farmer Patrons will subscribe stock in an enterpise of this kind, to an amount equal to one year's profits they are now paying into the pockets of outside traders, it would furnish sufficient capital to commence business with. Then investing their profits in stock drawing nothing out, but allowing this capital to increase, in a few years their accumulations would be sufficient to conduct any business desired, placing all on a prosperous basis, and thus securing to the producers a degree of independence never before enjoyed by them.

The crop of 1875 has given to the farmers of Kansas a surplus of millions of bushels. This surplus must be exchanged either within or without our State, for dry goods, groceries, hardware, drugs, clothing, boots and shoes, farm implements, &c., and the many things necessary to supply the farm and household, including a little money to pay the trifling amount of tax we are called upon to pay semi-annually.

This work of exchange is now conducted by a class wholly independent of us, and having no interest in common with us, and for which and selling is one of the fixed principles of our a large profit is charged, and no part of which is ever returned to either producer or consummatured to develope some general system or er. By this system of exchange the farmer plan of business whereby the millions of loses all real profits on his productions, many dollars now going into the pockets annually of not even realizing the actual cost thereof. This a class of men who only handle our products course, as long as followed by the farmer, will keep him in subjection to that class now conmer, may be saved to the producer, to whom trolling his labor through the handling and pricit legitimately belongs. Many Patrons have supposed that the Grange organization of it—

To the first or cash system of conducting our ousiness I am well aware of the obstacles which lie in the way. These can only be surmounted by patient and persistent effort on the part of by members of subordinate Granges in the conthe laboring classes, nor can this much desired stitution or laws of the National Grange should result be reached at once. It must come grad- be conducted through the proper channel. ually, as the people are educated and made to understand the great value to them of this only true and economic plan of business.

The system of credits, so extensively practiced in this country, is gradually but surely the price of what we purchase, increases the value and interests on money, adds to the wealth of the rich by drawing from the poor. The experience of the past few years in the operation. of the business agencies established by the Order of P. of H. in the several States, upon a eash basis, has demonstrated, beyond a question of doubt, that an average saving of not less | ed unfavorably and we hope it will not be rethan twenty per cent. has been saved to those doing business through these agencies. But this saving can only be secured and maintained through a well matured system or plan of co-operation. The plan I have heretofore indicated, will, in my judgment, meet the wants of our people and is substantially the same as Every Patron must be held to a strict accountamended by the executive committee of the National Grange. While our agencies have accomplished a great good to members of our Order, yet it is apparent to all that our membership has not given them that hasty support that was expected. This seeming neglect has not been altogether their tault. Our plans of business have not been well adapted to their wants. We have commenced too high up the us to expect the Patrons of a State, without any previous preparation or experience, to coperate and concentrate their trade through State agency, is but to invite disappointnent. We must commence at the bottom and build upward, paving the way for the grand consummations of State and inter-State co-op-

Local agencies must be accepted as the fonndation of our business system. Keeping these in harmony and encouraging their growth is the shortest and surest road to general co-operation. To devise, mature and present such a plan, and provide for its dissemination among our membership is, to my mind. the most important work you will have to perform at this session. We hope you will give this subject your careful attention; and in this connection permit me to call your attention to a subject of importance requiring some action from the body. The education of the farmer was one of the leading objects in the organization of the Grange. We are not to understand this to apply to the elementary principles of a common education, but to the general dissemination of practical information among the agricultural class, calculated to aid them in their noble work. Hence every farmer, especially if he.be a Patron, should be a constant reader. He should exercise his mind as well as his muscle.

Farmers will never occupy that position in society their calling entitle them to until they, a class, attain a higher degree of inte

But the point to which I desire particularly to call your attention, is the means or medium through which we can best reach the Subordinate Granges and membership of our State in furnishing them with such information as they by rights should have, such as business plans which may be adopted by your body or from time to time proposed by the executive committee, or other information coming from the officers of the State Grange, and which is necessary for the general understanding and for the harmonious working of our Granges. Several plans have been tried, none of which have proved entirely satisfactory or exempt from criticism. It is conceded by all who have given this subject mature thought, that a better and more thorough system of inter-communication between the State and Subordinate Granges must be provided.

It seems obvious to me that one of two plans must be adopted. First, use the papers of our State that are in full sympathy with us; or, second, establish a paper under the auspices of the executive committee and the State Grange. In the adoption of either plan provisions should be made whereby the medium employed would reach every Subordinate Grange in the State. I am aware that to both of these plans there are objections urged, and in the minds of our members there is a diversity of opinion on this subject. It may not be improper for me here to state that our executive committee have been sorely perplexed in the performance of their duties under this head during the past year and while they have acted from the purest motives, and with a desire to promote the greatest good of the Order, yet their action has not been universally approved It will be your duty to relieve the executive committee from any further embarrassment on this subject by the adoption of some plan that will be equally just to our brothers of the press, and the interests of the State and Subordinate Granges. The National Grange at its last session, submitted several amendments to our organized law. These will be presented to you for your action at this session, for your adoption or rejection. You may not have received all the ples must be kept steadily in view, for upon amendments desired from the National Grange, but those presented are in the right direction and indicate the progressive sentiment of that body.

> Be patient and in the near future, all wise reforms demanded by our Subordinate Granges will be secured. The National Grange is in all respects a representative body, reflecting the views and wishes of the several State Granges comprising it. Any changes therefore desired Individuals have the right to petition, as well as the Subordinate, County, or State Granges. But these expressions should come up in the form of petition or resolutions endorsed in the Grange, and then sent up to the State Grange drawing the debtor class, be it individual, State by the representatives thereto, and through or National, into bankruptcy. It appreciates the representatives of the State to the National Grange.

Some of our Subordinate Granges and members have been in error on this subject, making their appeals through the columns of the public press to the injury of the Order in our State. While this course was pursed, doubtless with the purest motives, yet it has resultpeated.

Let every Patron be fully impressed with this one fact that the P. of H. is a secret organization and every member has voluntarily assumed the obligations and duties thereby imposed, and to the faithful observance of them. ability. Those outside our gates have no power to assist us and hence should not be consulted. The cohesive principle in our organization is its secreey. Its, power depends upon its business system and its development. A faithful devotion to these should characterize every true Patron.

There has been organized thirty-one District or Pomona Granges, with an aggregate charadder; we have anticipated too much. For ter membership of 1,479. We confidently expect good results to the Order growing out of the organization of these Granges. The duties imposed upon the Master and Lecturer of the County Granges, under Section 8. Article X. of our constitution is an important work, and should not be neglected, but faithfully performed by these officers, and no brother should accept one of these or any other office in a Grange. unless willing to perform all duties required of such office. But Subordinate Granges should not expect this work to be done for nothing. A reasonable compensation should be allowed them. To that end I would suggest that the fees and dues of members of a County Grange be so increased as to provide a fund out of which these expenses may (at least in part) be met.

> I would also recommend that the Secretaries of County Granges be required to report annually to the Secretary of the State Grange. giving such information as may be necessary to clear understanding of the status of these Granges.

I would further recommend that the business agent of each County Grange be required to report quarterly to the State agent, the amount of business transacted through the agency and the average per cent. sayed to the Patrons in their purchases and sales through said agency. To my mind it is important that the State Grange should have this information placed before it in the annual report of our State agent.

The time has come when the Life and Fire Insurance Departments of our work should receive more attention from our Patrons. The thousands of dollars now annually leaving our State to enrich foreign companies, should, by all means, remain among us; and more especially so when we consider that the rates charged by those companies almost double ours. I hope that additional effort will be put forth by your body and the officers in charge of these associations to build them up and make them what they should be interesting and profitable features of our Order.

In conclusion, allow me to express the hope that our present meeting may be pleasant and agreeable to all. May harmony and fraternal good feelings prevail during your delibera-May your work be well and faithfully done

THE WEEKLY SUN. NEW YORK.

1776. NEW YORK. 1876.

Eighteen hundred and seventy-six is the Centennial year. It is also the year in which an Opposition House of Representatives, the first since the war, will be in power at Washington; and the year of the twenty-third election of a President of the United States. All of these events are sure to be of great interest and importance, especially the two latter; and all of them and everything connected with them will be fully and freshly reported and expounded in THE SUN.

The Opposition House of Representatives, taking up the line of inquiry opened years ago by The SUN, will sternly and diligently investigate the corruptions and misdeeds of Grant's administration; and will, it is to be hoped, lay the foundation for a new and better period in our national history. Of all this The SUN will contain complete and accurate accounts, iurnishing its readers with early and trustworthy information upon these absorbing topics.

The twenty-third Presidential election, with the preparations for it, will be memorable as deciding upon Grant's aspirations for a third term of power and plunder, and still more as deciding who shall be the candidate. Concerning all these subjects, those who read The SUN will have the constant means of being thoroughly well informed.

The WERKLY SUN, which has attained a circulation of over eighty thousand copies, already has its readers in every State and Territory, and we trust that the year 1876 will see their numbers doubled. It will continue to be a thorough newspaper. All the general news of the day will be found in it, condensed when unimportant, at full length when of moment; and always, we trust, treated in a clear, interesting and instructive manner.

It is our affe to make the Werkery Sun the best treated in a clear, interesting and instructive manner.

It is our aifn to make the Weekly Sus the best family newspaper in the world, and we shall continue to give in its columns a large amount of miscellaneous reading, such as stories, tales, poems, scientific intelligence and agricultural information, for which we are not able to make room in our daily edition. The agricultural department especially is one of its prominent features. The fashions are also regularly reported in its columns; and so are the markets of every kind.

The Weekly Sus, eight pages with fifty-six broad columns is only $1.20 a year, postage prepaid. As this price barely repays the cost of the paper, no discount can be made from this rate to clubs, agents, Postmasters, or any one.

The DAILY Sus, a large four page newspaper of twenty-eight columns, gives all the news for two cents a copy. Subscription, postage prepaid, 55c. a month or $6.50 a year. Sunday edition extra, $1.10 per year. We have no traveling agents.

A promment New York physician lately complained to DUNDAS DICK & CO. about their SANDALWOOD OIL CAPSULES, stating that sometimes they cured miraculously, but that a patient of his had taken them without effect. On being informed that several initations were sold, he inquired and found his patient had not been taking DUNDAS DICK & CO'S.

What happened to this physician may have happened to others, and DUNDAS DICK & CO. take this method of protecting physicians, druggists and themselves, and preventing OIL of SANDALWOOD from coming into disrepute.

PHYSICIANS who once prescribe the Capsules will continue to do so, for they contain the pure OII in the best and cheapest form.

DUNDAS DICK & CO. use more OIL of SANDALWOOD than all the Wholesale and Retail Druggists and Perfumers in the United States combined, and this is the sole reason why the pure OII is sold cheaper in their Capsules than in any other form. THE SPIRIT OF KANSAS.

LAWRENCE, THURSDAY, JANUARY 6, 1876.

THE CENTENNIAL YEAR. The Centennial Year opens bright and auspicious. Even the weather augurs well. The northern blasts do not sweep down upon us, sending half-clad starving women and children shivering into some miserable hovel in order to save themselves from death in the streets. This is eminently true of the west. There is but little need of pauperism in Kansas, and there are but we trust they may clearly establish the perism in Kansas, and there are but few paupers. While the beginning of fact that they have not been even guilty quantities of the fine paper used for half way they stopped to watch a large of cavalageness or the want of a proper bills and resolutions are furnished to prairie fire. Marshall was reclining on the past year was full of discouragements, and everything looked dark, yet our people have passed through the over which they have control. ordeal, and with proper management can enter upon the Centenniel Year full of hope for a prosperous future. Our granaries are full, and while farmers do not realize war prices for their produce, when they get their money for a load of hay, corn, wheat, potatoes or anything else, the money realized for it has more purchasing power than double that amount had during the days of war, extravagance and high prices. Our farmers and business men have passed through trying times, but those trials have not been without their lesson, and if turned to account may be the means of bringing good out of evil, prosperity out of adversity. The agricultural classes, as a rule, are frugal and careful, but there is one thing the farmer has, or should have, learned. It is that the agriculturist, as well as the eapitalist, must look out for the oft recurring "rainy days" of life. A well filled corn crib is a good thing to be the legal possessor of during an "off year" in crops. All financiers and SAS, to take the Gleaner and merge it sound business men look ahead. They provide against the contingency of a that Bro. Stevens has at all times, and falling off in trade and consequent dull under all circumstances, stood true to and Territories.

The men despite the States of the fertile States of said locusts into t times. The money lender looks ahead and takes ample security for money loaned. He looks to the future. Let interest to take and read the SPIRIT, the farmer do likewise. Study to lay up something for that inevitable rainy day, and not "hew so close to the line" that at the end of the year the proceeds of the year's work have all disappeared, with nothing to show for it. Then the farmer can defy drouth and the grasshoppers, and overturn the tables of the money-changers. He will never fear that any Shylock can demand of him the pound of flesh.

This is the friendly counsel of the SPIRIT. In the meantime, the SPIRIT enters upon the Centennial Year with brighter hopes for the future. It promises-and intends with the help of the people to keep the promise-to furnish a paper that will commend it- Bro. Stevens also proposes to give the self to the agricultural classes. It will Spirit in clubs of ten to one address, BY TELEGRAPH. ever attempt to make its weekly visits at $1.25 per annum, weekly, which well filled with useful and instructive information for the farmer. The news will be carefully culled and condensed, so that it will all be briefly given. Horticulture, stock raising, matters pertaining to the Grange, everything that can be of use to the farmer will be liberally treated, and we trust the farmers of the State will second our efforts to furnish them the best Farm and Grange paper in the west by promptly remitting $1.50 and reading the SPIRIT OF KANSAS for the CENTENNIAL YEAR.

MORE OF THE FORGERY.

John Francis has been installed as State Treasurer the second time, by appointment of the Governor, and Sam. Lappin retires in disgrace from the position he stepped into one year ago. He has been arrested, and is now held under bonds for his appearance for trial upon the charge of embezzlement and forgery. The information against him contains eighty-one counts. Lappin's bail was fixed at $10,000-a very small sum, it would seem, from the gravity of the offense charged and the amount stolen from the State school fund. He has also given an indemnifying bond for $28,000 to his securities to shield them from loss by reason of any suit upon his official bond. It was thought that Lappin was a rich man, but subsequent developments lead to the conclusion that he is nearer bankruptcy than opulence. He is reported to owe $50,000 in Nemeha county whose county treasurer he has dragged down with him. His property has been attached, and altogether his affairs seem to be decidedly crooked. He proposes to fight, it out, however. It now devolves upon the School Fund Commissioners to substantiate their charges against him; They must prove

TO PATRONS. The Patron's Gleaner, which has been published at Emporia under the auspices of the State Grange, has ceased to exist, and the subscription list and good will transferred to the SPIRIT OF KANSAS. The SPIRIT from, this time forward, will publish all official matter connected with the Grange, which will be furnished by the Secretary and other officers. This will make the SPIRIT more than ever a Grange paper, through which the Patrons of the State will learn everything connected with the workings of the Order. Subscribers for the Gleaner will receive the SPIRIT for the unexpired term of their subscriptions. In making the announcement, Bro. P. B. Maxson, editor of the

The balance of the official proceedings of the Kansas State Grange, the amended constitution, and business plans of the Order, will appear in the SPIRIT. Bro. Stevens is to turnish to each subscriber to the Gleaner, the SPIRIT, semi-monthly, instead of the Gleaner, for the term of such subscription. I am to furnish communications for the Order for such semi-monthly issues. So the subscriformation from the several officers in would have gotten in the Gleaner. would be a trifle less than the Gleaner cost, semi-monthly, at 50 cents per copy. I hope all true Patrons in Kansas, who can, will at once subscribe for the SPIRIT, and make that paper the paper of all newspapers for the Order in this State. We'are able to do it, it is to our interest to do it, and if we wish the Order success we must show our good will by our good works."

The few valuable documents find their way into the book stores at nominal-prices, either through the thieving of employees about the capitol, or the venality of members of Congress.

In point of fact, therefore, the bulk of this printing, and binding, and paper is a dead loss to the people, who are taxed to pay for it, and only a benefit out of Congress, and the colluding officials who share in the spoils. To speak plainly, the whole thing is downright robbery, with hardly a pretence of concealment, for the proofs are visible on eyery hand at Washington.

THE NOBLE GRASSHOPPER.

In the Senate, yesterday, Mr. Harvey presented a memorial of the Kansas Horticultural Society, asking Congress to provide for an investigation into the habits of the Rocky Mountain locusts, or so-called grasshoppers. It directs the Commissioner of Agriculture to appoint three commissioners to make an investigation and report as to the method of preventing the incursions

Seneca, Kansas, Jan. 4.—Bruners' bondsmen have fixed matters with the county board, in regard to the $8,000, for which he holds Lappin's receipt which relieves Lappin from any further harge of embezzlement. The county board will require Bruner to give fur-ther bonds, since everything Lappin and Scrafford holds is in limbo. There is a general impression that Scrafford has gone back on Lappin as well as his own creditors. It seems that he borrowed money, just before leaving, wherever he could, without security, York Sun, have only a vague idea of and a large number of creditors will be left out in the cold, unless they can succeed in throwing him into bankruptcy. Upon landing at Great Bend, Alford pressed Marshall to go Marshall accepted this offer, and they proceeded toward Alford's home, across the Arkansas river. When about his satchel, while Alford drew a small pistol from his pocket, and, placing the muzzle near Marshall's left temple, fired, blowing his face full of powder, and the ball ranging down the cheek and stopping in front of the ear. The wound is thought to be not mortal, but his suffering is severe. The assailant took the satchel of the wounded man, thinking it contained his money, while Mr. Marshall ran off in the dark, thus saving his life and money, having the latter in his boot. Marshall hid himself in the brush till morning, and then to the combination of jobbers in and came to the city and told his story. All of Scrafford's real estate and per sonal property was attached to-day. Lappin's father attaches on about $2, O. C. Burnes, County Treasurer, attaches property to cover notes of nearly $9,000, which the banking firm Lappin has not accounted to Francis for the money, and it is a question which set of bondsmen will have the bag to hold. The excitement here tonight over the developments is intense-The State law makes it a criminal offense for the County Treasurer to loan public funds. Bruner claims he did not loan it, but put it into their hands for collection. A committee is examining the County Treasury, and more may yet be developed. The County Board will probably remove the Treasurer, or require additional bonds. Mrs. Scrafford gave up most of her household property to the creditors, and much sympathy is manifested for her and father Lappin.

Washinton, January 3.—Among the startling events of the day is the aunouncement that Gen. Grant and Secretary Bristow have been summoned to testify in the case of Babcock at St. Louis. This was so unexpected and gone beyond the expectation of those who originally began them, that the friends of the President are thoroughly alarmed and are striving to throw legal impediments in the way. So soon as the rumor reached the street that the President would be summoned with Secretary Bristow, it was met by a counter report that the law did not permit the President to appear, nor authorize a court to summon him as a witness. A dilligent scrutiny of the authorities, however, reveals the fact that any official of the government may be summoned to testify in cases where the government itself is concerned. Babcock's counsel have summoned the President to testify in his behalf, and it is understood that Grant is willing to appear.

There is a general desire to cut down appropriations and reduce the expenses of the government.

The defeat of Henzey is an utter over-throw of ring power, and is the great-est event of the kind that ever took place in this city. It is not a political triumph, for Henzey and Cavin are both republicans; but it is the result of au uprising of the people, backed by the public press.

A friend suggested your remedies. But I was extremely skeptical that they would do me good, as I had lost all heart in remedies, and began to look upon medicine and doctors with disgust. However, I obtained one of your circulars, and read it carefully, from which I came to the conclusion that you understood your business, at least. I finally obtained a quantity of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy, your Golden Medical Discovery and Pellets, and commenced their vigorous use | Please give us a call. according to directions. To my surprise, I soon began to improve. The Discovery and Pellets, in a short time, brought out a severe eruption, which continued for several weeks I felt much better, my appetite improved and I gained in strength and flesh. In three months every vestige of the Catarrh was gone the Bronchitis had nearly disappeared; had no Cough whatever and had entirely ceased to raise blood; and, contrary to the expectation of some of my friends, the cure has remained permanent. I have had no more Hemorrhages from the Lungs, and am entirely free from Catarrh, from which I had suffered so much and so long. The debt of gaatitude I owe for the blessing I have received at your hands, knows no bounds. I am thoroughly satisfied, and from my experience, that your medicines will master the worst forms of that odious disease Catarrh, as well as Throat and Lung Diseases. I have recommended them to very many and shall ever speak in their praise. Gratefully yours,

McCONNELL BRO'S.

WORTHY MASTER, SISTERS AND BROTH-ERS-Your committee make the following re-

At our first meeting after the last session of the State Grange, Bro. Dumbauld was elected Chairman, and Bro. Otis was elected as ex-9fficio Secretary.

The first business was the arranging of the minutes into proper shape for publication, which we found a difficult task, as many of the resolutions of the same nature and import were passed, besides many directly opposed to each other. And this chaotic state of affairs, and the pressing demands for feed and seed, made a lengthy session. Each member was requested to canvass his district with blanks, inquiring into the actual condition of the Patrons, and report the same to the April meeting.

We met in April and compared our reports. apportioned to each district their pro rata of the accumulated fund, and proceeded to distribute the same. We believe the course adopted was the best that could have been done and gave the greatest satisfaction. About twelve thousand dollars in money and a still greater amount of goods, provisions, feed and seed passed through the hands of the relief agent.

Agreeable to your instructions, we prepared and had printed the necessary blanks for the establishment of Pomona or District Granges, and now find that thirty-one have been organ-1zed, and believe they are doing good work.

At this meeting steps were taken to carry out your instructions in publishing a quarterly "Bulletin," showing the reports, &c., of the different departments of our Order, and other matters of interest to the Order. To do this with as small expense as possible it was detertermined to solicit advertisements to pay ex-

Bros. Popence, Otis and Downs were made a committee to superintend its publication, who performed the duty assigned them and as far as we know, the publication was received with favor, but only being issued quarterly, it was thought that advertisers would not like to help or assist it; therefore it was concluded at the September meeting to meet the present demand for a paper in the exclusive interest of the Grange, that we would issue the Gleaner semi-monthly, at a subscription price of fifty cents per annum, and it is received with favor. The subscription is daily increasing. The expense of publishing it for six months is secured without cost to the treasury, and we believe if it meets with the hearty endorsement of this body, it will soon receive a subscription list sufficient to make it not only an ornament to but the pride of the Order, besides furnishing a medium of communication to the Subordinate Granges and membership, thereby saving postage and valuable time.

At the July meeting, Bro. John G. Otis tendered his resignation as State Agent, which was accepted, and after mature deliberation we appointed Bro. P. B. Maxson, temporary State agent, until the State Grange should meet, Bro. Maxson, on receiving the appointment, by the direction of the executive committee, visited Kansas City, St. Louis and other points that he deemed important, making arrangements with manufacturers and commission men for handling our surplus products, and published the result of his trip in the SPIRIT OF KANSAS and Kansas Farmer.

Bro. Maxson immediately placed himself in correspondence with all the county agents and called a meeting of them and the Ex tive committee at Emporia, September 1st, at which meeting he stated the object of the call, and stated all the arrangements made, and requested that we should transact our entire trade through the channels selected, as in that manner only can we ever be able to make a showing of our business and obtain the advantages of reduced rates.

At this meeting it was thought best that in yiew of the anticipated large shipments of grain to have some person in Kansas City to look after the interests of those availing themselves of this market, which we deem the best in the West. We therefore appointed Bro. A. T. Stewart as such agent. We are pleased to say he has made a report showing eighty-nine car loads of wheat handled through that agency, selling for nearly $33,000, besides much other business.

WAREHOUSE.

Your committee at the February meeting found the State agency without an office or proper building for the storage or reception of the immense quantities of relief goods, besides the anticipated implements, &c., that might be handled it the required capital could be obtained. Rents being high, and believing by erecting a warehouse by the State Grange would have the effect to stimulate the county and other agencies in securing their own buildings, deemed it advisable to erect a warehouse at Topeka. But owing to the temporary change of agents, and the want of sufficient funds, we have not been able to utilize the enterprise as we would wish. Our life association and fire insurance department are two of the most important features of our Order. They deserve and should receive the cordial support of every member, and we would urge upon every care ful and prudent Patron that they at once make themselves familiar with these departments and secure memberships, thus providing for survivors in case of death, or indemnity in case of fire.

Every county should have an energetic, wide awake agent that would work up these interests. For particulars of these departments we refer you to the reports of their secretaries.

PATRONS' COMMERCIAL AGENCIES. When our Order first came into existence the most sanguine hopes were entertained, the mass of our people supposed the work was ac-complished. But they were doomed to disappointment. You are all familiar with the sys tem of business then adopted. A set of agents stationed at various commercial points, without money or other support, and then expected to receive orders for merchandise and to fill the same by purchase. The result is well known. This subject has occupied much more of our time than any other subject to perfect a general plan that would work evenly and successfully. At the April meeting it again came up for consideration, and in view of the past and to provide more effectually for the future, a form of constitution was agreed upon for a Patron's commercial agency. It was then recommended that the Patrons of each county or district, or locality, as might best serve their commercial wants, taking into consideration their facilities for transportation, should organize a joint stock association and have the same duly incorporated with a paid up stock sufficient to transact the business of the locality. The corporate name of each of such organizations to be "The Patrons Commmercial - county or district.

Agency" ot -The class of business to be transacted by hese agencies would be at their own discre tion, as a board of directors in each agency would have the sole control of the business.

It was intended by us that the business of such agency should uttimately embrace the disposal of such products as Patrons might have for sale, for the greatest possible sum of money, and the purchase, for the least possible cost, of such articles as they might need.

The responsibility of such agencies is limited to their own business transactions, it being a separate and distinct corporation, although o similar in name.

The object to be obtained by the similarity of name in the local agencies being to enable a general agent to more successfully bulk their purchases and sales, thus obtaining in commer cial transactions all the advantages to be had by the influence of all. In other words, virtually making us one, when to our interests to so act in purchases and sales, and yet entirely separate one from the other in responsibility. Such is a brief outline of the system of agencies that we have sought to place in operation, and we are pleased to-day to say to you, with many assurances of success.

Yet we regret to say, thus far, only a few counties have embraced the opportunities presented to them, and placed their agencies or sound financial basis and in working order while many others have conducted their business under the old plans, but have commercial agencies now in process of organization.

So far as we have been able to learn under existing circumstances, all the agencies in operation have transacted a very satisfactory business, but we are not in possession of reports of busines transacted by the various commercial agencies, and would respectfully suggest that their agents present be invited to nake such statements of their busines as they may deem proper.

STATE AGENCY.

The conduct and management of this office has been a cause of much solicitude to us, and and after a trial upon the plan adopted find that with only a partial support by the membership, and no capital at our command, and but a small amount of money in the hands of the county agencies, the results have not been satisfactory.

In hopes of infusing new life we suggest the following new plan of conducting a State of general agency:

That the several commercial agencies unite and form a consolidated agency, each subscribing so much stock to this general agency, making sufficient funds for the purchase of such articles, in car load lots, as the board of directors or managers may think advisable, each county or district agency designating some person to east the stock vote of the county agency, in the selection of a board of direct ors, said board, when elected, to select the agent or general manager, his term of office limited to good behavior or ability to perform the duties required. The details: The acceptance or rejection lies in your hands. We earnestly ask that you give the subject careful consideration, but allow us to urge that you take some positive action looking towards accumulation of capital for these objects. We believe it would result in a great saving to our members if some one well posted was kept continually in the field giving instruction as to the manner of organizing and the entire details of this important arm of our Order. We call attention to the report of our State agent for further informa

The Household.

A WORD TO HUSBANDS. -- If the wife attends to the daily duties of cooking, washing, and mending the clothes for the family, and taking care of the children, and spending her hours for the mutual good and comfort of the family, while you are in the field earning money, every dollar which you earn belongs not to you but to both of you. Fifty cents of every dollar you earn belongs to your wife; then why not give her credit for it. She is your equal partner and you know it. What if you are rich and have servants, and your wife superintends the household duties, and receives and entertains your friends while you are in the field, or counting room, wearying your brain for money, fifty cents of every dollar so earned belongs to the wife, as a compensation for her time and labor in making your home attract ive, comfortable and happy. What if you do spend a few hours every day in the field or counting room, does she no spend as many in devising means to make you comfortable in her presence, so that you may receive compliments for your taste in selecting a wife? The mere fact that you receive all of the money which comes from your mutual labor, does not entitle you to all of it. What man among you is willing to work for his board? This is what some want their wives o do. It is wrong. If your wife owns a cow, a horse, or any other property, and you sell it, give her every cent you sold it for-not one tenth, and that reductantly, but do it cheerfully If she sends butter, eggs, &c., to market by you, get her just what she sent for, or bring her back the money. Treat her honestly and respectfully, and she will return the favor. What would you think should you call at the bank for your money, if the cashier would say What do you want with it? Won't five dollars do? Hadn't you better let me get it for

Now don't ask the wife such questions, when you cannot bear to have such restrictions placed upon yourself. Give your wife her rights in this respect, as well as in all others.— McRuff, in Ruff World.

Coles Co., Ill., Dec. 14, '75.

Hygienic Hints.

For foul breath, eat a piece of burnt crust ecasionally.

To cure chapped hands, rub gold cream or hem before going In order to cure corns, lay a piece of raw fat pork upon them. The corn will disappear in a ew days. To restore the appetite, take half a pound of valarian root and make tea of it. Take a wine glassful at night, on going to bed.

Pads and supporters are pernicious, and worse than useless, because they teach the system to rely on them, and cannot support one part of the body without causing an unnatural strain on some other part, and, to that extent, tend to disease that part.

An eminent physician of Chicago, says he cures ninety-nine cases out of every one hundred cases of scarlet tever, by giving the patient warm lemonade with gum arabic dissolv ed in it. A cloth wrung out in hot water and laid upon the stomach, should be removed as rapidly as it becomes cool.

A correspondent of the New York Farmers Club gives an instance in which a woman's arm was swelled to an enormous size and painfully inflamed. A poultice was made of stewed pumpkins, which was renewed every fifteen minutes, and in a short time produced a perfeet cure. The fever drawa out by the poultices made them extremely offensive, as they were drawn off. A child's bed should slope a little from the head to the foot, so that the head may be a little higher than the feet-but never bend the neck to get the head on a pillow. This makes the child round-shouldered, cramps the veins and arteries, and interferes with the free circulation of the blood. Even when the child is several years old the pillow should be thin, and made of hair, not feathers.

The Hog Crop.

According to the most comprehensive report we have seen, the slaughter of hogs at the different markets of the West, as compared with those of last year up to date, there is a falling off of nearly 900,000 head, Last year the number slaughtered was 2,800,000; this year 1,000,000. Commercial papers say this is because packers are unwilling to take the crop at present' and carry the product through the spring and summer, with the present financial un-certainties. This may have something to do with it, but it is well for them to know that there is a great falling off in the number of hogs, for the losses by cholera have been really enormous, running up to the hundreds of thousands. Again, the weather has been warm for the time of year, and farmers could make pork fast enough to warrenta longer feeding season than usual. As long as hogs are gaining sufficient in weight to furnish a good price for the corn erop, farmers will continue to feed, especially when they believe that prices must rise instead of fall. Corn is not of first quality over a large portion of the West, and it is better to feed it than to let it heat in bins or go to market as rejected.—Prairie Farmer.

Bluemont Farmer's Club.

The Bluemont Farmer's Club met persuant to published call, Monday evening, Dec. 27, 1875, the President in the chair. Some fifteen members were present.

The Secretary being called upon, read the following on the "Benefits of Mulch as Applied to Winter Wheat:"

"Some four years ago, in one portion of my wheat field, was a large pile or stack of straw. During the fall and earlier parts of winter much of this straw was strewn of the winds over that part of the field or plat contiguous to the stack to a depth of three or four inches. The spring and early part of the summer following proved to be dry, and the natural consequence was that the wheat crop generally was light—averaging not eight or ten bushels per

At harvesting a very marked contrast was to be seen between the por-tion of the field providentialy mulched as above stated, and that not so treated. The judgment of both reaper and binders was, that the straw covered por-tion would afford a yield of more than tion would afford a yield of more than twenty bushels per acre, while the better for such a purpose than the side twenty bushels per acre, while the better for such a purpose than the side of a log. Bones are usually cast out of the back door, or on a garbage barrel to with large and well filled heads; where not, it was short and thin, having small and imperfect heads with more or less shrunken grains. The whole averaged seventeen bushels per acre.

In each succeeding year I have treated small areas of my winter wheat to a moderate coating of coarse stable manure or barnyard litter, with marked benefits to the parts thus treated, whether the season proved dry or otherwise. In every case the vield has been better for it, both as to quality and quanityenough so as I judged to justify the ad-posed portion of a piece of wheat, of a rather tender varity; and, therefore, somewhat subject to winter killing. mulched in December and January with both stable manure and the refuse of the feed lot and straw pile, at the rate of twenty-five two horse loads to the acre, covering the ground so as to completely hide the grain, inasmuch that several persons whose attention was called to it in the later part of the winter thought it would certainly be smoth ered and killed; while I, myself, was not wholly without some fears as to the result. About the last of March these fears were happily dispelled in finding the mulched portion of the field a beau-tiful green sward, while the rest of the field had hardly started into life. At harvest time, the twenty-third of June, this portion of the field had more than ter. He seemed to want to urinate bad fulfilled its early promise. The grain was thick and tall, with bright golden straw, bearing large and well filled ears. Harvesting and threshing this part sep-arately, it was found to give a yield of thirty bushels per acre, while the rest of the field averaged less than half as much per acre. Counting three days labor of man and team as necessary to the mulching of an acre, we have a clear profit in this instance of five dollars a day for la-bor bestowed. Still one need not expect such a result in every instance, since the failure on the part of the other portion of the field was largely due to its being of the field was largely due to its being winter killed, else the disparity in the average yield and quality would doubtless have been far less.

So firm is my faith in the benefits to be derived from mulching winter wheat, that I am now treating a larger area than ever before, after the above maner, using for this purpose the refuse litter of the barnyard, feed lot, straw pile or ought else that comes to hand that will answer the purpose, and reserving the stronger manures for the cornfield. Since I find a mulching of straw &c., answers as good a purpose, in case of the wheat as the richer manures. In good strong soil it is the protection thus afforded from the effects of the winter winds, the possible drouth of spring, and the heat of early summer, that is needed, rather than a fertilizer. Nevertheless, should the soil grain, the ground so mulched will be another crop, whether of wheat or corn. In the above instance, being free from in a measure from the heat of the sun day twice as promising as any other portion of the same field. A slighter covering would, I think, answer the purpose just as well—say about sixteen loads to the acre, It should only be done while the ground is hard or compact. The best time is when frozen or covered with snow."

An animated discussion followed, in which Todd, Wells, Ward, Whitney, Winne, Marlatt, Bill and others participated. Many valuable and interesting facts and suggestions were drawn out showing that with good and careful culture, with the application of the means at hand, one need seldom if ever fail of a fair crop of either grain or vegetables. Club adjourned to next Monday evening, when the election of officers for the following year will take place. Subject for discussion, "Weeds."— Manhattan Nationalist.

Crushed Bones for Poultry.

As hens, turkeys, geese and ducks are not provided with incisor, canine nor molar teeth, it is folly to feed bones to them unless the hard substances are first reduced to small fragments. Fresh bones are a valuable feed for poultry of any sort, provided the fragments are so-small that the birds can swallow them. Once in the crop of a fowl, bits of bone will soon be changed into soft and palatable food. Our own practice is to have a dish in the kitchen specially to receive the bones that are purchased with the beefsteak, mutton and other meat. Then every day those pieces are taken to a chopping-block, and, with an old axe, having a sharp, cutting edge, they are crushed with the head of the axe and cut into pieces not larger than kernals of Indian corn. The fowls devour them with a ravenous appetite. Bones are worth more to feed fowls than are the same number of pounds of prime grain. For a chop-ping block, a small log about two feet long, with square ends, is placed on one end, and as the end of a block is far feed worthless dogs. But if prepared for fowls as suggested, every pound is worth two or three cents, which will be returned generously in the form of luscious eggs and juicy meat for the table.—N. Y. Herald.

Controlling Bulls.

Without a ring a bull is unmanage-able, unless there is some contrivance which can hobble his actions, and I know of none such. Were one obliged to incur the trouble of forwarding a full grown bull unused to be handled, what would be the best aids to pro-vide? I think to provide a strong enough so as I judged to justify the auditional outlay of labor in its treatment. One year ago I determined to make a practicle test in the matter, and carefully note the result. To that end I selected the least promising and most explected the least promising and most explain the least promise and the least promise the least promise and t then allowed to trail on the ground behind, one or either side, would be advisable headgear; and what besides? The herdsman's staff should not be of the ordinary form, that is, opening with a snap; but it should have a screw passed torough both sides of the loop it the top, so as to prevent the possibility of the snap opening, and allowing the ring to escape from the grasp of the staff.—Ex.

I have founded my business on the belief that the public are anxious to get their seed directly from the grower, and I therefore offer Freet to every man and woman in the United States who cultivates a farm, tills a vegetable garden, or plants a flower garden, my large, Illustrated Catalogue of Vegetable and Flower Seeds for 1876; it contains, in addition to the choicest kinds produced in Europe, one hundred and fifty varieties of vegetable seed grown on my four seed farms. Customers of last season need not write for it. As the original introducer of the Hubbard, Marblehead and Butman Squashes, Phinney's Melon, the Marblehead Cabbages, and a score of other new vegetables, I solicit your patronage. All seed sold under three warrants. A hundred thousand catalogues will be issued and sent out the first of January.
