What's That Box Behind The Combine?

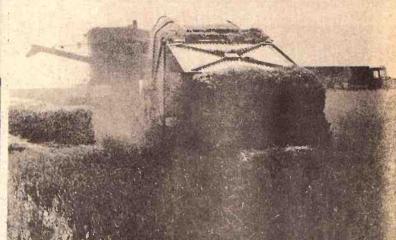

Of all the puddlers, clankers, gouges, and contraptions that machine shop inventors have devised to stir the ground, cultivate, or harvest there have been some

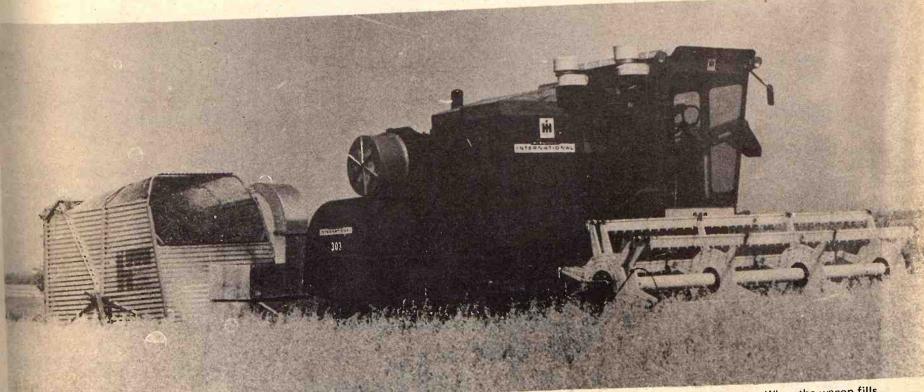

An add-on implement seen only occasionally in the G&G area is a chaff wagon, a peculiar looking ones. boxy device that follows a combine. Some harvest watchers think that it looks like a crew is pulling its own bunk behind the combine.

One who thinks the thing works is Everett Zimmerman, Morris county farmer who runs a Holstein dairy herd, feeds Angus cattle, and farms between Alta Vista and Dwight. Last year Zimmerman thought he lost too much grain when he was cutting milo. He's seen The Harvest Master, commercial name for one of the devices, and bought one. He tried it out on some of his wheat last month and just tried it last week on some early oats cutting, which was making up to 100 bushels Zimmerman figures if milo cutting conditions are similar again to last year, he can get some of his feed back from collecting the chaff blown from the combine. to the acre. The machine also provides a convenient way of collecting straw bedding behind wheat or oats harvests.

The chaff is blown directly from the combine into the wagon. When the wagon fills with chaff and straw, the operator can tip it by controls from within the combine cab. Some farmers will see a value in the chaff wagon if they think that harvesting conditions are losing a good deal of grain, particularly of milo.

Gas From Grain Alcohol Needs A Tax Boost

HUTCHINSON—The Kansas be 3 cents less than the tax on other Wheat Commission is studying ossible legislation designed to encourage the use of grain alcohol instead of lead in gasoline.

Creel Brock, Kansas Wheat mmission administrator, said he es not know yet what form the roposed bill might take, but a ssibility would be a reduced state asoline tax on gasoline containing in alcohol as a substitute for lead ditives. The 1971 Nebraska egislature passed such a law.

gasoline in Nebraska beginning in

The Nebraska law provides that when grain alcohol gasoline sales in the state reach 10 million gallons per year, an adjustment in the tax may be considered by the legislature.

The law also establishes a fund, to be known as the Grain Alcohol Fuel Tax Fund, to provide a Nebraska program for the implementation of automobile was driving using the Nebraska grain alcohol industry for automotive fuels.

private industry, of procedures and processes for manufacturing and marketing grain alcohol-blended fuels; establishment of a procedure for entering the fuel into the marketplace; analysis of the marketing process and testing of marketing procedures, and cooperation with private industry to establish privately owned grain alcohol manufacturing plants in Nebraska.

The Kansas Wheat Commission is studying possible bills to be recommended to the 1972 Legislature.

The commission has completed an experiment in which a state alcohol gasoline, and Brock said the experiment was a success. Earlier The fund will be used for studies by other groups have shown establishment, with cooperation of that grain alcohol is a satisfactory substitute for lead, he added.

"There is ample proof that it is a real good fuel," he said.

The Kansas Wheat Commission used 500 gallons of the grain alcohol gasoline in its test car. Brock said, and "we found that the performance was very similar to the performance using regular gasoline."

There are benefits both in cleaning up the environment and in reducing damage to cars, Brock said. Grain alcohol gasoline would reduce air pollution and there is less damage to mufflers, tail pipes and other parts, he said.

He quoted an article in a major oil company's magazine that gasoline without lead, when used extensively, has been shown to double the normal life of parts such as spark plugs, mufflers and tail pipes. For the motorist who keeps a car four years or longer, the magazine said, the amount he saves on maintenance can equal four cents on every gallon of gasoline he buys.

At present, grain alcohol as an additive instead of lead would cost more, he acknowledged. But in mass production it would be cheaper, he said, and the motorist would benefit from the reduced damage to his car.

'The oil companies are conducting experiments now, but it's hard to find out exactly what they're doing," he said. "They keep their experiments pretty secret, for competitive reasons."

While research into the use of grain alcohol with gasoline actually was begun during the Eisenhower administration, interest has increased in recent years because of greater concern over air pollution. In addition, Kansans are interested in the research because of the increased demand for wheat for grain

Another argument the Kansas Wheat Commission advances for use of grain is that it would retard the depletion of petroleum reserves.

Second Student Aid Cut At KSU

The aids and awards office at Kansas State University, Manhattan, announced that it has been notified its working funds for educational opportunity grants have been cut for the second consecutive

The office, which offers scholarships and assistance to students, will have about $363,000 available next year for grants to students, down from $465,000 in 1970-71 and $576,000 in 1969-70.

Aids and awards personnel said the office would have difficulty meeting commitments effectively. They said the action represents a 37 per cent cutback over two years.

Gerald Bergen, director, said: "Since we still are helping the same number of students and costs are rising, the kids are getting only twothirds on the average of what they should get."

It is especially critical, he said, since there is a shortage of job opportunities and it is difficult for students to acquire money. Hard hit will be the incoming freshmen since the office first is required to assist qualified students who have received aid in the past.

Aid personnel said only 900 of about 12,000 K-State students will receive assistance next year

Use Of Wheat As Feed Tilts Halo, But Makes Money

Feeding Kansas wheat to livestock is something the wheat farmer doesn't like to think about but, according to the U.S. Department of Agriculture, the trend is that way and the Kansas farmer is going to have to live with it.

Now, as everybody knows, the Kansas wheat farmer is no snob, but over the years he has tended to put a halo over his crop. He sees good Kansas wheat as a human food going into breadstuffs and consumed throughout the world.

Part of his thinking is economic; it might hurt the price of wheat to have it classified as a feed grain alongside corn and grain sorghums.

The USDA notes, however, that with livestock and poultry output gaining in numbers faster than feed grain supplies, U.S. farmers are feeding more wheat then they have since depression days. Last year, blight-reduced corn supplies made wheat even more attractive as a livestock feed lot item.

USDA's The Agriculture Statistical Reporting Service said that the amount of wheat fed in the fiscal year ending June 30 may reach 235 million bushels. That is up from an average of 110 million bushels yearly through most of the

Dairies Can Store Wheat Profitably

Dairymen can store enough wheat to furnish one-third to one-half of grain needs for their herds during the coming year - and do it profitably.

"Wheat is a good buy when compared to other grains at present time," observes Ralph Bonewitz, Extension dairyman at Kansas State University, Manhattan.

"Wheat is high in energy, protein and phosphorus - necessary for high production in dairy herds."

Bonewitz believes dairymen should store wheat so that a transportation cost is not necessary in getting feed back to their area or farm and having it readily available for rations. He cautions that wheat should not be processed too finely for dairy cows. Many successful Kansas dairymen are feeding wheat.

Another good feed buy is barley, says Bonewitz. Dairymen shouldn't let this grain be shipped out of their territory. "Barley is a fine dairy feed and should be stored for future needs," Bonewitz reasons.

"Dairymen average feeding three tons of grain per cow per year. With this amount it is imperative that dairymen buy feeds economically. Wheat and barley are good buys

Set Date For E. Kansas Angus Field Day

The Eastern Kansas Angus Field Day and show is set for August 4 at the Paola Kansas Fairgrounds, Russell C. Cook, of Paola reports. This year's event will feature both junior and adult Angus shows and will be held just prior to the Miami County Fair.

A steak dinner is planned for 7:30 p.m. the evening of the field day at the big shelter house in Wallace

All cattle should arrive after 2:00 p.m. Tuesday, August 3 and before 9 a.m. August 4. Registration for the field day begins at 9:00 a.m. August 4 with the junior heifer show set for 9:30. The open show will start at 1:30

For further information or for reservations to the dinner, contact Russell C. Cook, Route 1, Paola, Kansas. Dinner reservations may also be made with Mrs. Lester Vohs, Paola, Kansas.

Last year from July through September, for example, wheat was 24 cents a hundred pounds cheaper than corn when the two were adjusted according to feed value. A year earlier, wheat's cost advantage over all feed grains ranged from 1 cent over oats to 21 cents over corn, according to the USDA.

It is estimated that from July, 1970, through last March, livestock producers fed approximately 206 million bushels of wheat to their stock. Most of that was hard red winter wheat because it was in large supply

Much of the increase has taken place in the feed lots of Kansas and the Southwest. Early 1971 wheat from Texas, for example, has moved directly from the country elevators to feed lots because both corn and milo are expensive and in short supply. Feeding wheat on the farms where wheat is grown hasn't caught on nearly as fast for the simple reason that farmers who grow wheat and keep livestock as a sideline comes that fault.

traditionally sell their wheat as a food crop even when its price is competitive or less.

Wheat makes an excellent feed for most types of stock and poultry. USDA feeding tests indicate, for example, that some wheat varieties contain 100 to 120 per cent of the protein value of corn and sometimes as high as 130 per cent the protein value of milo.

There is one drawback to wheat. Some tests have revealed that cattle and swine develop digestive disorders when wheat ferments in their stomachs. However, those problems can be overcome by mixing the ration with other cereal grains or roughage.

In poultry, care must be taken not to grind wheat too fine.

Powdery wheat causes beak impaction and lowers weight gains. Some classes of poultry also need more sulphur, amino acids and other dietary items, which they don't get from wheat. The use of supplements or mixtures of other grains over-oh Bonewitz, Extension dairy alist at Kansas State versity, says the two new gories are "Predicted Dif-nce for Fat Percentage" and dicted Difference for Gross r Income.'

se predicted differences are. reted on the same basis as the ed differences for milk and leaning the probability that heifers from specific bulls will outproduce their breed average herdmates by certain amounts of fat percentage and dollar income.

Bonewitz points out that comparison of dairy bulls and cows, based upon the profit-making potential of their daughters, is getting increased attention by the dairy industry and that the new sire summary categories reflect the economic value of milk and its fat content variance.

He says that those animals producing the most milk are not superior to Bull A. However, as milk necessarily the greatest income producers.

For example, if a dairyman can choose between Bull A, which is predicted to add 1,000 pounds of milk and 10 pounds of milk fat to his daughter's production, and Bull B, which is predicted to add 500 pounds of milk and 30 pounds of milk fat to his daughter's production, which bull should he use?

When the price is $5 per hundredweight for milk with 3.5 percent fat and a fat differential of 0.85 is used, Bull B is economically price goes up, Bull A's daughters will be expected to have a slight advantage in increasing total income. The estimated gross income of daughters from specific cows can be figured in the same way.

The new sire summary category for predicted difference in dollars was calculated on a basis of $5.50 per hundredweight for milk testing 3.5 percent fat. An 8.3 cent differential was assigned for each tenth of a percent variance in fat content.

U.S. Department of Agriculture research shows that using local prices causes only minor changes in the ranking of a group of bulls. However, their predicted dollar differences were affected.

Bonewitz urges dairymen to find out what the predicted difference in dollars is for the bulls they are using. He suggests using bulls with predicted differences of $40 or more. This information is not available on young bulls. Consequently, very few cows in a herd should be bred to young bulls.

Q&A On Hail Damage To Corn

Question - At what stages in growth and development of corn will hail damage the corn to such an extent that yields will be reduced.

Answer - Studies at Iowa State University have shown that from emergence to the four leaf stage a frost or hail may destroy the exposed leaves but not damage the growing point, which is still below the soil surface.

By the eight leaf stage (a month after emergence), unfurled leaves destroyed by frost or hail can result in a 10-20 percent reduction in grain

When 14-16 leaves are fully emerged (7-8 weeks after emergence or early tasseling and silking and later stages), injury by hail reduces the number of kernels that develops. Removal of half of the leaves results in a 25-30 percent yield loss. With complete leaf removal, there may be little or no yield.

In summary, losses in yield may be small when the corn is small but gradually increase as the crop reaches the ear development stages.

Andrews said that every cattleman, regardless of the number of cattle he runs should also become familiar with the Kansas brand laws and practice the law as it applies to his particular operation. Andrews also remarked that many people believe they do not own enough cattle to bother with branding, but he pointed out that these operators proportion of their investment by strays and thefts.

"The Kansas brand laws are as practical as any laws in neighboring states." Andrews pointed out. "Cattlemen here have every opportunity available in brand enforcement with the county inspection option, the community sale law and the stray law."

Andrews concluded an explanation of the brand laws summarizing that the major problem is that not a large enough percent of laws that are available to them.

description of the current Kansas brand laws:

Legislation, effective July 1, 1969, created a Kansas Animal Health Board. The new board has representation from dairy, beef, swine, veterinarian association and the Public Market Association. The bill combined the duties of the Sanitary Commissioner and the Brand Commissioner under a Livestock Commissioner who is appointed by the Kansas Animal Health Board and who serves as the are the ones who lose a higher executive officer of the Kansas Animal Health Department.

The department handles all brand registrations, crossfiles all recorded brands by separate reference and indexes each brand as to the county of residence of the brand owner. Another major responsibility is handling of transfers of ownership.

Since 1959 counties have been able to establish a brand inspection area within their county boundaries. The present procedure provides that whenever a petition is submitted to the board of county commissioners the cattle is being branded and signed by not less than 51 percent of people generally are not informed of the resident owners of cattle, requesting that the county be Following is a complete designated a brand inspection area, it shall be the duty of the board of county commissioners, within 10 days after receipt of such petition, to make a determination as to the sufficiency of the qualifications and number of signers. If said petition is found sufficient, the board shall adopt a resolution declaring the county a brand inspection area and shall immediately file a certified copy of such resolution with the livestock commissioner.

Every county in the state is eligible to become a county brand inspected county by the presentation of a petition as previously explained. The statutes also provide that the termination of the county brand inspection area may be accomplished in the same manner as it was formed.

In an inspection area, it is required that a bill of sale containing all pertinent information describing the cattle be given with the sale or transfer of ownership of cattle. It is unlawful to move cattle in the brand inspection area unless such cattle have been first inspected for brands by the brand commissioner or his inspectors or deputies, except that cattle may be moved by the owner when there is no change in ownership, and cattle may be moved without prior inspection to a market where a Kansas brand inspection is maintained. Any person who purchases cattle from within a brand inspection area should receive a bill of sale and a brand inspection certificate

At any community sale at which the market operator has requested brand inspection, an additional fee of not less than five cents and not more than 10 cents per head is charged, and the livestock commissioner shall provide an inspector to make a brand inspection on all cattle moving through the designated market. Where cattle originate in and have brand inspection clearance from a county option brand inspection area, the market operator shall waive such livestock brand inspection fee.

The Kansas statutes provide for the procedure for taking up, disposition, and sale of stray animals and the proof of ownership of livestock. Our present law provides that any person may take up any stray found upon his premises or upon any public thoroughfare adjoining thereto, if he reports such taking up to the sheriff of the county in which the stray is taken up within 24 hours of the taking up of such stray. The sheriff is required to notify the brand commissioner and if possible establish ownership of the stray. If this is impossible, the law provides for the advertisement and sale of the animal and the disposition of the proceeds of the sale.

Amendments to the "stray law" were made during the 1970 session of the legislature. The first amendment provided for a reasonable and regular rate for keeping and feeding the stray, together with damage, as determined by the sheriff and the state brand commissioner. The law now requires notice to be published in a newspaper having general circulation in the county seven days associate profession before sale date and sale date must be at least 21 days after stray was reported to the sheriff. Sale may be made at a public livestock market or at a terminal market.

The third amendment provided stimulus to a that the money from the sale of a veterinary media stray be held six months. If the improve the que owner appears and produces writing in the feld

The USDA report hogs and pigs, released last week, shows that while the current inventory of market hogs is up, the process of reducing the number of hogs is continuing; however, not quite as rapidly as many peopl expected.

The USDA report shows 66,070,000 hogs and pigs on farms as of June 1. This s is 2 percent more than the 64, 824, 000 reported last year and well above the 1969 figure of 58,736. Since the number of hogs is being reduced, breeding stock was 8 percent below the year-ago figure, but market hogs were 4 percent higher.

Increases Above 60 Pounds

The inventory of market hogs by weight group was:

200 lbs 1,643,000 up 14pct 180-219 lbs 5,290,000 up 21pct 120-179 lbs 8,792,000 up 9pct 60-119 lbs 13,901,000 up 7pct Under 60 26,565,000 down 2pct

Assuming a normal rate of gain, it will be almost November before marketings are ready from the under-60-pounds group. This means that slaughter will be as great or greater than last year until well in

Farmers throughout the country indicated their intentions of having 9 percent fewer sows to farrow from through November. Marketings in early 1972 will be substantially under the past year, with stronger prices.

The June Hogs and Pigs report indicated that farmers followed their earlier intentions. In the December report, producers planned to farrow 7.2 million sows-1 percent more than the year before. According to the June report, this is what they did.

Corn Belt Adjusting

The ten Corn Belt states have adjusted down a little more quickly than the country as a whole. The total number of hogs in these states is 2 percent lower than a year ago, market hogs are just equal. One reason for this adjustment was that litter size during the winter period was 4 percent small er than that of a year ago. At the time of the March report, Corn Belt producers were planning to reduce summer farrowings by 15 percent. The most recent survey shows they plan to reduce Jun-August farrowings by 12 percent, September-November by 11 percent.

Price Prospects

Last year, hog prices made an exceptionally large decline. They went from about $25 in June to about $15 in November and December. The 1969 price pattern was just the reverse, with prices staying near the $26 level for the last half of the year; in December, they were actually a little higher than in July. Prices will not be that high this year, but they will be more stable than last year. Prices may vary withing the $18-to-$22 range this fall, with a rather sizable period being near the $20

The reduced supply of hogs is not the only reason to expect better hog prices. Indications are that con-

N AS OF JUNE 30, 1971

TA 5-4641

The new trend, apparent in both rich and poor states, was revealed in a memorandum reporting on a 50state survey by the Dept. of Health, Education and Welfare. The welfare cutback apparently has developed as a result of the unprecedented budgetary crises facing many state governments. The fiscal squeeze at some state capitols is attributable, at least in part, to the mushrooming growth of welfare rolls and to increasing costs of federally aided state programs of medical benefits for the poor. Although the federal government helps pay the cost, the states now administer all welfare programs and control the level of payments.

The new trend could have explosive social and political consequences. There were two days of street disorders in Negro sections of Brooklyn last May after the New York legislature cut welfare benefits and other programs.

In California, the nation's other big welfare state, payments for more than half of the 387,000 families with children were increased June 1 as a result of court letigation. But Gov. Ronald Reagan has moved to force a cutback in benefits.

Challenging the Democraticcontrolled legislature, Reagan vetoed language written into the new budget appropriation bill by the lawmakers to require benefits to be maintained at existing levels.

Pending before Congress are two proposals by President Nixon that would relieve the fiscal squeeze on the states-revenue sharing and welfare reform.

The House Ways and Means Committee began closed door consideration of a substitute for the President's revenue-sharing plan. Senate hearing begin later this month on Nixon's House-passed welfare reform plan.

The welfare reform bill would set up a federally administered program, establishing uniform nationwide welfare payments and extending eligibility to all poor families with children. It is estimated that one-half of such families now receive no aid.

But there is doubt that any move by Congress will be soon enough to head off the benefit-cutting trend in state capitols.

There have been sporadic cuts in benefits by states in the past. But the national trend in payment levels has been upward ever since the federal government began helping states finance welfare programs in Indicative of the new trend, New York and New Jersey-two states which heretofore were pace-setters in raising benefits-were among six states which reduced or restricted benefits during the past year.

Two other states have ordered benefit cuts put into effect this summer, the survey showed. Nebraska plans to cut benefits 10 per cent Aug. 1 and Kansas 20 per cent Sept. 1.

In a dozen states, including California, Benefit cuts were said to be under consideration, or possible, during the coming 12 months, depending in some cases on whether costs of caseloads exceed budget

During the past year, according to the survey, benefits were cut as Benefits withdrawn-Alabama put into force new eligibility rules for Aid to Families with Dependent Children that knocked off the roles 6,000 of the 30,000 families drawing such benefits. New Jersey withdrew from the federal program of aid to needy families with unemployed fathers, substituting its own program in which benefits are onethird lower. Maine abolished aid for needy intact families.

South Dakota cut AFDC benefits 10 per cent, which reduced payment $30 a month for a family of four. New York instituted a uniform statewide level of benefits that cut back payments to 85 per cent for its AFDC families, including all those living in New York City. The reduction amounted to $23 a month for a family of four with no income.

"On the other hand, county agent Pete Maley in Lyon County walked through several fields there and found only two that were infected," Willis said.

While he doesn't want to spread undue alarm, Willis feels blight could become a severe economical problem in Kansas if wet, or hot, humid weather persists.

Midwest markets averaged $27.28 for the first quarter and $16.55 for the last quarter. From January through April of this year, prices have averaged $17.37. These lower prices, combined with higher feed costs, should dampen producer enthusiasm about expanding hog production.

Each 10-cent shift in the price of corn also changes the cost of raising hogs by about 60 cents per hundredweight. With corn prices at $1.55, the average hog producer can expect total production costs to be between $19 and $20 per 100 pounds of pork produced.

Most hog farmers demand good pay for the kind of work involved in hog production. When profits are low, they breed fewer gilts; when profits are high some consider expansion. Generally, the average hog producer can plan on one low-profit year out of each four. Hopefully, the. past eleven months have been part of the low profit year.

Governor, Janssen Apart On Atomic Dump At Lyons

Gov. Robert Docking has continued his battle against the Atomic Energy Commission over location of a proposed nuclear waste repository in abandoned salt mines near Lyons, and a Democratic state senator said the governor is playing politics with the controversy.

"He'll be on whichever side the wind is blowing," said Sen. Jack W. Janssen, D-Lyons at a legislative interim committee meeting.

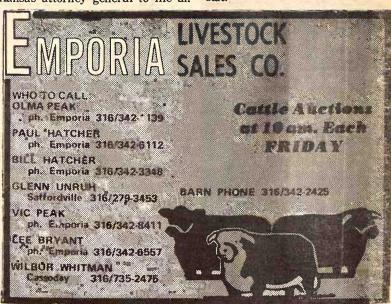

"Of course he thinks it's popular with a majority of the voters of this state to oppose the repository," Janssen said. "He was for it until. some opposition arose."

It has not flared into open animosity, but Docking and Janssen have been on opposite sides of the repository fence since early in the 1971 legislative session because of the governor's emerging opposition to the proposed Atomic Energy Commission project. Docking also is a Democrat, and his party holds only eight State Senate seats.

Janssen reiterated he and many others at Lyons are convinced the AEC will conduct necessary and adequate tests on the abandoned salt mines near Lyons to insure their safety before any dumping of the nation's nuclear wastes begins in 1975—the target date the AEC has set for placing the first radioactive materials in the mines.

Ron Baxter, chairman of the Kansas chapter of the Sierra Club, said the club feels the AEC has violated federal law and specifically

State To Turn Meat Inspection Over To Feds?

A member of the Kansas Legislature predicts that the state will abandon its state meat inspection program.

Rep. Rex Borgen, R-Asherville, made the prediction after the close of a hearing on proposed revision of African Hoa state meat inspection regulations.

Most of the proposed changes are designed to keep the state in compliance with federal meat inspection standards.

Borgen said the meat inspection system is costing the state several hundreds of thousands of dollars a year and was enacted by the Legislature because a number of meat processors said they couldn't live with federal inspection.

Borgen said it appears the meat processors have to meet the same standards, whether inspected by state inspectors or federal inspectors.

He said he thinks the Legislature will decide the state might as well save the cost of the state inspection system and let the federal government do the inspection.

Threat From Disease

The government is alerting far-fever as the most deadly of all foreign swine diseases. Long prevalent in eastern and southern Africa, it spread to Portugal in 1957 and to Spain three years later. It is highly contagious and usually fatal to pigs, but other animals and humans are not believed to be susceptible to it.

The symptoms are so similar to those of hog cholera that it is impossible to tell the difference by looking at a sick animal, but blood tests developed by government scientists make possible quick efforts, scientists have been unable so far to produce an antifever vaccine.

mers, meat processors and everyone concerned with pork and pigs to be on the lookout for any signs of African swine fever, reported for the first time in history to have reached the Western Hemisphere, through Cuba. The Agriculture Department has word that 15,000 diseased hogs have been slaughtered in Havana province and 7,000 in the province of Pinar del Rio. These reports have prompted tightened surveillance at U.S. ports of entry, with inspectors giving close scrutiny to imported processed meats and to the clothing, equipment and footwear of incoming people.

The government rates the African diagnosis of the African fever.

USDA as equal to the federal programs.

The Kansas senators said the area office in Topeka will enable the Consumer and Marketing Service to have an even closer relationship with state officials who administer inspection programs and will offer meat and poultry industrymen a closer point of contact for fulfilling their role in the inspection process.

The Topeka office will report to the regional headquarters of the USDA Meat and Poultry Program in Kansas City.

In Topeka, Rep. Rex Borgen, R-Asherville, predicted the state will abandon its state meat inspection Borgen's prediction was made after the close of a hearing on proposed revision of state meat inspection regulations.

Most of the proposed changes are designed to keep the state in compliance with federal meat inspection standards.

Borgen said the meat inspection system is costing the state several hundreds of thousands of dollars a year and was enacted by the Legislature because a number of meat processors said they couldn't live with federal inspection.

Borgen said he thinks the Legislature will decide the state might as well save the cost of the state inspection system and let the federal government do the in-

No Basis For Some Pesticide Detections

MANHATTAN - Naturally occurring "pseudo-pesticides" may be the partial cause behind contamination of an entire flock of University grown hens, speculates Runk 812 Kasal Lirams have been certified by University department of dairy and poultry science.

Last fall K-State sent a shipment of 1,300 retired hens to a national poultry processing company. After the government sponsored tests, the company found aldrin and dieldrin pesticides residues in the birds which exceeded the maximum

Because none of these pesticides had been used near the poultry farms, an intensive study was conducted by the National Animal Disease Laboratory, U.S. Department of Agriculture, Ames, Iowa. Scientists used gas chromatography to study feed and fat samples from the chickens.

The report, which was released this year, provided no clues as to the source of contamination. The pesticides were present in similar amounts in all samples.

Adams, who says scientists still are not sure where the problem originated, suggests that the detection equipment used to determine contamination may be super-sensitive.

As evidence, he cites a study conducted by the University of Wisconsin. During the years 1909-1911, Wisconsin scientists collected soil samples and sealed them in airtight containers. When these soil samples were reopened recently, researchers decided to test the soil with pesticide detection equipment.

Chromatographic analysis indicated that three chlorinated hydrocarbon type pesticides were present: aldrin, dieldrin, and heptachlor. However, these pesticides had not even been invented at the time the samples originally were taken.

This raises the question of whether what was found in the K-State birds is really a synthetic pesticide or a similar substance that has been in the soil for years," said Adams. He explained that little research has been done in this area since there were no pesticide tolerance limits until recent years.

South Dakota Bangs Free

South Dakota has now been declared Modified-Certified Brucellosis Free. The final hurdle in the state's quest for modified status was crossed after hold-out herds were tested in Hughes, Sully and Hutchinson Counties. Ironically all of the herds of ranchers who refused to allow their cattle to be tested were without reactors.

Guess Now That Wheat Output Beat 1952 Record Production

in 1971 and exceptionally high yields per acre of all small grains were indicated by July 1 information, according to the Kansas Crop and Livestock Reporting Service.

Exceptionally good filling weather during late May and the first half of June pushed small grain yields sharply above earlier expectations.

The 308.1 million bushel wheat crop was 3 per cent above last year and slightly above the previous record production 307.6 million bushels in 1952.

Yields per acre of wheat, oats, barley and rye were above those of any prior years.

Row crops were generally coming along well at mid-year.

Acreage of sorghums planted increased 13 per cent over last year to 5.0 million acres.

Corn plantings were the same as last year's 1.7 million acres but soybean plantings dropped 13 per cent to 934,000 acres.

Winter Wheat

Kansas 1971 wheat production is expected to total a new high record of 308,074,000 bushels, based on July 1 indications.

The estimated yield per acre of 34 bushels also is a record highexceeding last year by 1 bushel.

A record large Kansas wheat crop was the same as last year but was below other recent years. Abandonment of 5.5 per cent of the 9,593,000 acres seeded last fall was less than average.

Cool, damp weather with favorable soil moisture in most areas during the main filling period promoted excellent yields over nearly all of the State. Damage from freeze, diseases and insects was generally light, but hail sharply reduced yields in a number of local

The State's wheat harvest began about June 7 or slightly ahead of the normal starting time in south central border counties. After a week's delay caused by rain, harvest moved rapidly northward and by the end of June had moved into northwest Kansas. By July 3 about four-fifths of the State's wheat was cut, moderately ahead of average. Sorghum and Corn Acreage

Sorghum acreage planted for all purposes is estimated at 4,962,000 acres, 13 per cent above last year.

State farmers expect to harvest 4,833,000 acres for all purposes. This compares with 4,277,000 acres harvested last year and a 10-year 1960-69 average of 4,225,400 acres harvested.

Farmers planted 1,689,000 acres of corn this spring, the same as a year acres are expected to be harvested for all purposes and 1,311,000 acres for grain, of which 114,000 are white corn. Planting was earlier than usual this year and stands were good in most areas.

Corn has grown well, with 14 per cent tasseled by July 3. Southern Corn Leaf Blight infection has been confirmed in 21 counties but major damage has been confined to a limited number of fields so far.

Kansas corn farmers planted 35 per cent T-cytoplasm seed susceptible to blight and 32 per cent a blend of T-cytoplasm and Ncytoplasm seed.

Other Crops

Oat production is forecast at 10.0 million bushels, 2 per cent less than last year's crop, but otherwise the largest since 1963. The 238,000 acres for harvest are expected to yield a record high 42 bushels per acre.

Barley production for 1971 is forecast at 7.1 million bushels, about the same as the 1970 crop. Yield per acre was a record high 39 bushels.

Rye production is forecast at 2.5 million bushels, with the 110,000 acres harvested averaging 23 bushels per acre.

Acreage of soybeans planted this year is estimated at 934,000 acres, 13 per cent below last year, with 894,000 acres expected to be harvested for Sugar beet acreage planted was 42,000 acres, with growers expecting to harvest 40,000 acres, compared with 43,900 acres last year.

Expected dry edible bean harvested acreage is 8,000 acres, sharply below 1970. Production of Irish potatoes is estimated at 124,000 cwt., 3 per cent above a year earlier.

Commercial apple production is expected to total 15.0 million pounds, up 3.4 million pounds from a year ago, and the second largest crop in the last decade.

Peach production is forecast at 5.8 million pounds. 2.2 million pounds below last year.

Hay Crops and Pasture

All hay acreage for harvest is estimated at 2,422,000 acres, 2 per cent above 1970. This includes 1,125,000 acres of alfalfa, 526,000 acres of other tame hay and 771,000 acres of wild hay. Pastures were providing Kansas livestock about average grazing on July 1 this year.

He stated that this year's tour will include commercial rancher-feeder operations, X-bred cow-calf programs, yearling grass programs, purebred cattle, as well as a stop at the Kansas State University Experimental Range Unit. KENTUCKY STRAIGHT BOURBON WHISKEY, 86 PROOF. DISTILLED AND BOTTLED BY THE FAMOUS OLD CROW DISTILLERY CO., FRANKFORT, KY.

But now scientists are becoming concerned about a potential hazard arising from this success: The danger that the world's farmers may become so dependent on a few highly select plant varieties that a single disease could cause a catastrophic crop failure.

That risk is coming home with a vengeance to American farmers this year in the form of a new strain of

The big hope in the world's race to southern leaf blight that has attacked corn crops in 23 states and is rapidly spreading. Illinois has asked the Department of Agriculture to declare sections of Southern Illinois as disaster areas because of the corn blight. Last 'year, the disease decimated crops from Canada to Texas

The blight causes such widespread losses because the hybrid corn used by most farmers in the United States is vulnerable to the disease. Cornseed companies and research laboratories are working on an allout effort to produce new varieties of corn that are not vulnerable to blight. While these are on the way, there is a shortage of blightresistant seed, and farmers face heavy losses.

July 13, 1971

Fortunately, the United States has a diverse agricultural output so the emergency can be met with little impact on consumers. But ecologists fear that famine could occur on a world-wide level, if farmers keep narrowing the varieties of plants

For this reason the National Academy of Sciences-National Research Council has established a committee on "vulnerability of major crops." Agricultural experts will examine the variety structure of major U.S. crops to estimate the amount of risk.

Until quite recently, farmers never thought of the new and more productive crop varieties in terms of risk. To them, it was an opportunity to grow more food on the same acreage, with higher profits.

In general, high yield means that crops are resistant to diseases, extremes of weather and insects. But to achieve this resistance, agricultural scientists have to eliminate variety from the plants. And as they eliminate variety, they increase the chance that a single disease, will affect a large number

Agricultural scientists face the tricky problem of getting just the right mixture of variety and uniformity-crops have to be alike enough to be easily handled, yet different enough to avoid susceptibility to a single disease. Instead of following a narrow track toward higher yields only, scientists have to take into account the face that nature is tricky and changing.

They've found that out already in trying to spread the green revolution from country to country. Shortstemmed wheat that resisted rust diseases found in Mexico proved to be vulnerable when transplanted to India and Pakistan. Experts met the challenge by cross-breeding the new crops with local strains.

The whole affair illustrates that man's efforts to tinker with the balance of nature are never quite as simple and direct as they seem to be at first. Just as DDT turned from a savior of life to a menace as is side effects became known, so the revolution in plant breeding appears to be a 2-edged sword.

Understandably, some employes and retirees were miffed and declared as they, so often have, that it was "a helluva way to run a railroad."

The railroad unions took the issue to court, and a federal judge in argument seems almost academic. Philadelphia issued a restraining order on June 21 requiring passes to be honored. The judge extended the restraining order to July 16 and promised a decision then.

Amtrak officials argue that passes are gifts and there is nothing in union contracts requiring them. Railroad men counter that passes always have been a regular and necessary right of the employes.

With even fewer trains running under Amtrak than before, the It's more a matter of principle than anything else.

"I don't know what difference it makes," said a Frisco spokesman in Wichita. "We haven't had any passenger service for seven or eight years anyway.

"They cut off all our foreign-line passes July 1, 1970, and it was all half-fare for some time before that. You just about have to drive where you want to go anyway.'

But an employe of another railroad saw it differently.

"Passes aren't any good anyhow," he said, "but I hope the union beats them on it. This is just another way to put us down, and I don't like it." He said he hadn't used his pass for several years.

A Missouri Pacific spokesman said an employe in his office already had gotten a half-rate order on Amtrak but "So far as I know, passes are not honored."

"Prior to Amtrak, many roads were in on the 'home road' plan," he said. "That is, a man with a MoPac pass could travel for halffare on the Santa Fe, for example. That was in operation for several years, but applications have to be made to Amtrak now." Even under the home road plan, half-fare tickets were good only on certain trains.

Hauling passholders had gotten to be big business when Amtrak took over. A Santa Fe spokesman said his road honored some 16,000 passes during the first four months of 1971, according to the records.

"That's about the equivalent of having one train a day just for passes," he said. "At $10 to $15 per mile for operating costs, that makes it pretty expensive. It figures out at over $3 million per year in dead loss, and that's part of the cause for the reduction in passenger service.

'Amtrak made the decision on passes-we didn't. When we have a man on company business we tell him to buy his ticket and put it on his expense account.

"Passes are something custom has dictated, nothing else. I think we're getting more people on the trains now just because the space is available to them instead of to people riding passes.'

But it seems certain the argument is not yet ended.

IT FINALLY FELL

Last October, observers were making book that a leaning silo on the Dick Wellman ranch near Alden in Rice county was going to fall. The structure, 7 or 8 years old, had fallen noticeably out of plumb and was attracting enough viewers who hoped to catch sight of the fall that Wellman jokingly threatened to sell tickets.

As suddenly as it started to tilt, the silo seemed to stabilize its cocked position and held together all thru the winter and spring.

A week ago, it finally fell. No one was injured and no other property was damaged. The day before it fell, the story could have been different. "Seven of us were inside of it 24 hours earlier trying to figure out why it was leaning," said Brad Wellman, 21, son of the ranch

The silo cost $18,000 when it was built and had a capacity for 2000 tons of silage. K-State extension personnel had studied the leaning silo, for it was one of several relatively new silos with the same problem.

National Honor To Ft. Scott FFA

MANHATTAN-A Kansas Future Farmer of America Chapter is one of three in the nation this year to receive the Farm Conferences Award of Merit.

The honor has been won by the Fort Scott FFA Chapter, and recognizes that chapter's outstanding safety promotion programs conducted in the Fort Scott community during the past year.

The Fort Scott Chapter award was announced by Phillip Schmidt, representing the National Safety Council, Chicago, Ill. The award will be presented formally Tuesday morning, July 13, as a highlight of the 43rd annual convention of the Kansas Association of FFA, which will be held on the Kansas State University campus at Manhattan July 11-13.

According to Harold Shoaf, Topeka, executive secretary of the Kansas Association of FFA, only three other chapters in the nation are receiving the "Award of Merit" this year. The Fort Scott safety award is only the third one in the history of the Kansas Association of FFA for a Kansas chapter.

Test On Forage Sorghum Hay Vs. Silage

Forage sorghum silage produced faster gains at less cost than forage sorghum hay in a test conducted at Kansas State University's Fort Hays Branch Experiment Station.

Researchers wanted to know if hay would produce the rapid gains desired in a typical cattle backgrounding program. The ayerage daily gain for wintering calves fed hay was 1.87 pounds, compared to 2.10 pounds for those fed forage sorghum silage:

Taking into account hay wastage and estimating the cost of sorghum silage at $10 per ton, researchers placed the relative value of the hay at $20.64 per ton.

The average weight of air dry feed for 100 pounds of grain was 866 pounds for silage and 1,023 pounds
