Recorders of events

Recorders of events.

That's what both secretaries and reporters are. But there are differences in the way they record events.

This test, mostly about secretaries and reporters, points out some of the likenesses and differences. After you take the test, you can grade yourself. The answers are at the end.

1. T F In the secretary's report, events of the meeting are generally given in the order they happened.
2. T F In the reporter's report, events of the meeting are given with the most important or interesting thing first.
3. T F Both reporter and secretary need to take notes during the meeting.
4. T F It's a good idea for both secretary and reporter to write their account promptly after the meeting, but promptness is of greatest importance to the _____.
5. After the secretary's report is carefully prepared, it is _____.
6. After the reporter's article is carefully prepared it is _____.
7. T F The reporter sits at the table beside the president.
8. It is more important to send news of your 4-H meeting to (Kansas 4-H Journal, your local newspaper).
9. T F If you send news of a 4-H meeting to Kansas 4-H Journal, your article could be as short as one paragraph.
10. The (secretary, reporter) writes letters for the club.
11. The (secretary, reporter) may be chairman of the publicity committee.
12. In addition to writing about 4-H meetings, the reporter will want to try his hand at human interest or _____ stories.
13. T F Both the secretary and the reporter should write the facts and not their own opinions.
14. T F If you read a well-written secretary's report and a well-written reporter's account of the same 4-H meeting, you can tell which is which.

15. A 4-H project which combines particularly well with the reporter's job is _____.

16. Name two ways to tell the 4-H story in addition to writing articles for your local paper and Kansas 4-H Journal.

17. Which of these is the beginning of the secretary's report and which is the lead of the reporter's report?

A. The regular meeting of the Good Guys 4-H Club took place at the Happy Valley Schoolhouse May 6. President Bili Jones called the meeting to order.

B. Members of Good Guys 4-H Club will have a chance to practice livestock judging during the club tour May 24, president Bill Jones said at the meeting May 6 at the Happy Valley Schoolhouse. Judging classes will be set up at Martin's farm.

18. T F Any 4-H member may submit material for the All 4-H'ers issue of Kansas 4-H Journal.

Answers:

- 1—T; 2—T; 3—T; 4—reporter; 5—written in the secretary's book; 6—sent to the local newspaper; 7—F; 8—your local newspaper; 9—T; 10—secretary; 11—reporter; 12—feature; 13—T; 14—T; 15—photography; 16—giving radio or TV programs, preparing window displays, making floats, booths, posters; 17—A—secretary's report, B—reporter's report; 18—T.

Use of the 4-H name and symbol approved by the secretary of Agriculture of the United States, January 23, 1951, under the provisions of the laws as reenacted by Sec. 707 of the Act of June 25, 1948, Public Law No. 772 80th Congress (10 USC 797).

Private support enriches 4-H

By Merle L. Eyestone
 Executive Director
 Kansas 4-H Foundation

Many of the special and enriching experiences available to Kansas 4-H members and leaders are being made possible by support from the private sector.

In Kansas, annual donations for county and state support exceed two million dollars. In addition, voluntary leader time (figured at $3.50 per hour) and donated out-of-pocket expenses from Kansas 4-H leaders is estimated at twelve million dollars annually.

The donated time and dollars from private support represents an approximate annual $200 investment per youth associated with Kansas 4-H programs in 1979. The national average of federal, state, and county tax money invested for 4-H participants was $40 annually in 1979.

Donations from the private sector may come from individuals, foundations, corporations, or from individuals making bequests. In 1980 more than $43 billion will be donated to causes.

Individuals donate the most — a whopping 84 percent of the total assets given — while foundations give 6 percent, bequests represent 6 percent, and corporations donate approximately 4 percent of total donations.

Nationally there are 26,000 foundations, with 250 located in Kansas. Annually Kansas foundations give nearly $6.5 million to institutions, charities, and causes.

Why do people donate?

To help a worthy cause — to memorialize a loved one, to perpetuate their values, to recognize the opportunity to put money to good use, and to gain satisfactions from helping people. And probably the major reason people donate is because someone asks them.

The Kansas 4-H Foundation with its Board of Trustees and staff is dedicated to the challenges of assisting in meeting the 4-H needs of youth in Kansas by giving donations, asking for dollars, or assisting in the training of workers who are willing to ask for support of 4-H causes.

In 1981 greater emphasis will be placed on securing private support in meeting the needs for increased leader training, membership promotion, materials and supplies, and starting new and innovative projects. Some $150,000 has been listed as the estimated cost of 4-H needs in the above areas for the 1981 4-H year on a statewide basis.

There were 1,807 donors throughout the state who assisted the 4-H program in 1979. Our goal is that by 1982 this number will grow to 2,500 on an annual basis.

We hope you or you and your family will be a 1980 and 1981 contributor, helping us to help youth.

Prepare for the 4-H Dairy Show

By Dr. J. R. Dunham
Kansas State University

Preparations made now can pay big dividends at the 4-H Dairy Show this summer. Every good showman knows that the work done earlier is what wins fitting and showing contests.

Feeding is an important part of fitting since the hair coat and general appearance of the animal will be affected by feeding. Dairy animals should be in a thrifty condition but not fat since fat makes the animal look thick. Thin animals will have a rough hair coat that lacks luster. Most heifers will need four to six pounds of a grain mixture and all the good quality forages they will consume. Cows should be fed enough grain to maintain maximum production.

Beet pulp helps the animal take a good fill on show day. However, some animals do not eat beet pulp at first, so feed it for a few weeks before the show. Beet pulp should be soaked in water before feeding.

Start early to break animals to lead. It is impossible to do a good job showing a dairy animal that does not lead properly. Start by tying the animal up for a few days and then begin leading to water or feed. It soon will lead easily.

Next, train your animal to lead slowly with her head up. Then teach her to stand squarely on all four feet. She then should be taught to back up by applying pressure at the point of her shoulder in order to position her feet correctly when showing.

Grooming dairy animals should start early, too. Inexperienced showmen should clip their animals at least a month before showing so that mistakes can be corrected later. The final clipping should be done within three days of the show.

Start washing the animal early so that all the stains can be removed before show day. Avoid washing too often as it removes natural oil from the skin and hair coat. The animal should be washed the final time on the day before the show, and spot washed the day of the show.

After your animal is properly fitted and trained, it is up to you to show her to her best advantage. Dairy animals should be led from the left side in a clockwise direction. Keep a short hold on the halter and make the animal move slowly with her head up. When the judge asks you to pose your animal, keep the hind leg nearest the judge slightly back on heifers and slightly forward on cows. Keep your animal looking alert at all times and show her to the best advantage all the time you are in the ring.

Many hours of advanced preparation are needed to fit and train a dairy animal for showing, but it's all worthwhile when the judge signals for you to line up in first place.

June is dairy month and Kansas 4-H'ers who are enrolled in the dairy goat project want everyone to remember that their "miniature cows" are a pretty neat project. Actually, 4-H'ers who have dairy goats are very enthusiastic about them — they are sure that goats have many advantages for the family looking for an economical source of milk and also for the 4-H'er looking for an affectionate animal that's easily cared for.

Dairy goats have been a part of the 4-H scene for several years now, although it is one of the smaller projects. Several opportunities have opened up for 4-H'ers. 1980 is the third year 4-H'ers may show dairy goats at the Kansas State Fair, and this year, an open show will start. A nationally recognized judge will officiate both shows.

Spring is for kids

By Lane and Jennifer Yocum
Detroit Ramblers 4-H Club
Dickinson County

Spring is that wonderful time of year on our farm when the baby kids begin appearing. When the time gets near it's up in the morning and out to the goat barn as fast as our legs will take us — and then suddenly — they're here — one or two or sometimes even three adorable, wobbly legged little creatures.

Five years ago when we bought our first does, we had no idea what we were supposed to look for in a dairy goat. Walking through the goat barns at the Central Kansas Fair in Abilene we saw a "For Sale" sign on the grand champion Alpine and her baby daughter. This seemed like a good place to start. Lane bought the doe "Patti" and Jennifer bought her baby "Sugar." Sugar has since been sold but Patti is still in our herd along with six other purebred Alpine does we have either raised or purchased since then.

Milk production is the most important reason for owning a dairy goat. The thing we must remember is that it costs as much to feed a poor producer as it does to feed a good producer. This is why we try constantly for herd improvement. A good milker will produce at least a gallon or more of milk a day and she will eat approximately 50¢ worth of grain and hay per day. She will milk 10 months of the year and be dry 2 months before she kids.

Goats are very intelligent and affectionate animals and one of the cleanest you'll ever find. You have probably heard that goats will eat anything. Don't believe it. They are very fussy eaters; most of them will refuse to touch anything dropped to the ground. They don't eat tin cans but they may nibble the paper labels on them. Paper is made from trees and goats do love a good tree, especially young fruit trees and rose bushes.

We know from experience that good fencing is important. We converted an old chicken house into a goat shed for our kids and used steel cattle panels for fencing. This not only keeps the kids in, it also keeps other animals out, such as stray dogs that might harm them. We have a 16' x 24' barn for our older does.

The buck is a worthy creature, but he is responsible for whatever reputation goats may have for being foul-smelling. During breeding season, September through February, he emits a powerful musk odor offensive to humans (but not the does). For this reason most people with just a few does do not keep a buck around.

One of the highlight of Lane's project was two years ago, in 1978, when his Alpine doe was picked "Best Doe of Show" at the first 4-H Dairy Goat Show ever held at the Kansas State Fair at Hutchinson.

We have learned a lot from our dairy goat project. It has taught us the responsibility of taking care of an animal; the importance of keeping accurate records; the ability to select a good animal; poise and courteous attitude of a showman.

For success in this project there is one thing that is very necessary, love for your animal. Without it there would be no joy on those spring mornings when we rush to the barn to see if the miracle has happened. As you can tell, there is nothing we like better than to talk about our kids.

Lane Yocum, Dickinson County 4-H'er, shows the first grand champion doe at the Kansas State Fair in 1978.

On the level, it's great!

Set your sights on State Youth Conservation Camp

By Fred Trump
USDA Soil Conservation Service
Salina

Going to the annual State Youth Conservation Camp at Rock Springs Ranch, the state 4-H center, is an upbeat and "super" way to learn about the environment and how our natural resources can be conserved.

The wise use of these resources has done much to make this nation great. But it's an uphill battle that should be a major concern to young people who will soon inherit the land and its resources.

The setting of the Rock Springs center is ideal for learning, gaining an appreciation of conservation, and having outdoor fun. Just ask those who have gone to the conservation camp in the past! Eighty to 120 young men and women attend each year.

The 1980 camp will be July 17-20 and will emphasize investigation and participation by the youth in such varied topics as forest, water, wildlife, and soil conservation, as well as an overall look at man's effects upon the environment.

You don't have to be a 4-H club member to attend the camp, but you do need to be between 13 and 19 years of age.

The $35 cost isn't expensive for what you get. In fact, the conservation district in your county may provide scholarships to attend. Inquire at the local USDA Soil Conservation Service office in your county right away.

George Davis, Soil Conservation Service district conservationist at Minneapolis, shows the campers how to lay out a terrace for erosion control.

Helpful hints on preserving wildlife

By Denice DeSpain
Louisburg

Each of us can do something to help preserve our furred and feathered friends.

- Leave a little extra cover along fence lines and fence corners.
- In areas where farming isn't practical, create havens for animals to reside.

Busy Beavers thank leaders

Pride was flying right along with Charley and Margery Pickell of Fredonia as, in late April, they headed toward Washington, D.C., and the National 4-H Leader Forum. They were proud of their 4-H club, the Busy Beavers of New Albany, who had had a special benefit dinner in their honor, and of the friendly people in their Wilson County community who had come to the dinner.

After the Pickells had made plans to go to the Leader Forum, the 4-H members and the other leaders decided to have a roast pig dinner to help pay expenses of the trip. It wasn't necessary, the 4-H'ers knew; it was just a way to say "Thank you!" for the hours the Pickells have given to 4-H work.

They have indeed given many hours since they helped to organize the Busy Beavers 4-H Club, chartered in 1962. As a community leader, Charley has received his 17-year 4-H leader's pin. Margery is now serving as entomology leader.

At the conference the Pickells were part of a group of 38 Kansas 4-H leaders who met with their counterparts from New York, Texas, and Oklahoma.

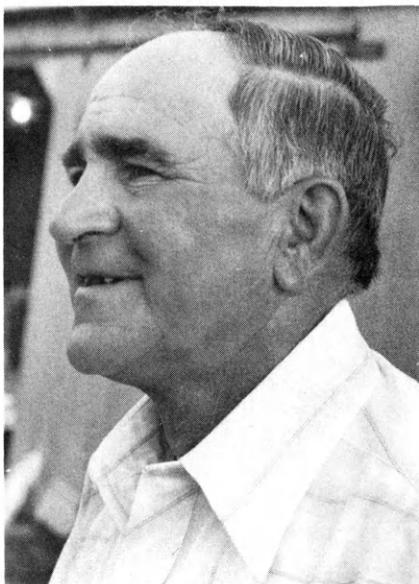

The conference was wonderful, the Pickells say. They stayed at the National 4-H Center, shared ideas with other leaders, and went to workshops on such topics as energy, careers, and new games and 4-H fun. And they got to see Washington, D.C.

A place for Peter

On February 8, 1980. Floyd L. Fooshee of Route 5, Wichita, quickly dried off an unusually large Saanen buck kid, the result of mating Fooshee's Neddy and Fooshee's Netty. The extreme size and excellent background of the kid made him special, even if he was out of a first freshener.

A few days later, a sad Mr. Fooshee was faced with a difficult decision: What should I do with this kid? Due to a misfortune in his herd, Fooshee did not have enough milk for the kid and other responsibilities.

With a modern form of an old technique, 4-H'er makes a room-enhancing quilt

By Valerie Brown
Newton

Quilting can be a part of three projects: clothing, home improvement, and arts and crafts.

I took home improvement this past year in 4-H. The colors of my quilt go with the colors of my room.

The pattern I chose was Dolls of the World. I chose this pattern because it was a liquid embroidery pattern. Liquid embroidery is a part of the arts and crafts project in our club. So my quilt is a modern application of an old technique.

The material I chose for my quilt was a cotton-polyester blend. It's strong but light weight, easy to paint on and easy to quilt.

Setting a quilt is the sewing together of the blocks to form one big sheet. I set my quilt with a green strip down the side of each block with a flowered block at the corners.

Batting is the middle layer of the quilt. It gives a quilt warmth and fluffiness. The batting I used was polyester.

I used a quilting frame when quilting my quilt. A quilting frame is a large rectangle brace that holds the quilt taut.

When quilting, you should always use quilting thread. It's made especially for quilting. You should also use quilting needles. They are size 7.

When quilting, you should take about 8 to 10 stitches to an inch. They should be as even as possible.

After the quilting is done you need to finish the edges. I used the method of applying a separate strip. Last year in clothing, I learned how to miter a corner. It was very helpful in mitring the corners of my quilt.

After the quilt is finished you need to know how to care for it so it will last longer.

You can wash most quilts in the washing machine and dry them in the dryer. If you dry them on a clothes line you should hang them over two or more parallel clotheslines. Never iron a quilt. This crushes the batting.

The best place for a quilt is on a bed or wall. If it is to be folded away, it should be wrapped in tissue paper or a sheet, not plastic.

Preserving wildlife

- Build a few brush piles. This helps to clean up dead limbs and trees and makes good cover for wildlife.
- Plant trees. They are also useful as windbreaks and for firewood, as well as for shelter for wildlife. For a nominal fee, trees can be obtained from: Department of Forestry, Kansas State University, 2610 Claflin Road, Manhattan, Kansas 66502. The trees are available in spring and fall.
- Revamp or build a new pond. The Soil Conservation Service office in your county may be able to help.
- Restock an old pond, or stock a new pond. Write: Pond Stocking, Fish and Game Commission, Route 2, Box 54A, Pratt, Kansas 67124.
- Plant native grasses. Many times the soil conservation service can help here.
- Thin thickets so grass can grow.
- Control erosion.

These are a few helpful hints.

The agencies mentioned are willing to work with you to make your place better for our friends to live.

1979 Kansas 4-H Foundation Honor Roll

Remarks from the Vice-Chairman of the Board of Trustees of the Kansas 4-H Foundation:

The Board of Directors of the Kansas 4-H Foundation has given me the privilege of expressing to you our thanks for the wonderful support you have given its projects this past year.

Your contributions this year and in the past make available to the people of Kansas, and especially 4-H youth, the matchless Rock Springs Ranch where many young people have enjoyed perhaps their first real camping experience. More than 21,000 persons used the facility there in 1979.

Lake Perry 4-H Center continued to expand its programs while holding to the concept of a more rugged, self-sufficient, outdoor camping life.

Clovia 4-H House at Manhattan is operating at capacity and the girls continue to exhibit their ingenuity and management skills to whip the escalating costs of a college education. At Hays a second Clovia is flourishing and is carrying out an ambitious plan of expansion.

The camping facility at Ford

County Lake has had major improvements in the past year and continues to serve 4-H families in the southwest area.

The Foundation also assists in providing awards, scholarships, and educational trips, and it supports special program aids and leadership training.

Kansas 4-H Journal is one enterprise for which rising costs have created particular problems. We continue to believe in the need for this publication (how else could I thank all 1,806 of you?) and we are initiating changes that we hope will alleviate this problem, but we also solicit your help for the Journal.

Being a tax exempt foundation does not seem to give us any special status when it comes to that most vicious tax, inflation. We therefore must devote more and more of your dollars to maintaining the excellent facilities we have. Some of our thoughtful donors foresaw this problem and have made provisions for the upkeep of their gifts, and for this we are most grateful.

In addition, we have set up maintenance reserves, and are devoting more of our efforts to increasing unrestricted gifts.

As you see, we have much to be grateful for: our facilities, our wonderful devoted staff, our cooperative relationship with the Kansas State Extension Service, and most of all, you, the donors. Without your generous contributions we would have nothing.

We thank you!

Clovia — a home for college students

If you're going to college this fall and if you wonder where you'll live, consider a Clovia 4-H cooperative house.

There are two in Kansas, one at Kansas State University and one at Fort Hays State University. Both offer savings for food and housing for women students, and offer fun and companionship, as well.

With a well-organized system, the women share the work of the house; this "helps to cut the cost and provides opportunities for lots of fun times while working together," Brenda Bauer, the president of the chapter at FHSU, said. There, monthly costs this fall are expected to be approximately $120, perhaps $50 less than in dormitories.

Clovia at FHSU is only three years old, in contrast to the chapter at K-State which was founded in 1931. The Clovia house there provides housing for 62 students.

At Hays, members of the Clovia chapter are looking forward to a change, a move into a house much larger than the one where 10 members lived this past school year.

Merle Eyestone, executive director of Kansas 4-H Foundation, said that substantial gifts from Rooks County Savings and Loan Association of Plainville and from Peoples Savings and Loan Association of Sterling provided the down payment for the purchase of a former fraternity house. It will eventually provide a home for 40 young women.

Earlier this year, to expedite renovation of the structure, the women of Clovia spent a day ripping up worn carpets and ripping off damaged paneling. Working with them to get the house ready for the contractors were parents, advisers, and friends, including Merle Eyestone.

Since then, walls have been removed for better space use, plumbing and electricity have been updated, and the house is being redecorated in tones of peach, yellow, beige and brown. It's to be ready when college starts in late August.

Costs of living are made lower because of the few hours of work given each week by each resident, but it's not all work and no play for the students who live at Clovia.

"Many social events are held both fall and spring semesters," president Brenda comments. "In the fall, events include Parents' Day, Oktoberfest booth, and Halloween, Thanksgiving, and Christmas dinners and parties. The spring semester brings with it a senior breakfast, Valentine's Day party, and a spring formal banquet and dance." The theme for this year's formal was "Moonlight and Roses."

Both Clovia houses have space for several more women students for the coming term.

Selection for membership is based on a written application, a personal interview, and recommendations. The selection committee considers the applicant's involvement in 4-H or a similar activity, scholastic achievement, personality, and community activities, as well as her interest and need.

Application forms are available at your county extension office. Or you can write to the membership chairman.

For the Fort Hays chapter, this is

Cindy Hullman, R.R., Saint John, Kansas 67576, phone 316-458-4035.

For K-State, write to Chris Fields, Box 402, Sublette, Kansas 67877, or call 316-675-2274. Or write to Debbie Clubine, R.R. 1, Box 18, Havana, Kansas 67347. Her telephone number is 316-673-4332.

President of the K-State chapter is Karla Hefty, Valley Falls.

Now this story has the happiest of endings. Instead of destroying the buck, Mr. Fooshee became an angel in disguise. He called up 4-H's Grace and John Chapman, Route 1, Towanda, and gave them the kid whom they promptly named "Peter." Fooshee's Peter had a new home, and believe me, those 4-H's are proud of him! He is the inspiration for their spring 4-H talks.

Grace, 16, gave a talk called "Peter's Genes," explaining some basic genetics, and received first alternate.

John, 10, gave his talk on "A

From the Northeast Area:

Cloud County: The Jolly-Jay-Hawks 4-H Club was host to the Fairview Hilltoppers at an exchange meeting in April. After each club had a short business meeting, Alan Elstrom, a parent of a Jolly-Jay-Hawk member, presented a magic show. As Merlin the Magician, Elstrom has also presented his show to the local grade schools, Marsha Jones reports. . . Members of Miltonvale Hustlers 4-H Club are passing out vials of life. These small bottles containing one's medical history are kept in the refrigerator. The bottles are marked clearly so anyone can recognize them. Reporter Nadine Breen writes, "We care about your life, so show you care by getting a vial of life."

House for Peter," and told how to house a buck. He received top blue in the county and a blue at regional.

Thanks to Mr. Fooshee's generosity, the herd of Someday Acres Saanens now has an excellent herd sire years before the proud owners would have been able to pool their pennies to obtain one.

Both 4-H'ers recently presented their talks to the members of the Kansas Dairy Goat Association.

From the South Central Area:

Butler County: The square dancers from Bluestem 4-H Club received a blue ribbon at Regional 4-H Day in Wichita. Their roll call for the April meeting was to tell what happened on April Fool's Day. The Bluestem 4-H Club publishes a paper, the Bluestem Gazette, which is sent to members to remind them of upcoming events and to give news of the club.

From the Southeast Area:

Miami County: 4-H'ers have been busy building and making signs to welcome motorists to the county. The seven signs will be placed by highways near the county line. The signs read "Welcome to Miami County from the 4-H Clubs." The green and white signs were painted in the 4-H Building on the Miami County Fairgrounds in Paola. Gills Studio, Inc., and Miami County Co-op contributed to this 4-H project. See picture below.

Drying, a way to preserve food

By Susan Schoneweis
Manhattan

If you're tired of canning during hot, steamy weather and your freezer is filled to overflowing, try one of the oldest methods of food preservation: drying.

Drying or dehydration is an inexpensive method of preserving foods. It doesn't require special jars and lids as canning does, and although dried foods keep longer if frozen after drying, freezing is not necessary.

Several methods can be used to dry foods.

The oldest method, sun-drying, has both good and bad points. It is low in cost, large amounts of food can be dried at one time, and sun-dried sulfured fruit has a sunshiny, bright color.

However, sun-drying can be done only when the humidity is low and where there are sure to be several days of 90°F, or hotter, weather. Insects can also be a problem, and foods must be heated in the oven for a few minutes after drying is completed to kill any insect eggs. The heating destroys some nutrients.

Oven drying is a good method if only a small amount of food is to be dried. Nylon netting can be stretched tightly over the oven racks to hold the food. A constant temperature of 140-150°F should be maintained for even drying. Too high a temperature will cause foods to harden on the outside so the inside cannot dry out.

One of the easiest and most satisfactory ways of drying foods is with a dehydrator. A good quality dehydrator can be worth the investment if used regularly. It may be either a commercially built model or a "do-it-yourself" model built from such plans as those in USDA Home and Garden Bulletin #217. A dehydrator should have a heat source, fan, thermostat, and adjustable air intake and outlet vents.

This method of drying will yield a better quality dried product than any other method. In a dehydrator, foods can be dried 24 hours a day without constant checking, and without worrying about unsanitary conditions and the weather.

The only disadvantages of a dehydrator are the initial cost and cost of operation, but these are outweighed by the many advantages.

Many books and extension bulletins are available with more detailed directions for drying than space permits here, but a few basic directions for drying fruits and vegetables are given below.

To dry fruits, sort and select high quality, ready-to-eat, fresh fruit. If it's right for eating, it's right for drying. In preparation for pre-treatment and drying, first peel, core or pit the fruit, and cut it into halves, quarters, or slices. Peel on dried fruit tends to be tough and sometimes bitter.

A pre-treatment helps prevent browning, and will help prevent vitamins A and C from being lost. Effective solutions are one-fourth teaspoon sodium bisulfite for each quart of water, or one tablespoon ascorbic acid per quart of water, or lemon juice and water. Fruit should be placed in the solution as the fruit is prepared but do not leave it in for more than one hour.

After treatment, drain the fruit and spread it on trays for drying. Leave some space for air circulation, then dry until it is leathery but not sticky.

Use top quality food for drying

Vegetables for drying should also be of top quality. When preparing vegetables, cut away any spoiled or decayed spots and keep pieces uniform so they will dry evenly. To inactivate the enzymes which cause ripening, most vegetables, except peppers, onions, and tomatoes, need to be steam- or water-blanching before drying. Vegetables should be blanched just until heated all the way through.

To dry vegetables, preheat the dryer and arrange similar sized pieces on trays, leaving room for air circulation. All vegetables except onions, garlic, and peppers can be dried together. These three can be dried together, but may flavor milder-flavored vegetables.

Think Safety

Farm Safety
Bicycle Safety
Highway Safety
Safety in the Home

Think safety —
It's too important to ignore.

And then take action on your thoughts.

Develop safe habits in your own life —
Teach others safe ways —
Correct hazards in the community.

Your 4-H club can work with others in your community to teach safe ways of doing and to correct neighborhood hazards. Safety makes a good club project, because 4-H members of all ages can work together on it.

If it's your club's project, you are probably well underway by now.

If not, there's still time to get to work promoting safety.

Keep a record of the things your club does, and this fall submit your records for judging.

The 4-H club with the top safety program will win a trip to Kansas 4-H Congress for eight 4-H members and two leaders. The next nine clubs will win $25 for the club's treasury and a scholarship to the Farm Bureau Youth Safety Seminar next summer.

Someone at your county extension office can tell you how to enter and can give you safety information. Or write to Kansas Farm Bureau, Safety Division, Manhattan, Kansas 66502.

Country Pals is 50

The 50th anniversary for Country Pals 4-H Club of Rice County in April was like other 4-H reunions — a happy time for seeing old friends and remembering good times.

Then, too, a special thing happened which isn't typical of most reunions, when the club received congratulations from the Kansas House of Representatives. The resolution passed by the House commending the club for its 50 years of service was delivered to the group by a former member, state representative LeRoy Fry.

Among displays at the Little River Methodist Church was an autograph quilt made before 1930 by members of the Country Pals Sewing Club, a forerunner of the present club.

Country Pals 4-H Club was organized in 1930 with 27 members, and was chartered the next year, Tracy Hodgson reports.

Drying food

When testing for dryness, vegetables that are properly dried can be described as crisp, brittle, tough, or cracking hard.

Dried foods should be stored in airtight containers, in darkness, and at a cool temperature. The cooler the temperature, the longer the storage life.

Drying foods is easy, economical, and fun — so try it — you'll like it!

4-H'er builds, wires food stand for club

Shannon McPherson shows two of the things he made in the electric project, a metal detector and an engine analyzer, which is a tune-up set made to test every system in an engine.

Although Shannon McPherson of Topeka has completed his final year as a member of Grantville 4-H Club, he's not likely to be forgotten. His fellow 4-H'ers will have a reason to think of him every time they sell food at farm sales, sell fireworks, or have any other use for the stand he made for the club.

The stand, about 7' x 14', is made of wood with a metal frame. It's enclosed, with a door. Shannon wired it with a double power supply so food can be heated, and gave it double overhead lights.

Using welding skills learned in advanced electricity, Shannon made an engine stand so it's convenient to work on car engines. Another enterprise was making a cycle trailer to pull behind his pickup. Shannon enjoys working on engines and riding his three motorcycles.

A 4-H member for 10 years, Shannon was enrolled in the electric project nine years. During that time, he made an air compressor, strobe light, four-band radio, radar detector, and a timing light.

Among other projects were woodworking, gardening, and small engine repair.

A graduate of Perry-Lecompton High School, Shannon works for his dad's demolition company.
