

Illinois Talks Of Serious Limits On Fertilizers

Barry Commoner has drawn up an elaborate program to restore the ecological balance of the Corn Belt, curtail nitrate pollution in Illinois waters, and end the farmer's dependence on chemical fertilizers.

The Illinois Pollution Control Board, he said, can set this program into motion by adopting unprecedented regulations on the use of fertilizers on crop land.

"What happens in Illinois will be the bellwether for the nation," the ecologist said.

He said the natural nitrogen cycle has been broken in corn and soybean growing areas, resulting in the gradual depletion of nitrogen in the soil and a sharp increase in nitrate levels in surface waters.

Daniel Kohl, Commoner's research associate at Washington University's Center for Biology of Natural Systems at St. Louis, said a minimum of 55 percent of the nitrates in Lake Decatur came from fertilizer spread on cornland in the watershed.

He warned of the health threat of elevated nitrate levels to infants and mothers.

Commoner emphasized that the proposed Illinois limits are not strict enough to require any change in fertilizer practices or to have any ecological impact.

However, he said, the regulations would "call a halt for the first time" to the rapid postwar rise in fertilizer use.

Eventually, the limits on the use of chemical fertilizer can be lowered, Commoner said. However, this would cause crop yields to drop, fertilizer to slump, and food prices to rise.

"In my view neither the farmer nor the consumer — especially the poor — should bear this burden," he said.

"The fertilizer industry is the chief beneficiary of present fertilizer practices and therefore is economically best able to meet the costs of the ecologically required changes."

Commoner's save-the-farm program includes:

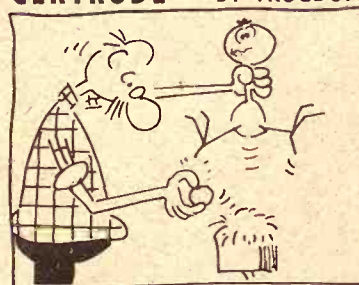

- Creating an "inverted" soil bank whereby the farmer would be compensated for tilling more acreage to make up for smaller yields that would come with organic farming and crop rotation.

- Using organic wastes such as sewage sludge, instead of chemical fertilizers.

- Subsidizing pipelines and other transport systems for bringing the organic wastes from Chicago, St. Louis, and other metropolitan areas to the farms.

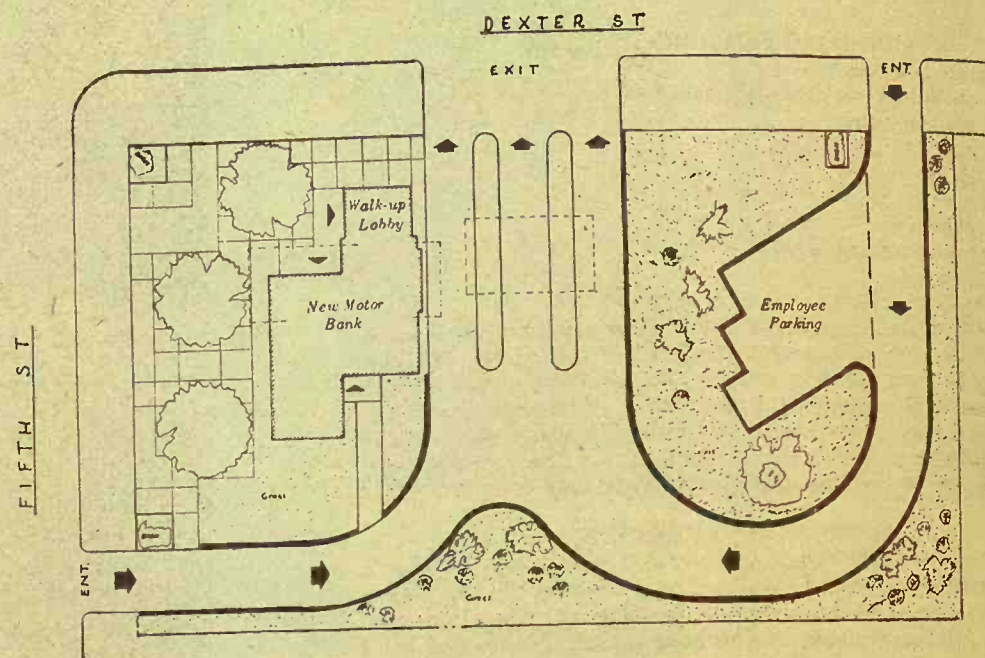

The fertilizer industry would be severely dislocated, he conceded, saying "But after all, there is a law in ecology that 'there is no such thing as a free lunch.'"

Mrs. Ted Doyle, Route 4 Manhattanite, Is Winner--

This week's winner is Mrs. Ted Doyle, R 4, Tuttle Terrace, Manhattan, who writes: "Here's a really delicious holiday dessert—not too pumpkiny—just right."

HOLIDAY DESSERT

For the crust:

- 1/2 cup flaked coconut
- 1/2 cup pecans
- 1/2 cup soft butter or oleo
- 1/4 cup brown sugar
- 1 cup flour

For the filling:

- 3/4 cup canned pumpkin
- 1/2 cup chopped pecans

For the crust: Chop together flaked coconut and pecans and combine them with soft butter, sugar and flour. Press the rest into a 9-inch pie pan and chill. For the filling: Combine canned pumpkin, chopped pecans, brown sugar, cinnamon, ginger, salt and slightly softened vanilla ice cream. Stir rapidly to blend. Spoon into the pie shell and sprinkle the 1/2 cup of crust crumbs on top. Store in freezer until serving. Thaw slightly for ease in cutting. A whipped cream border may be added.

NO BAKE FRUIT CAKE

- 3 cups of pecan nuts (2 pounds unshelled)
- 1 pound graham crackers crushed (5 cups)
- 1 15 ounce box seedless raisins, wash and drain
- 1 cup diced mixed preserved fruit
- 1 8-ounce jar maraschino cherries, drained
- 16 marshmallows, cut in pieces

- 1 envelope unflavored gelatin
- one-third cup orange juice
- 1/4 cup granulated sugar
- two-thirds cup light molasses
- 1 teaspoon vanilla
- 1/4 teaspoon nutmeg
- 1/4 teaspoon cinnamon
- 1/4 teaspoon cloves
- 1/8 teaspoon allspice
- 1/8 teaspoon ginger

A week or so ahead of serving time, line 10x5x5 loaf pan with 2 thicknesses of wax paper, extending paper 3-inches above rim. In large mixing bowl combine first six ingredients, soften gelatin in orange juice and dissolve over hot water. Stir in sugar until dissolved. In large mixing bowl combine gelatin mixture with molasses, vanilla, orange juice and spices, beat at high speed for 15 minutes. Add to nut mixture, blending thoroughly; press down into pan with hands. Garnish with cherries and nuts. Fold wax paper over it; refrigerate over night; unmold and wrap in foil to mellow. Stores 1 month in refrigerator or can be frozen. We do not like fruit peel so I use preserved cherries and pineapple instead of the mixed fruit.

After testing a batch of the finalists' recipes, your editor's kitchen looked much as it did after the 1966 tornado blew it asunder.

++++++
Sixteen-month old Derek got into the act—he discovered the refrigerator door open and grabbed a handful of blueberry topping from one of the entries. By the time we got to him he looked good enough to eat.

++++++
Thanks, too, for the many words of praise for Grass & Grain. G&G is apt to swell with pride and burst her, his or its (whatever the gender of a newspaper is) cover page. Again, thanks.

++++++
And now your editor will stow away her pots and pans, let her typewriter cool down and close by saying, "A very Merry Christmas to each and everyone of you from the Macy family!"

++++++

And may Santa bring a houseful of happiness.

Yule Tree Dates Back To Pagan Spirit Worship

Symbolizing the universal spirit of Yuletide, the Christmas tree dates back to pagan spirit worship.

Each winter, tribesmen in the Black Forest of Germany cut down oak trees and took them into their homes in honor of Odin, a god whose spirit was believed to live in the oak.

In the Eighth Century, St. Boniface, an English missionary in Germany, urged the replacement of the oak by the fir tree in honor of the Christ Child.

Although early Christians banned greenery because of its association with pagans, charming legends soon arose around the fir tree.

In one tale, all the trees brought gifts to the Christ Child in honor of His birth. The olive tree and the fig tree gave their fruit, the palm its dates, and so on, but the lowly fir tree had nothing to give. An angel took pity on the small tree and asked stars to rest in its branches. The Infant was so delighted with the tiny fir that He reached out and blessed it. Since that time, it has remained "ever green" and has borne star-like lights on Christmas.

Martin Luther was most likely the first person to light a tree with candles for his children. One of the earliest literary mentions of a decorated Christmas tree comes from Strassburg, Germany, in 1605 and tells of its being laden with roses, apples, gingerbread men, and sugar cubes.

Tin horns, bells and drums were added to Christmas tree decorations. Originally, in pagan worship, the noisemakers were believed to ward off evil spirits.

An old, old story from the Ukraine tells how tinsel came to decorate the tree. A poor widow had a tree but could not afford any decorations. During the night a spider spun a web over the whole tree and moonlight turned it to silver.

Decrease Basting

Keep your basting to a minimum by doing a lot of pinning. In general, pin at right angles to the direction of your stitches. Pin everything you can before you begin to sew; remove pins as you sew.

Camouflage Marks

Stains, tears, uneven stitching, and the marks left when hems are let down can be camouflaged.

Here are some of the ways: Appliques will cover stains on and rips in fabric. Marking pens in the same color as the original fabric can blend in faded or stained areas. When using contrasting colors, draw designs over the areas.

Old hemline marks that refuse to disappear can be hidden under rows of braid, rickrack, ribbon lace, or other trim.

Stops Sliding

Attach a rubber suction cup to the floor-pedal box of a portable electric sewing machine to prevent the box from sliding around on a smooth-surface floor.

Furniture Covers

Old shower curtains can be used to cover outdoor furniture or a grill during the cold, winter months.

No Skidding

Keep that worn rubber drain mat or dish-drain mat, and place it under a small scatter rug that does not have a protective backing. It will keep it from skidding.

Homemade Decorations Will Amuse Entire Family

Remember how you used to do it at Christmas, when everything did not come ready made and you made the decorations for the holidays?

The old-fashioned fun can be revived for the children now with a basic dough that can be used to create attractive centerpieces, candle holders, tree trimmings, wreaths, and even gifts.

Besides imagination, you need 4 cups of flour, 1 cup of high quality table salt, and 1½ cups of water. Mix these ingredients well with your fingers, adding more water if it's too stiff.

Now put everybody to work making original sculptures. For help, you might collect cookie cutters, a knife, fork, spoon, rolling pin, toothpick and other implements. Form larger pieces around wire skeletons or other supports. Paper clips or hairpins make excellent hangers.

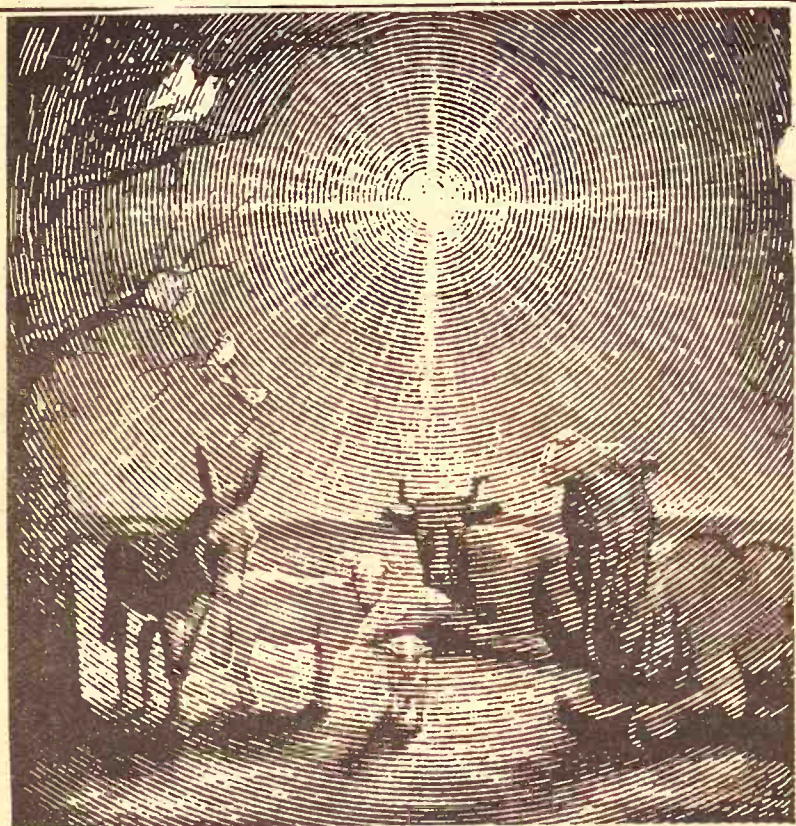

Bake the finished work at 350 degrees for at least one hour, testing for doneness with a toothpick. Allow time for cooling, and then everyone can pitch in on the decorating. Use watercolors, poster paints, food colorings, or felt-tipped pens. For finishing touches, use small fruits, nuts, berries, candles, buttons, glitter, yarn, ribbon, or bits of felt.

This kitchen sculpturing is a great way to amuse the children when they are weathered in or under the weather. They will create for hours.

Step Saver

Pile a small tea cart or utility table high with soaps, cleansers, wax, rags, and so forth when you are cleaning and roll it from room to room as you work. It saves steps and time.

Tighter ASCS Checks On Program Compliance

Government watchdogs are sniffing closely to see whether farmers are complying with federal rules built into Agriculture Department crop programs for feed grain, cotton and wheat.

Besides samplings by the Agriculture Stabilization and Conservation Service, the agency which handles the programs, further checks are being made by the Office of Inspector General in USDA and by the General Accounting Office, an investigatory arm of Congress.

The ASCS announced a month ago a farm-by-farm check of program compliance in three counties to see if farmers were idling average quality land in return for government price support and "set-aside" payments. Those counties were: Kern County, California, Twiggs County, Georgia, and Woodbury County, Iowa.

In addition, the GAO is conducting a cross-section check of farms nationally to see how the $55,000 payment lid worked in 1971, the first year of operation, and to what extent oversize farms may have been split up into smaller units to evade the law. That report is not expected to be completed before next April 1.

One of the main focuses is on Kern County, California, which has some of the nation's wealthiest farms. It also is home base for Kenneth E. Frick, administrator of ASCS, the agency which handles the subsidy programs. Frick's holdings, now held in trust and operated by his brother, are included in the Kern County investigations.

Charles M. Cox, an assistant deputy administrator in ASCS, told newsmen investigators turned up 46 farmers in Kern County where alleged set-aside land violations have occurred. There were 1,190 farms in the county, he said. The Frick holdings were among those "challenged" by USDA's own investigators on the basis of land taken from production not being of comparable quality to land used to grow crops, in this case cotton.

When it is proved a farmer has set aside lower-quality land, the USDA can reduce his payments proportionately.

No final disposition has been made in Kern County, and investigators from the Office of the Inspector General in USDA are looking into the situation further. Settlements have been made in the other two counties, however.

In Woodbury County, Iowa, some 800 farms were checked with the result of 12 having payments reduced for not meeting the set-aside requirements, and one had its payments canceled. After checking 189 farms in Twiggs County, Georgia, 13 farmers had payments cut because of not meeting the set-aside rule.

Can't See The Stars For The Night Light

MANHATTAN—A huge light over the Kansas State University union parking lot is interfering with the operation of the observatory on the opposite side of the campus.

John Evans, assistant physics professor, explained that a telescope must be able to focus on faint and distant stars, but the reflected light from the parking lot, as well as other lights on campus, have made such sightings impossible.

The 12-kilowatt light attached to a 130-foot pole was erected as a safety feature last month. It can be seen shining above much of Manhattan's skyline at night.

Case Bonebreak, physical plant administrator, said the decision to put in the light was not made without consideration. He said an observatory is not of any real value in a populated area because of the heavy concentration of light.

Bonebreak said it would have been twice as expensive to put lights on the ground in the parking lot, "and you'd still have just as much reflection."

Grass & Grain

11

December 21, 1971

Alternatives for the observatory are limited.

"If I could do what I want, I'd move the whole observatory far out of town," Evans said. "It would need to be several miles away so future development wouldn't catch up."

Q and A

ON WHAT BASIS IS CASH RENT FOR FARMLAND FIGURED?

Cash renting seems to be increasing in interest as a means of securing the use of farmland. The proportion of leases for cash is still relatively small. Working out a lease which is fair to the landowner and the renter is important, whether on a crop-share or cash lease basis.

The simplest way to work out a fair cash lease for the landlord is to determine what represents a fair return on investment, then adding other costs to determine the total. The problem is (1) to arrive at a fair value for the investment, and (2) to agree on the fair rate of return on this quality investment.

For example, it may be agreed that a 100 acre tract of farmland is worth $20,000 and that a fair return to this investment is 4 percent. If $3 per acre taxes are the only costs to the landowner, then 4 percent x $20,000 equals $800, plus $300 equals $1,100 cash rent or $11 per acre.

The renter wishing to determine the reasonableness of this may check what the land will produce and what the usual share arrangement for this type of land may be. Perhaps this land ordinarily produces about $4,500 worth of crops; the landowner ordinarily pays about $500 for his share of fertilizer and other shared expenses, and he would receive one-third crop-share rent in a typical crop share lease for the area.

Then this $11 cash rent would be about equal to the typical crop share leasing arrangement. Ordinarily the owner would receive $16 per acre after having contributed $5 per acre in shared operating expenses.

Advantage to the landlord for use of the cash lease is that he avoids the risks of bad weather, the uncertainties of price changes, and the problem of sharing in some of the production expenses, such as the cost of fertilizer.

Typical fair cash leases may provide slightly less return to the owner than share leases because the operator is providing more of the production expenses and taking much more of the risk.—Wilton B. Thomas, Extension economist, farm management, Kansas State University.

Feeders Could Get Capital By Leasing Out

Former Gov. Norbert Tiemann, who now heads the Coalition for Rural America, has proposed that cattle feeders consider leasing their cattle to high income groups looking for tax deductions in order to provide the feeder with more working capital.

Tiemann delivered his address by telephone to some 125 persons attending a Beef Cattle Feeding Conference at Northern Platt, after weather conditions made it impossible for him to fly from Lincoln.

Tiemann said by purchasing or leasing cattle persons faced with income tax problems at the end of the year could take a "tax loss" delaying their profit for another year. When cattle are sold they can then buy more cattle or go out and invest in something else, such as gas and oil wells.

Grass & Grain

December 21, 1971

Tiemann said leasing of cattle to someone seeking a tax deduction provides the cattleman with an opportunity to expand his operation. Under an agreement with the purchaser the cattleman remains in charge and can utilize his resources in caring for them.

Partial Clamp On Growth Of School Budgets

Increases in general operating expenses of 311 unified school districts in the state have been reduced by more than 50 per cent the past two years as a result of the tax lid law, a report issued by the Kansas State Dept. of Education shows.

Over-all, state budgets increased approximately 10.27 per cent during the 1969-70 school year, compared to a 5.32 percent increase in 1970-71; and 4.20 percent in 1971-72.

Transfers of territory and the closing of nonpublic schools have resulted in high cost increases in the general fund budgets of some districts. Enrollment increases and decreases have also had an effect on the budgets, Dale Dennis, director of statistical services, said.

Twenty-three districts with 2.5 per cent of the state's students had more than a 5 per cent increase in their operating budgets this fall. But 92 per cent of the districts kept their budgets under the 5 per cent statutory limit.

Crop Improvement Assn. Sets Jan. 28 For Meeting

The annual meeting of the Kansas Crop Improvement Association (KCIA) will be held Friday, Jan. 28, in the Student Union at Kansas State University.

Bob Bratcher, KCIA secretary, reports that the educational program will benefit all persons interested in the Kansas seed industry.

Highlight of the program will be a presentation by Valley Falls farmer-seedsman John Hamon about his two years of work at the KSU agricultural production project in India.

Three KSU agronomists will assist with the program.

Dr. Elmer Heyne will discuss tritacale production in Kansas. Ted Walters will describe new crop varieties suited for Kansas and Carl Overley will discuss the foundation seed program and plant variety protection.

Kenneth Boughton, director of marketing for the Kansas State Board of Agriculture, will have a session on marketing of agricultural products.

Three new directors for the association will be elected and a premier seed grower will be honored. A noon luncheon will be provided.

To Oppose New Rail Charge To Test Grain

The U.S. Dept. of Agriculture has agreed to support a move to overturn a ruling which would allow railroads to impose an added charge for stopping grain cars so samples can be taken for testing purposes, Rep. Bill Roy, D-Kan., says.

Roy said an Interstate Commerce

Commission ruling, which would allow railroads to impose a $16-per-car charge for stopping a car to take samples for testing purposes, has been challenged in a suit filed against the ICC by the Wichita Board of Trade, the Kansas Corporation Commission and others.

"I requested that the Dept. of Agriculture intervene in this matter because the one who would be hurt by this inspection charge is the farmer," Roy said.

"The cost of the inspection, approximately one cent per bushel, will be passed on to him. In addition, there will be fewer market outlets for grain because of the change in the practice of inspecting grain at a terminal market."

Moxley Sale
Near $67,000

COUNCIL GROVE—The annual Hereford production sale of J. J. Moxley & Sons grossed nearly $67,000, with 93½ bulls averaging $716.

The bulls had been run on grass all summer and were in range conditions.

The top sale was a half-interest, half-possession transaction for $3000 to Mason Crocker of Matfield Green, for a 2-year old bull, MX Tex Onward 24.

Crocker also paid $1050 for HM Real Mischief 41, a February 1970 bull.

Piel Brothers of Belvue paid $1125 for a 3-year old bull as well as $1100 for a 2-year old herd bull and $1000 for another.

One of the volume buyers of the sale was Spring Creek Ranch of Cottonwood Falls which paid $1000 for its top purchase and $800 to $900 for 13 other sons of MH Tex Onward 24.

Other buyers in the $1000 area were Leroy Feckner of Alta Vista and Curtis Steward of Lawrence.

John Burr of Council Grove was a volume buyer, topping at $985. KAMA, Manhattan; MKO Ranch, Grenola; and Mason Crocker of Matfield Green were other volume buyers.

Pratt Rustling Case Ends In Guilty Decision

A cattle rustling case has been settled in U.S. District Court in Wichita, with a guilty verdict against Clifford T. Henderson, 22, of Commerce City, Colo.

Henderson was charged with bringing 12 stolen cattle from Bent County, Colorado, to Pratt, Kansas, last April and selling them for $1200.

Sentence was deferred by Judge Frank Theis, pending an investigation into Henderson's background. Henderson is free on $2500 bond.

Takes Complaint
To Control
Hunter-Trespasser

An example of what action a landowner can take to curb hunter use of his land without permission was exhibited recently in northeast

Kansas.

Game protector Dick McCullough, Troy, said a Brown County farmer had been having trouble with trespassers for several years before he signed a complaint against two Missouri residents. The farmer took note of the hunters' car license and called sheriff's officers.

Brown County Judge Dee He assessed fines and costs totaling $537.90. Each hunter was sentenced a 30-day jail term, suspended upon payment of the fine.

The farmer was not identified. Few hunter-trespassers are prosecuted, McCullough says, because landowners hesitate to sign a complaint.

Runs at livestock auctions are usually rather light in December. Chances are good that a holiday conflict or bad weather may wipe out one sale during the month. And farmers are often busy with Christmas preparation and not inclined to fight cattle or hog-loading during cold weather.

Still, a suddenly bright day often brings out surprising large sales at G&G area auctions. Many of the consignments are singles or small loads from a farmer who wants just a few bucks for Christmas spending or late-year expenses. In some cases a stockman who surveyed his tax prospects and decided that December is a better time to sell than after the first of the year.

Whatever the reasons, the sales go on at year-end. These pictures were taken at G&G area sale barns in the weeks just before Christmas.

Six steers, one cow, and a bull made up a load for James Wilder. Wilder farms near Clay Center. The cattle were his fathers.

Lyle Alderson brought a load of cattle to a G&G area sale. He farms near Oak Hill and does commercial trucking. He has a herd of 140 cows and calves.

Court Ruling Should Free Protested Taxes

A lawsuit which had held up the payment of taxes of Northern Natural Gas Co. in several G&G area counties has been reviewed by the Kansas Supreme Court, and the high court has ruled that a tax value of $67.5 million on company property in 26 counties was not "grossly excessive."

The tax value had been placed on the utility's property by the Kansas property valuation director and upheld by the State Board of Tax Appeals.

Northern Natural had protested its taxes and the amounts were placed in escrow pending the lawsuit. The amounts held up were sizable in some G&G area counties such as Clay and Washington.

The particular case that reached the Supreme Court came from Pawnee county.

The state property valuation director had placed an appraised value of $225 million on Northern Natural property in the state. The company figured the value was a little more than half that.

Postal Service Sees A Glimmer Of Black Ink

Heading into its season of high error, the Christmas mailing surge, the postoffice has been operating in the black for practically the only time since the first U.S. postman started on his appointed round.

If you refuse to believe that statement no one is going to argue with you. Because it is true that the Postal Service is still drawing about a billion a year from the U.S. Treasury to balance its books. What the proud fathers of the new, independent business-like U.S. Postal Service mean when they claim to have been in the black is that current revenues were meeting current expenses. At least in October, and maybe in November.

However you take it, the Postal Service has accomplished something. In the past, all there was out of the old Postoffice Department was news of an ever widening pool of red ink, and warnings of higher postal rates.

Not that stamps won't cost even more. Another increase in first class mail rates will be forthcoming next year in all probability. Just what the increase amounts to will depend in part on what the Postal Service does with some new concepts about air mail and surface mail. The chances are that a letter dispatched to a distant city will go air mail even if the 8-cent surface mail stamp is on it. The new postal people are talking about doing away with the air mail classification.

You'd put an 11-cent stamp (or probably a new 12-cent stamp next year) on any letter, local or distant, that you hoped to see delivered in a hurry. If you didn't much care whether the letter got there Tuesday or Thursday you'd use the 8-cent stamp.

This, together with possible changes in the present system of classifying letter mail would not only increase revenues but it would simplify the task of handling the mail. And that's crucial to the plans to automatic mail handling. When Congress set up the new Postal Service (officially the change was effective last July), a stated objective was to progressively reduce the amount of taxpayer money going to support of the postal system.

The only way that's ever going to be done, the authorities say, is to put computer, optical scanners, code readers and other machines to work instead of people. One system now in use sorts 42,000 letters an hour versus a normal manual rate of 1,000. For better or worse, the Postal Service has dumped 13,000 people this year. But that still leaves the service's employment at 728,911 (June, 1971).

The machines cost money, of course. At the moment, the Postal Service, in its new form, is out to raise $250 million from the public to finance the development of automated systems, new buildings and other improvements. Sometime next year a group of underwriters, led by some of the biggest names in Wall Street (Salomon Brothers, Dillon Read, Merrill Lynch, Morgan Guaranty, Kidder Peabody) will offer $250 million in Postal Service bonds.

The preliminary prospectus offers some interesting information on the mail system. For instance:

There are 32,000 postoffices, they handled 86.5 billion pieces of mail last year, and the budget for the system was $9 billion. The deficit of $2.2 billion was made up by the Treasury. That's double the deficit as little as five years ago when it cost $6.1 billion to run the system. More than 83 per cent of the $98 billion went to wages, salaries and other employee benefits.

The government has owned only about 9 per cent of all its postoffices and facilities. The rest are rented.

The new service thinks this is costly and means to own most of the new buildings it puts up.

The service is now 95 per cent confident that it can make next-day delivery of air mail deposited in air-mail-only boxes to cities within a 600-mile radius and two-day delivery to almost any city.

It'll cost $950 million to complete the national bulk mail network (21 automated centers, 12 satellite plants) planned to speed the handling of packages, magazines, catalogues, etc. But when the system is fully operating in 1975, it should save $300 million a year. (The first center is now under construction in New Jersey. The second is scheduled for Chicago in 1973.)

Ag Graduates Find Job Market

Despite the softening of the nation's job market generally, the demand for agricultural college graduates is strong, particularly in agri-business fields, university officials say.

This is being reflected in enrollments in the College of Agriculture at Kansas State University, explained the college's dean Carroll V. Hess.

The picture at K-State is similar to the national scene, according to an annual summary prepared for the National Association of State Universities and Land-Grant Colleges, which shows an increase of 8.6 per cent in the number of undergraduate students enrolling in agriculture during the 1971 fall term.

At the same time, K-State noted a 13 per cent increase compared with the national figure.

"I like to think it's the good reputation of the College of Agriculture that caused the increase," Dean Hess said with a chuckle.

But he said the softer job market in other professional areas relative to agriculture has persuaded some high school graduates to "head into agriculture instead of other professions."

The strongest demand for these college graduates is in the agri-business field, off the farm, in such fields as fertilizer, feed, machinery and equipment sales, food processing and distribution. These areas account for 50 per cent of agriculture college graduates, Hess said.

The percentage of ag graduates going back to the farm is remaining about the same in Kansas, he said, running between 17 and 18 per cent annually. Some of these graduates go back home to become partners in a family farming enterprise, others become ranch or farm managers.

"Very few become owners of their own farms because the costs (of buying and equipping farm enterprises) are prohibitive," Dean Hess related.

This year the College of Agriculture enrollment hit nearly 1,500 undergraduates, up about 200 from last year's 1,278.

Forty per cent of these new students are transfer students, mostly from Kansas junior colleges.

Nationally, agriculture enrollments have increased 68.6 per cent among the 70 members of the national association during the 1963 to 1971 period. Over the same period of time, K-State increased 116 per cent, Hess said.

K-State ranks 14th in the nation in the number of agricultural undergraduate students. Iowa State University continues to lead the nation in ag students with 2,912. Purdue is second (2,593); Cornell third (2,580); Ohio State fourth (2,450) and Texas A and M fifth (1,843).

The balance of the top 10, in order: Missouri, 1,766; Michigan, 1,732; Davis, Calif., 1,718; Minnesota, 1,649; and North Carolina, 1,648.

The biggest increases in enrollment during the past year came in Pennsylvania (No. 11), North Carolina (10), Michigan State University (No. 7), then Massachusetts and Virginia.

At KSU, Hess said the animal science department has the largest enrollment, with nearly 400 students; agri-business second with 160 students; followed by agronomy with nearly 110 students.

The largest increase of undergraduate enrollments at the university's College of Agriculture has occurred in the department of agriculture economics. Hess believes this reflects the increased job market for students with business and economic qualifications combined with an understanding of agriculture business. He expects this trend to continue.

Eighty-three per cent of K-State's agricultural graduates enter off-farm employment. Only half of those certified to teach go into agricultural teaching, choosing to enter another agriculture service field.

As federal and state programs get more and more closely involved in consumer protection, Hess sees a growing need for veterinarians in health protection.

"More veterinarians are choosing to go into government-related work rather than into large or small animal practices," Hess said.

Graduate enrollment in the College of Agriculture is down 2.8 per cent from last year. It is the first year graduate student numbers have dropped off since World War II, he said. The soft job market for Ph D's is behind the decline, he believes.

The largest number of graduate students is pursuing degrees in agriculture economics, followed by agronomy, agriculture education and animal science.

This reflects the national situation, in which the number of graduate agricultural students dropped nearly three per cent during the past year from the peak of 16,691 in 1970. This fall there were 16,277 graduate ag students.

At the graduate level, the largest U.S. enrollments are in agricultural economics (2,053), agronomy (2,021), agriculture education (1,511) and animal science (1,140).

"The rapid growth in undergraduate enrollment can be attributed to a growing demand for college-trained personnel in agricultural business and industry," says Dr. Louis M. Thompson, ISU associate dean of agriculture who prepared the annual summary for the NASULGC.

December 21, 1971

His research indicates that the starting salary for agricultural college graduates in the United States this year is $677 a month, or $8,100 annually.

"Despite the softening of the job market generally, the 1971 agricultural graduates had little difficulty in finding jobs," Dr. Thompson added.

Devaluation Puts Europe in Farm Trade Bargaining

Western Europe will increase farm prices 4 to 6 per cent after a multinational currency realignment, thereby reducing the competitive advantages to be gained by the United States from any dollar devaluation, Dr. Sicco Mansholt, the chief farm specialist on the Common Markets executive authority, predicts.

The United States has demanded a freeze of general price levels in the community, but Mansholt explained this would be impossible because of the reevaluation upward of European currencies, particularly the German mark, that would be part of any currency settlement.

German farmers would be getting lower marks for their grains and other products unless the common price level in the community moved up. Bonn has insisted that its farmers not suffer financially as a result of currency adjustments.

Mansholt told a group of American journalists of conversations he had had in Washington last month trying to relay the seriousness with which Bonn regarded farm problems to the American authorities.

A loss of the farm vote could endanger the life of the present coalition government of socialists under Chancellor Willy Brandt and the Free Democrats led by Foreign Minister Walter Scheel.

"It is politically impossible not to increase prices," Mansholt said, but he added that this message had apparently not gotten across in Washington.

Yet, if farm prices are raised in Europe, Congress may refuse to approve a devaluation of the dollar, as some of the export growth that would be expected, under normal conditions, to follow a devaluation would be checked. The Europeans have demanded that the dollar be reduced in value as part of a multilateral settlement. Ralf Dahrendorf, the Common Market's chief trade negotiator, said there was a possibility of some technical arrangements, which he declined to specify, being worked out as a compromise in the farm-price question.

But like Mansholt, Prof. Dahrendorf insisted that the United States should not expect the Common Market to make major trade sacrifices, especially since the United States already enjoyed a surplus, running at $2 billion a year, with the community. In terms of foreign trade alone, he said, the United States sells four to five times more to the community than it buys.

"Under these conditions, it is not easy to see why trading concessions should be put at our feet," Dahrendorf said.

Tax Angles At Stockmen's Convention

Four well-known tax authorities will appear on the Kansas Livestock Association's Annual Convention in Wichita. The convention will begin the evening of January 5 and end the evening of January 7 with the annual stockman's dinner and dance.

The tax symposium, scheduled for 2:30 p.m. on Friday January 7, was planned to highlight the highly talked about tax problem in Kansas. Symposium participants will include Kalo Hineman, Dighton, President-Elect of the KLA, as moderator; Dr. J. B. Kohlmeier, Purdue University, West Lafayette, Indiana, a well-known tax expert and accomplished public speaker; Representatives Raymond Vaughn, Burlington, Chairman of the Kansas House of Representatives Education Committee; and Rolland Parr, Rossville, Chairman of the KLA Tax Committee and a member of the Citizens Tax Review Commission headed by former Senator Frank Carlson.

Hineman is a farmer and rancher from Lane County and resides near Dighton. He has served the Kansas Livestock Association as chairman of both the Tax and Legislative Committees and a member of the Board of Directors. He was elected as President-Elect of the Association at its last convention in January of 1971. Hineman is expected to take the reins as president at the "72" January Convention.

Dr. J. B. Kohlmeier is Professor Emeritus at Purdue University in Indiana. Dr. Kohlmeier's title for the symposium will be an "Overview of Kansas Tax Issues." He is a graduate of Purdue and did graduate work at Purdue and Cornell Universities. Kohlmeier served on the staff at Purdue teaching and doing extension work. He was an Extension Specialist in Public Policy with particular interest in state and local government, education and economic policy. From 1959-1965 Kohlmeier served as Director of State Commission for the Reorganization of School Corporation. For ten years following graduation he was a semi-pro baseball pitcher and has always owned some topnotch bird dogs and enjoys quail and pheasant hunting.

Representative Vaughn, a stockman and auctioneer in Burlington, Kansas, is in his third term as a member of the Kansas House of Representatives. "A Legislator's Look at Tax Issues and School Finance" will be Vaughn's topic for the symposium. He owns and operates with H. V. Rockhill the Eureka Auction Sale and the Coffey County Community Sale. Vaughn is past president of the local school board, Lions Club and local Chamber of Commerce. As Chairman of the House Education Committee he has an opportunity to study school finance and tax problems in the state.

Rolland Parr was born and now lives near Rossville, Kansas where he and his brother-in-law, Bob Gentry, operate a corn and livestock farm. Parr graduated from Kansas State University in Agriculture Administration. He has been active in school affairs on the local and state level by being a board member of the Rossville High School, Shawnee County School Unification USD number 321 and has served on the KASB (Kansas Association School Boards) School Finance Committee.

This Tax and School Finance Symposium at the KLA Convention is building to be one of the big highlights of the Annual Meeting, stated Fred Germann, Dwight, President of the Association. He continued by saying that this part of the program is intended to be objective and provide our members and interested guests with the facts. Those attending the symposium will have an opportunity to ask questions of the panel of speakers. He said that the property tax problem is one of the biggest concerns of those interested in rural agricultural development in the state. Germann encouraged interested people to attend the Symposium and said that especially all stockmen in Kansas were invited to take part in this year's KLA Convention in Wichita at the Broadview Hotel.

Census Back To Door-To-Door

Not satisfied that annual census methods through the assessor's office has worked, Reno county commissioners have decided to go back to a door-to-door count next year.

As in other G&G area counties, Reno has counted its population each January since 1965 on the basis of returns from a census form which was part of a mailing for personal property listings and vehicle registration.

In certain areas in which it was clear that people did not own automobiles, persons were sent out to enumerate.

This year census and personal property listings have been deleted from the vehicle registration forms, which left the census takers without a base from which to work.

Because of this many G&G area counties as well as Reno will likely go back to a door-to-door method.

Jurors are selected from census rolls. Population is also the basis for distribution of state sales, cigarette, gasoline and liquor taxes, plus other state revenues.

Guilty Plea On Area Extortion

Lowell Seelig, longtime owner and operator of a Clay Center, Kan., restaurant, has pleaded guilty to federal extortion charges.

Seelig is free on $5,000 bond pending completion of a presentence investigation. He is accused of trying to extort $1,000 from a retired Morganville, school teacher earlier this year.

The woman told the Clay County Sheriff's office she had received a note threatening her with injury if she did not deliver the money to Seelig's restaurant.

Federal Bureau of Investigation agents instructed the woman to deliver a dummy package. Seelig was arrested later after officers said he took the package to the rear of the cafe, threw it in a trash can and later recovered it.

THE FARMERS SCAFFOLD

Few farmers ever build scaffolding, not when there's a tractor around with a front-end loader on it. DeWain Krinhop (top) of Chapman takes advantage of this "farmer's scaffold" to help build a combine shed. The shed is on the Raymond Wood farm near Chapman. Helping him is Kenny Costigen who works for Wood.

Set Details On Formula Feed Conference In Mid-January

The 27th annual Kansas State University formula feed conference, January 17-18, is expected to attract

Doe Traveled 170 Miles

Number 198 was quite a gadabout. In her lifetime she wandered at least 170 miles from her place of birth—a significant amount of traveling for a whitetail deer.

According to Bill Hlavachick, Hays, big game biologist with the game commission, the doe was born in Sheridan County. As a three-day old fawn, she was given an ear tag by commission personnel on June 3, 1970 when found near the old Sheridan Lake about 10 miles north of Quinter.

During this year's firearms deer hunting season, Loren D. Johnson, Wichita, shot a doe about three miles southwest of Rago in Kingman County. Upon examining the deer, Johnson found the tag, number 198—the tag given to the fawn in Sheridan County.

"I've never experienced a whitetail doe to travel like this," Hlavachick said. "Bucks are usually the ones to travel but even then not this far."

For the past six years, Commission personnel have been tagging deer, mostly mule deer.

All deer hunters who find ear tags are urged to return them to the commission. As in the case of number 198, ear tags, when returned, will aid in the deer movement study.

OKLAHOMA MEDICAL ASSN CUTS BLUE SHIELD SUPPORT

The Oklahoma Medical Association has withdrawn its endorsement of Blue Shield in the state. The action was made at a special meeting of the medical association and was made because the 21-man member board "does not function effectively in the management of the organization."

feed manufacturers, nutritionists, researchers, and livestock feeders from throughout the Midwest, according to Dr. Harry Pfost and Dr. Charles Deyoe, co-chairmen for the 1972 event.

Among featured topics this year are nutrition and management of the cow-calf operation, liquid supplements for animals on pasture and high roughage rations, beef production from dairy steers, and starting cattle in feedlots. There also will be talks on poultry rations and on finishing swine.

Out of state speakers who will be appearing on the two-day program include Gerald A. Karstens, Chicago, director of the American Feed Manufacturers' Association Feed Production Council, who will discuss complying with provisions of the Occupational Safety and Health Act; and Dr. D. C. Clanton, of the University of Nebraska's North Platte Experiment Station, who will discuss liquid supplements.

A highlight of the conference will be a radio panel to be heard at 12:30 Tuesday afternoon over the K-State radio station, KSAC. The panel will be moderated by Rex Parsons, executive vice president of the Midwest Feed Manufacturers Association. Also participating will be representatives from other sponsoring organizations: the Kansas State Board of Agriculture, the Kansas Grain and Feed Dealers' Association, the Kansas Formula Feed Manufacturers, the Kansas Veterinary Medical Association, and KSU.

Registration for the two-day conference will be Monday morning in the lobby of the K-State Union. There also will be pre-registration on Sunday at the Holiday Inn. This year's sessions will be held in the Union Little Theater.

Among special events planned this year are entertainment at the Monday luncheon by the K-State Singers, a tour of the new KSU beef and swine research facilities Monday afternoon, and a question roundup Tuesday afternoon which will conclude the conference. Dr. Donald Parrish of the KSU biochemistry department, will moderate the question roundup.

Major Bull Importing On Way With Start Of Quarantine Station

Look for some new directions in the exotic cattle breed market. The U.S. has finally made some substantial moves to setting up a quarantine station for imported livestock, and it should end dependence on the slow and expensive process of obtaining semen from sought-after European bulls which have been shipped to Canada. The quarantine station will be set on an island of the Florida Keys, and USDA officials say it should be ready within three years. Agriculture officials figure that livestock imports may run into millions of dollars when the station is opened. U.S. cattlemen have long sought such a facility to get around tight rules which bar animal imports from countries which have histories of hoof-and-mouth sickness and other communicable livestock diseases. Canada has a quarantine station for livestock imports, but its business became so lucrative that it has restricted U.S. access to the cattle brought in. Faced with Canadian competition and the U.S. embargo on direct imports, cattlemen have resorted to artificial insemination with semen from the European bulls in Canada. While fairly large numbers of some breeds such as Charolais and Simmental are now in breeding markets in the U.S., all have started from artificially inseminating a standard U.S. Hereford, Angus, Shorthorn or other breed and continuing artificially impregnating the crossbred cows with other exotic semen. Some breed registries started with 7/8 and fifteen-sixteenths crossbreds. While this method has produced sufficient Charolais that they are no longer solely breeding animals but not uncommon in the feeder and fat cattle markets, Simmentals, Limousins, Highlands, Murray Greys, Chianinas and other foreign breeds have found their numbers limited by the slow process of artificial insemination. Semen from prized foreign breeds may sell for as much as $100 per cubic centimeter, while $4 is a high price for semen from most domestic bulls. U.S. livestock producers have been so eager for European stock that they have been watching the long-term prospects of a recent experiment. An embryo was taken from a pregnant cow, put into a rabbit and kept alive while brought to this country, where it was implanted into a domestic cow. The cow gave birth to a healthy calf. USDA has an agreement with the Navy Department to use 16.1 acres of an island the Navy controls, Fleming Key off Key West, for the quarantine inspection station. The facility will cost an estimated $6.7 million. If funds are cleared, it should be operating by 1974. USDA Secretary Earl Butz has said he would transfer about $200,000 from other USDA areas to begin planning immediately rather than await specific appropriations next year.

'Farming Not Losing Impact On Economy'

No one will be surprised that the extension service at K-State thinks that agriculture is not diminishing in appearance. Dr. Robert Bohannon director of extension at Kansas State University, got the chance at the annual convention of the Kansas Fertilizer and Agricultural Chemicals Association to dispel what he termed "myths" about agriculture. He said farming is the state's largest industry and that the $2 billion in farm receipts in 1970 generated another $6.5 billion in other economic activity. "More than a third of all Kansans are employed in some activity directly related to agriculture," he said. "The percentage is even higher if ag-related transportation and retail activities are included." Another "myth" referred to by Dr. Bohannon is that agriculture production technology is so advanced that the state can afford to ease up on research. He said the record wheat harvest of 1971 and the boom in feedlot operations in Kansas in large part can be traced directly to research. He said the tax money invested in agriculture research is repaid many times over in the economic benefits to the state. Dr. Bohannon also challenged the idea that farming has become so complicated the so-called family farm is a thing of the past. He said 90 per cent of the Kansas farming units are under one-family ownership and said economists predict this situation will continue for many years.

Father and son Dale and John Norman live on Route 2, Chapman. John holds some pears from their own trees. Dale has lived all of his 84 years on this farm. He had one of the first combines to be used in the area. That was in 1919. He said hundreds of people came to watch it operate.

Who Polices Farm Policemen?

Farmer-elected ASCS committees are supposed to police farm laws to see that federal regulations are obeyed.

But who is supposed to police the policemen?

That's the point that Senator Henry Bellmon of Oklahoma is asking. He thinks there is a basic flaw in the federal law which delegates policing powers to county committees who are elected by the farmers they're supposed to supervise.

"I wonder whether we've written a law that has an inherent weakness," asks Bellmon.

The farmer-elected ASCS committee hires a county office manager who passes judgment on whether a farmer qualifies for farm programs.

Kern county, California, in which more large federal farm subsidies are paid than any other, has especially drawn Bellmon's attention.

For instance, a grower is eligible for federal funds for "setting aside" land from cultivation of certain crops to prevent an over-abundance of that crop. The land set aside is supposed to be of equal quality to that kept in production. The county administrator decides whether a grower meets the test.

USDA investigators have charged that many farmers in Kern County kept prime cropland in production and retired land unsuitable for crops. Nevertheless, they qualified for federal subsidies.

Bellmon said he also had reports of Kern County growers planting short term crops such as lettuce, onions or potatoes on land for which they were getting federal payments not to plant cotton.

"In the (USDA investigative) memo they say the Kern County program had been so loosely administered that the general feeling of farmers seemed to be that these regulations had little importance—that many people felt that 'anything goes,'" Bellmon said.

Bellmon said Chairman Herman Talmadge, D-Ga., of the Senate Agriculture Committee has

FARMERS OUTLOOK

L.H. Simerl

Rebound By Corn

The price of corn has risen sharply from the low point reached during harvesttime. The price increase has been 20 to 25 cents a bushel in most areas. Farmers who still hold their 1971 crop should give serious consideration to selling some or all of it on this strong market. Some corn growers may also consider selling a part of their 1972 production.

Statistics are always important, but other factors also have a strong influence on prices. There have been an unusual number of bullish developments in recent weeks: (1) The harvest was completed earlier than usual. (2) The quality of the corn crop was better than average. (3) Russia contracted to buy a large amount of feed grains—80 million bushels of corn, 28 million bushels of barley, and 21 million bushels of oats. (4) International monetary developments made our dollar—and hence our grains—cheaper for some foreign buyers. (5) The USDA announced a new feed-grain program, which is intended to slash corn production to only 4.5 billion bushels in 1972. (6) While the international monetary situation has not been settled, it seems to have clarified considerably, thus reducing the uncertainty that had weakened the market for our grains. (7) Congress has been considering legislation to raise the price-support loan rate for corn. (8) Court injunctions brought a halt to the strike by the dock workers, and exports have started to flow again. (9) A new Secretary of Agriculture was (a) nominated by the President, (b) confirmed by the Senate, and (c) announced that the USDA would buy corn to support prices. Many persons are inclined to buy on such good news, but it is sometimes better to sell on the resulting price bulge.

Big Surplus Remains
The basic facts in the corn situation have not been changed greatly by the bullish developments of recent weeks. The new crop still exceeds prospective needs by a record amount. The crop totaled 5.55 billion bushels, while the expected disappearance is around 4.75 billion. The difference is about 800 million bushels. This is corn that no one needs or wants. It now appears that this surplus will be placed under price support sooner or later.

Recent market prices, however, have been too high to move such a large amount of corn under price-support loans. Current prices for cash corn at many Illinois points are 5 to 10 cents over the loan. July futures are around $1.30, which is the equivalent of $1.20 to $1.25 to farmers next June and July—15 to 20 cents over the loan rates.

It would appear that such prices can be maintained or materially increased only if the government buys a very large amount of corn, or substantially raises the loan rate for the 1971 crop. Looking further ahead, a big sign-up under the 1972 feed-grain program followed by a poor growing season would help sustain, or raise, current price levels.

Outlook for the 1972 Crop

Prices for the 1972 crop have been even higher. The December 1972 futures have been trading at around $1.29; March 1973, at about $1.33. These prices are equivalent to around $1.15 for central Illinois farmers at harvest time, and $1.30 or so in the spring of 1973.

Small Towns Need Population Base For Business

If you've ever lived in a small town, you probably drove 15 to 50 miles to shop for items or services that weren't available at home.

For those who still wonder why their hometown lacked certain businesses and services, the answer is simple—there just wasn't sufficient population.

Dr. Don Erickson, Extension economist in resource development at Kansas State University, says a businessman has to be assured of a certain number of customers to justify an investment.

To illustrate, Erickson says on a national average it takes a community of 1,000 persons to support a restaurant, 1,900 for a gas station, 2,280 for a beauty shop, 3,000 for a drug store, and 3,800 for an appliance store.

A population base of 4,000 is necessary for a liquor store to survive, 6,800 for an auto parts and accessory store, 7,000 for a lumber and building supply business, and 48,600 for a bookstore.

Of course, these figures do not guarantee that the businesses would succeed with the population indicated, or fail with less population. There are too many variables, such as managerial competency and product quality.

Erickson says communities include more than that area enclosed by city limit signs. A community includes all the people living in the area who have a "common interest or sense of belonging." A community may include several towns or a whole county.

Certain population bases are also required for services, such as health care. Here are averages necessary for the various types of medical practitioners: general practitioner—2,000; internal medicine diagnostician—10,000; fully qualified surgeon—10,000; fully qualified obstetrician—15,000 to 20,000; ear, nose and throat specialist—15,000; X-ray specialist—60,000; and pathologist—100,000.

1500 Milkings Enough For Machine Inflation

What is one of the most important components of the milking machine? It is the only part of the machine that touches the cow's teats. It is the inflation.

And one piece inflations should be used for no more than 1,500 milkings, says Ralph Bonewitz, Extension dairyman at Kansas State University.

"Yet, many dairymen use inflations for 5,000 milkings and then wonder why the herd has mastitis," points out Bonewitz.

"To find the number of milkings per liner take the number of cows times 2 times the number of days used for liner and this divided by number of units."

The KSU specialist says inflations are good investments. They cost $1 to $2 each, which means approximately $30 is needed to equip four milker units with one set.

December 21, 1971

"One case of mastitis costs much more than this," says Bonewitz. "So save your money, and change inflations when used for 1,500 milkings." He says it's a good practice to use liners for a week and then change to other liners for a week. Soak the unused liners in a lye solution or other solutions made for that purpose.

No-Fault Brings 27% Rate Cut—Maybe Even More

Auto insurance companies were told to cut bodily injury rates by 27 percent in Massachusetts by state officials.

Officials said the state's no-fault insurance payment system had cut risks by that much.

The rate cut was ordered for 1972. Moreover, the state said companies had excess profits by that amount in 1971 and they ordered companies to give credits on 1972 premiums for the 27 percent overpayment in 1971.

Auto insurance companies were almost sure to contest in court the proposed credits, but state officials were confident the reduction in 1972 rates would go through.

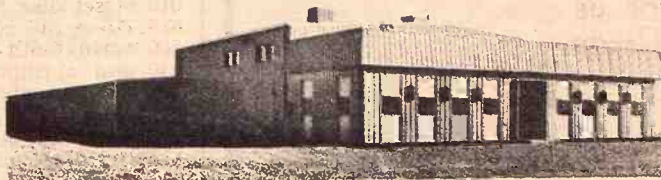

No-fault insurance includes only the bodily injury portion of auto insurance. It provides that liability claims up to $2000 be settled out of court without regard to blame in the accident. It also prohibits suits for "pain and suffering" unless medical expenses exceed $500.

CRENSHAW HEADS KANSAS ANGUS ASSOCIATION

George Crenshaw, Wamego Angus breeder, has been elected president of the Kansas Angus Association. Glenn Pickett of Emporia was named vice president and Phil Ljungdahl of Dodge City was retained as secretary.

Crenshaw, above exhibiting a past prizewinner from his Shamrock Farms, was also honored at the annual meeting, he and his wife June and children being named as "Kansas Angus Family of the Year."

The Kansas Junior Angus Association presented Crenshaw with a brief case in thanks for his efforts with the junior group this year.

Easier Farm Credit In 90 Days

E. A. Jaenke, governor of the Farm Credit Administration, has called the Farm Credit Act of 1971 the most significant bit of financial farm legislation passed since the 1930s.

The act provides new and broadened lending programs for farmers and other rural residents. Regional meetings already have been held in Kansas City, Denver and Atlanta to spell out those programs for area administrators, and the new regulations are expected to be ready for use in about 90 days.

In brief, the legislation will make it easier for the producer and his supportive allies to obtain that vital commodity-credit. The new provisions take note of the fact that money had become the No. 1 farm input and that the need for farm and ranch credit is doubling every decade.

"I commend the Congress for its leadership in pinpointing the needs for new and improved credit programs for rural America and in taking fast action to help solve them," Jaenke said.

Among the principal features of the act is one to allow federal land banks to increase the amounts they can lend on farm real estate from 65 per cent to 85 per cent of the appraised value. Jaenke said that provision should "have a substantial impact in helping young farmers become established in agriculture."

The act also authorizes the federal credit system to finance business operations that perform onfarm services for farmers. Some of them include custom harvesters, custom pruners and sprayers and custom fertilizer applicators.

"The availability of financing for these businesses will encourage their growth," the governor said. "That, in turn, will enable many farmers to avoid purchasing expensive equipment which is used for short periods during the year, but which by necessity must be available."

Other provisions in the act authorize the federal credit system to increase the number of financially-related services it offers to its farmer-members and gather its loan funds in the nation's money markets through the issuance of a single farm credit security rather than three consolidated group securities.

Another provision permits the banks for co-operatives to up-date their lending programs to conform to the changing financial needs of farmer co-operatives.

Lending units of the farm credit system furnish about 20 per cent of the credit used by U.S. farmers and 60 per cent of the credit needs of farmer co-operatives. During the last fiscal year, farmers and farmer co-operatives borrowed $13.6 billion through the system and had $16.1 billion in loans outstanding from it.

The system originally was capitalized by the federal government, which accounts for the word "federal" in several of the system's components. But it has been member-owned since 1968, when the last federal investment was repaid. The Farm Credit Administration, an independent federal agency, supervises the system.

Boehners Buy Green City Barn

GREEN CITY, MO.—The interests of Ovid Vestal and Lawrence Couch in the Green City Auction Co. has been purchased by David and Velma Boehner, the change of their ownership to become effective Jan. 1. One-third interest is still held by Karl Boehner.

The Green City Auction had been owned by Vestal since 1954. In 1957 half the stock was sold to Lawrence Couch, of Green City. On Jan. 1, 1963, a new partnership was formed with one-third of the stock being held each by Vestal, Couch and Karl Boehner.

There will be no other changes in personnel, Boehner stated. Green City is in Northern Missouri, in the corn belt area near Iowa. The auction specializes in the sale of breeding cattle.

Hard Questions To Sale Of Grain To Russia

A major sale of grain to Russia by the U.S. has been applauded by the trade and various farm groups. But the Hutchinson News, on a second look, doesn't like the looks of it in this editorial opinion:

That grain sale to Russia is beginning to stink.

Acclaimed by the administration as a boon to farmers, both as a means of getting rid of some surplus and of opening a new market, the sale is suspect on at least two counts:

1. The USDA now admits that almost half the corn to be shipped to the Soviet Union could come from foreign countries. Of the 10 million bushels of corn already shipped, 5 million came from Argentina.

2. Russians will be getting oats and barley at prices considerably below the cost to U.S. livestock producers, with the Soviet subsidy being made up by the American taxpayers.

(The 24.1 million bushels of oats brought 40 to 47 cents from the exporters, at a time market price for oats at Kansas City was 77 cents. Barley was released at 83-91 cents a bushel, while being sold at Minneapolis for $1.20 a bushel.)

Finally, Cargill and Continental, the big grain firms handling the deal, have refused to report what profit they will make on the sales—and up to now, our Congressmen have declined to ask them on government grounds that it might jeopardize their trade relations with

A Congressional official said the decision not to inquire about the sale price was deliberate because "we didn't want to give the companies a hassle." Inasmuch as the taxpayers are helping in this bill, it would seem reasonable that they know what price the Russians are paying for this grain.

In sum, the theory of this sale was excellent. We need all the export markets we can get—if we can find them for the benefit of farmers and not solely for profits of big grain firms.

But the manner in which the sale has proceeded is suspicious, alarming, and too secretive for much confidence from the public.

G&G AREA HAS HEAD OF NATIONAL ASSN

A G&G area Angus breeder has been selected president of the American Angus Association. Kenneth Moore, Roxbury, has been a director in the national association for six years. He has consolidated his Angus herd, one of the largest in the U.S., in a 2100-acre ranch in the Flint Hills near Elmdale.

Iowa Back As Top Cattle Feeder

Iowa, which lost its traditional title as the country's top cattle feeder to Texas five months ago, has regained the role. At least for December.

USDA's December 1 report showed Iowa with 1.9 million cattle on grain feed, while Texas has slight over 1.7 million.

Texas supplanted Iowa as the nation's leading cattle feeder in July. At that time, Iowa had 1.6 million, Texas 1.7 million.

The December tally for Iowa was up by 4 percent from a year ago. Texas was up 15 percent from last December.

Only Arizona among the seven major cattle-feeding states showed fewer cattle added to feedlots in November than a year ago, although Kansas just started monthly feedlot reports and did not show a figure for the November increase a year ago.

Among the other states Iowa was up 8 percent, Nebraska 5, Texas 19, Colorado 22, and California 7. Arizona November placements were down 10 percent.

Selling Eggs Already Peeled And Hard-Boiled

Have you ever seen a chicken that lays a peeled hard-boiled egg? Key poultry farm has come up with the next best thing—a mechanical device that makes the housewife's job a little bit easier.

The poultry farm, a part of Key Foods Division of the Key Milling Co., has bought a patented copywrited franchise of a machine that hard-boils and peels fresh Grade A eggs.

Jack McKee, egg manager of the 110,000 chicken operation, said production of the hard eggs began Oct. 13. He said they are packaging 35 boxes a day with 10 dozen to the box.

The process was invented by Larry Waters, a young engineer from Topeka. He developed the machinery and formed the corporation Watsco. The eggs bear the brand name Wata-a-egg.

McKee said there are only four poultry operations in the country that use this process. One is in Wichita and the other two are in Oklahoma and Illinois.

The process begins with Grade A cleaned and candled eggs from the eight-year-old poultry farm. They are then boiled, cooled and peeled at a small pilot plant at the Key Mill in Clay Center.

The farm manager said the hard-boiled, peeled eggs have a tremendous appeal to institutions. Schools, who must meet daily protein requirements in their noon meals, find the eggs easy to prepare and inexpensive to use.

He said the eggs are sold for about 10 cents apiece. But he said there have been some problems marketing the new process eggs.

"It's kind of like the time frozen potatoes came on the market," McKee said. "No one would buy them."

He said a great deal of work needs to be done in consumer education letting the housewife know the eggs exist. The eggs are presently distributed in Omaha, Lincoln, Kansas City, Topeka, Emporia, Albuquerque, and soon in Denver and Phoenix.

McKee said the turkey farm and poultry farm will bring in over $1 million this year.

Now Sheepmen Talking Of Importing Exotics

The introduction and use of new exotic sheep breeds, the fabrication of lamb meat for a better and more uniform product, and the freezing of lamb meat to put the product "where the demand is" were among the changes recommended for the sheep industry by speakers at the Midwest Sheep Industry Conference Dec. 6 at Lincoln, Nebr.

Dr. Clair Terrill, project leader for the sheep and wool division of the U.S. Department of Agriculture, Beltsville, Md., declared that Finnshope, a breed from Finland, offer the greatest possibility for use in the U.S. He said the Finnish breed offers an increased lambing rate, with ability to breed at almost any time of the year.

Although there are over 800 different breeds of sheep in the world, Terrill said only a few are available for use by the U.S. because of such things as undesirable traits, import laws with certain countries, etc.

The USDA representative reminded sheep producers that even though the input of exotic breeds can produce good results in the U.S., "we must learn even more about our domestic breeds and be sure that the exotic breeds are what we want." He added that no matter how desirable an exotic breed may be, it will also have some undesirable traits.

In working for improved U.S. sheep production, Terrill stressed the importance of utilizing the domestic opportunities for improvement in the states. He pointed out that selection processes with domestic sheep will help bring about such improvements as improved meat flavor and more tender fatty areas, which will be key factors in increasing lamb consumption.

Frozen lamb provides a new opportunity to "put the product where the demand is," Harold Tuma, associate professor of meat science at Kansas State University, said at the conference.

Surveys have shown that only 15 per cent of the consumers in the Midwest who want to buy lamb can find it, Tuma said.

The major merchandising areas for lamb products are the metropolitan areas of the east and west coasts and Chicago, according to Tuma. He emphasized that these areas buy lamb in carload lots and use the complete carcass, while most Midwest retailers have only a limited demand for just the prime cuts. As a result, Tuma said Mid-

CHRISTMAS TIME — FOR CHEER & GOOD WISHES

So we won't spend much time trying to sell. Mr. Docking the governor I see had a meeting with the depository waste people telling them not to deposit in the Lyons bank of salt. Still say the best place to keep their atom waste would be in the Pentagon or the White House.

In reading about Mr. Powell's selection to the Supreme Court telling what a really fine people he is. They even say he's not a "do-goodie" One thing he did say was we need to make situations better between the middle incomers and the "poor." Way I see it we need to improve the middle incomers in relation to the rich. I'm still in favor of soaking the rich & let them pay their share of the tax instead of hiring fancy lawyers to dodge the tax. Mr. Powell was a corporation lawyer? ? ?

Justice Suit On Takeover Of Area Soybean Processors

Has competition for soybean meal been eliminated in the G&G area? The Justice Department thinks so. It has filed an anti-trust suit against companies in three states, seeking to break up what it calls an anti-competitive arrangement in the soybean business in Illinois, Kansas and Nebraska.

At issue is the takeover of Kansas Soya Products Co. of Emporia and Fremont Cake and Meal Co. at Fremont, Nebr., by Archer Daniels Midland Co. of Decatur, Ill. All three companies are defendants in the civil suit.

A statement from Atty. Gen. John Mitchell said the takeover by the Illinois firm of the other two violated federal antitrust laws by eliminating competition in the production and sale of soybean meal and other products in Kansas and Nebraska.

CBK—Corporate Loser On Farm—Turns To Coal

Corporate directions change—and so do their names—to more clearly identify the operation. So it is with CBK Agronomics, Inc., which is getting into the coal business in a big way after a disastrous 3-year venture into corporate farming.

CBK Industries, formerly Carey-Baxter-Kennedy, in 1967 changed from a diversified concern engaged in wearing apparel manufacturing, asphalt materials, printing, film distributing and trucking to a farm-oriented enterprise with holdings in the Midwest, Southwest and the West Coast. The name was changed in 1969 by adding "Agronomics."

The company now plans to change its name to Modern Energy Company because of its identification with energy and fuel.

In July, CBK Agronomics acquired all of the capital stock of DLM Coal Corporation in exchange for 1,256,400 shares of its common. DLM was a privately-owned surface coal mining company operating in West Virginia and controlled over 60 million tons of coal. It has since agreed to acquire a 55 per cent undivided interest in a 16,000-acre tract in West Virginia.

Louis B. Gresham, president, announced the company has agreed with the owners of Johns Creek Elkhorn Coal and Gabriel Valley Enterprises Company to acquire all of the stock of the two companies for about $5 million in cash.

The two companies own and operate a coal mine near Pikeville, Ky., producing 625,000 tons annually. In the fiscal year ended Sept. 30 the operation had a pre-tax profit of $2.2 million.

CBK Agronomics has an operating tax loss carry forward of about $19.8 million which expires over the next five years.

CBK should benefit from the earnings of DLM and the two new companies—if acquired—because of its tax credits, Gresham said.

"Based on engineering reports the amount of recoverable coal in the 16,000-acre tract which CBK is obtaining a majority interest is about 198 million tons," Gresham said. "CBK is continuing to seek acquisitions in natural resource fields."

Own Fanatics Among Worst Spray Polluters

Home owners are making sure they weeds and insects in their lawned thatch.

They're making so sure that their "overkill" makes them among the pesticide polluters.

So concludes a year-long study by the Oklahoma Department of Agriculture.

The department studied 28 residences during the year and concluded: "The highest level of pesticide residues found were from a major urban area of north Oklahoma City which composes the Deep Fork watershed.

Some of the pesticide residues in water from this station were above permissible levels for public-drinking water supplies," the report indicated.

The ecologists blamed northern Oklahoma City residents who
"overkill" lawn weeds and insects.
Tulsa's pollution was just as bad, the researchers said.

The ecology drive may have some effect on use of pesticides.
Researchers said all traces of DDT disappeared from the Deep Fork during the testing period.

But it didn't mean anybody stopped spraying.

The drop in DDT was matched by an increase in other, less publicized pesticides.

It's Time To Quit, Geary County Tells Welfare Director

JUNCTION CITY — The Geary County Commission here has refused to approve further exemption from mandatory retirement for county welfare director Claude
Frese, who has held the post since 1942.

State law requires employees covered by the Kansas Public Employees Act to retire at the age of 65 unless an exemption is requested annually by the appointing agency.

The commissioners here voted 2-1 to not request renewal of Frese's exemption which was granted last year when he became 65. He will be forced to retire by next April 1.

The three county commissioners comprise the county social welfare board. Commissioners Keith Devenney and Hays B. Beck voted against extension of Frese's term.
Commissioner Jack Miller, welfare board chairman, cast the dissenting vote.

Commissioners said an immediate search will be started to find a new welfare director.

Long Stability For Cattle Market

"Cattle prices for the past year have maintained an unprecedented stability at stronger prices than ever before. In fact, fed cattle prices haven't ranged more than a dollar since February," C. W. McMillan, executive vice president of the American National Cattlemen's Assn., told the Oklahoma Cattlemen's Assn. annual convention.

The cattle industry is in favorable price situation and should remain so with no major price fluctuations well into 1972, he said. He cautioned, however, "this favorable price position is dependent on normal weather patterns and the orderly movement of cattle to market. Any serious marketing delays could depress prices."

Explaining the factors behind the prolonged healthy market, McMillan said, "We have had a very good consumer demand for our product. Retail sales of beef and most other products have maintained healthier levels this year than last. Another reason for our favorable market has been relatively normal supplies of competitive products. We haven't had to fight the burdensome supplies of pork that we were faced with at this time last year."

McMillan continued, "The feeder cattle market has remained quite healthy and prospects indicate no major change. We are in a comfortable supply position with no major buncchings on the horizons provided the fed market remains stable and pasture conditions remain normal."

The beef industry leader said that feed supplies should be relatively abundant, but prices won't maintain the very low levels that prevailed during harvest. "We can expect continued governmental assistance to bolster feed grain prices."

McMillan warned the producers, "The favorable price conditions we are not experiencing should not lead anyone to a false sense of security that might result in an excessive build-up in beef cow numbers. A rapid build-up would mean a serious oversupply situation a few years from now.

"Sound marketing decisions must be made," McMillan stressed, "on the best market information available."
