THE TRASPORTATION QUESTION.

The movement in the West for the reduction of effect of stimulating the business men of the East to move in the matter.

A New York telegram of the 14th, states that a meetng of a number of gentlemen representing the principal commercial interests, such as groceries, dry goods, hardware, &c., had been held the day before in the rooms of the importers' and grocers' Board of Trade, for the purpose of confering as to the propriety of calling a public meeting of the mercantile and other business men, to take action upon the railroad problem. The object of the proposed meeting will be to suggest measures for remedying abuses which they say the driving tax, does away with the last objection that can be railroad companies now inflict upon the community, and to limit their charges for freight, &c. Happily for the West, the East is at last finding out that its own interests are quite as much embarrassed by the high rates of freight, as are those of the West; and the latter will now have help in the effort to redress a grievance which is seriously depressing its industries. It is very common to hear people talk flippantly of the folly of the demand for reduction in transportation as a means of relief. They assure us that the people of the East would buy no more corn or wheat if it could be carried to them for nothing; and jump to the conclusion that even an entire abrogation of the cost of transportation would add nothing to the value of the crops transported. If the consumers at the East were to receive all the benefit to be derived from the reduction or abrogation of the cost of transportation, the condition of the Western producer would of course be no better; but the natural result of such a reduction would be a division of the amount between the producer and consumer.

For instance, if it cost but twenty cents to carry a bushel of wheat to market, instead of forty, it is reasonable to suppose that the twenty cents saved would be divided between the man that sells, and the man that buys; because it would ordinarily in that case, be worth ten cents more per bushel at the place of production, and as much less at the place of consumption. That is the way the farmers would be benefited by a reduction of freights, and not in reducing production or stimulating consumption.

aper transportation. It is largely they who own No. 67, Massachusetts st., Lawrence, Kansas. the railroads and have kept up the prices of transportation, thinking that the products of the West must Gillett. come to them in any event, no matter how much it cost. This movement of the producers in behalf of their own interests is likely to develope new avenues to market which they of the east had not dreamed of till now, and which threatens to leave them to one side—their railroads comparatively idle, and theirworkshops without bread.

A special to the St. Louis Republican, written from Washington, says many of the leading Republicans of Virginia, now in that city, complain bitterly about some of the federal appointments recently made in that state. It is charged that many of the appointees are not only ex-confederates, but that they have not since A special to the St. Louis Republican, written from not only ex-confederates, but that they have not since the close of the rebellion identified themselves with the Republican party. The negroes, who form the largest part of Republican voters in the Old Dominion, assert that they have not been recognized in the distribution of the federal patronage, while their former masters who went into the rebellion have had favors showered upon them.

It is charged that all this has been accomplished by John S. Mosby of rebel guerilla fame, who is known to have individual influence with the president. Mosby, while steadily refusing office himself, has provided for a large number of his friends. Very recently two of Mosby's cavalry were appointed mail agents at a salary of $1,200 each.

On account of the appointments made there, by the president, the party is much discouraged, and will have a bad effect upon the pending campaign.

Prof. Henry, of the Smithsonian institute, Admiral Sands ind Prof. Newcomb, of the Naval Observatory, are making active preparations for the despatch of expeditions to various points to take observations of the transit of Venus. A special dispatch from Bismack, on the Northern Pacific railroad, reports that the Northern Pacific surveying party has been attacked by about 180 Sioux Indians. The Indians were met by a company of Infantry and a detachment of Cavalry, and four Sioux were killed. The escort accompanying the party number two hundred, all well armed, and no serious trouble is anticipated. After the skirmish the survey was resumed. At the late Agricultural Fair at New Orleans, Northern nen carried off four-fifths of the prizes.

The Wichita Eagle has information from the Indian Territory that a general war between the Osages and Wichita freight tariffs between the East and West has had the | tribes of Indians is about to be commenced, but that the Osages will not come to any definite conclusion in the matter untileafter their general pow-wow, which will occur soon, and unless all their signs prove favorable at that time they will not fight. We hope they will all be favorable, and if they have a bloody war who has any right to interfere?

The people of Coffeyville mean business on the Texas cattle question. The Courier says with the arrival of the herds of cattle, came the Cherokee authorities for their tax. Our city fathers true to their published pledge, promptly met the tax gatherers and settled the grazing tax question, so that no annoyance can possibly come to the drover. This is businessand coupled with the L. L. & G. R. R. Co's. offer to pay the

The Salina Herald says that during May last, at the Land Office of that District there were 176 entries made under the homestead act, giving 12,436, acres, for which $2,600.-97 were received. Under the final homestead. 2,280 acres were closed; fees $94,000. The soldiers' claims filed under the act of 1872 number 92; number of acres 14,480; fees $180.-00. The number of premptious filed, act 1871, was 174; acres 27,840; fees $348,00. The number of acres sold for cash was 438.72, bringing $1,872.53. The number of acres located by Agricultural Scrip is 1,760; fees $44.00. Total number of acres, 70,235.28; total receipts $5,136.50.

The Leavenworth Times is responsible for the following: There may be better crop prospects than in Howard county, but it is difficult for us to see how that could be. Wheat stands so thick on the ground, that a rabbit will almost run on the top of it and not try to tread its way between the stalks on the ground; it is heading large and strong, and unless something happens to prevent, the yield will certainly be normous in proportion to the acres of land sown."

A disastrous break occurred in the Welland canal at lock No. 2 on the 17th, which will interrupt navigation for about a week. The propellor Granite State struck and carried away one of the gates, causing a tremendous rush of water, which carried away the upper and badly twisted the lower gates of

The Kansas and Missouri Bridge Company brought suit about one year ago against the subscribers to the stock of the bridge, for unpaid assessments. The suit against Col. F. E. zation of an entirely new party. The resolutions which were passed at the late convention of farmers in Wayne county, Iowa, are conclusive on this point, and should the same or similar be generally adopted, the prospect is that there will be a party of the people this fall, which will be so strong as to discourage even the holding of the usual party conventions. The resolutions are as follows:

Second—That all the evils that afflict our country are directly traceable to the politicians and policy of the Republican and democratic parties, so-called, and to their corrupt and dishonest practices.

Third—That both the parties have, by corruption and disregard of public duties, and in violation of public trusts, forfeited all claims to the support of a free and intelligent people.

An exhibition more wonderful and interesting than that at Vienna will be held in Russia about the middle of August. The scene of its operations is the historic city of Nijni-Novgorod, which is situated at the confluence of the Volga and the Oka, in Central Asia. The ordinary population of the city is about 32, 000 inhabitantes, but during the fair that number will be augmented by an addition of 300, 000 or 400, 000 visitors from all parts of Europe and Asia. the fair is held in an immense stone building containing 3,000 shops, in which the sales are made. One hundred and forty five million dollars' worth of wares and goods were brought to last year's fair, and out of that immense quantity only $20,000,000 worth remained unsold. All kinds of goods and manufactures are sold at this mammoth fair, and an opportunity will be afforded for seeing collected together the people of all countries, and the mode of traffic of every race in Europe.

LADIES IN THE GRANGES

One of the most interesting features of the granges is, that not a single one can be organized without the companionship of the ladies. No charter will be issued to organize a grange, even if a hundred of the best farmers want it, and ask for it, unless a certain number of ladies join. Their assistance and influence are needed. Their companionship will have a refining and elevating effect upon the sterner sex. They are equally interested with their husbands, brothers and sons in the good that can be husbands, brothers and sons in the good that can be accomplished. What aids in giving relief to the farmer, will give relief to his wife or daughters. They give tone and elevation to the proceedings of the granges. They furnish a social feature to the granges which will give permanency and stability to them. Each grange meeting will be a social festival, a neighborhood visit, a green spot in the Sahara of the farmer's life. By all means let every grange encourage the attendance of the ladies. Let there be as many lady members as male members. It will increase the interest in them and help to elevate our noble profession to that high standard we desire to reach. With woman's influence with us we shall have no such word as fail. Her influence is for good, and we are glad to know she will exert it in behalf of those who are nearest and dearest to her.

The occupation in which in the dissemination of its principles, and we are engaged, from the very nature of the case contribute to the accomplishment of its causes us to be scattered and more isolated from contribute to the accomplishment of its causes us to be scattered and more isolated from purposes, can do so in no more effective way than to aid us in the circulation of The Spirit of Kansan as reposelly as possible. The Spirit of Kansus as generally as possi-ble among the people, and especially among the farmers of the State. THE GRANGE REVOLUTION.

There is a revolution pending in this Grange busiand cities and the members of other callings. We are, to be truthful, compelled to admit that in the race of life we have not been as successful as numlowing extracts are from Republican papers, and show that a portion of that party see and appreciates the certainty and force of the impending it lie in our power to remove it? My own conviction is that the first cause (out of which others grow) is our isolation. We labor on our farms the season through; for days, sometimes for weeks. We have little communication with any human beings, save our own families. The routine of the farm life is not very exciting; our thoughts are not called into active use; listlessness slowly and imperceptibly attaches itself to our minds, and year after year follow each other in the swift procession of time. While we are at home quietly holding the plow or wielding thepruning hook, the politician is making our laws; the monopolies fixing the price of what we buy or sell, and the merchant regulating the commerce of our country. This course is not just to ourselves or the country of which we are citizens. Why then do we continue in it? Simply because we are too far apart and too unsociable to old party organizations is patent to every well-intormed citizen of Iowa; and it is this fact that has caused the fluttering recently among the rail-road monopolists, the professional wire-pullers, and office-seekers generally of the dominant party.

[Keokuk Constintion] pered steel, then you will see the fire fly—both steel and flint will show the fire which is in them, and a conflagration may be kindled. So it is with Is it not time for the people to take the management of affairs into thair own hands and say to the bummers, "Stand back?" Have we not had enough flint. There is nothing against which we can strike bummers, "Stand back?" Have we not had enough of private and personal administration, enough of peculation, swindling, and salary-grabbing; enough of corrupt legislation, and corrupt interpretation of the law? Is it not time to have reform in all departments of government, State as well as National?—[A farmer in the Portland (Me.) Argus.

National?—[A farmer in the Portland (Me.) Argus.]

Patrons of Husbandry will accomplish this; if it will bring us together; stir up our thoughts; rub off the rust; arouse us from our lethargy; bring us out in the world, flint against flint, steel against steel, in a fair contest for life's blessings and honors—then the day in which the work is inaugu-rated here will well deserve a high place among and develop habits of thought and action; to cause us to bring into use each other's latent force—were the primary objects of our order. When we met in granges and looked each other in the face-took each other by the hand—exchanged with each other our inmost thoughts—looked over our past and prognosticated our future-it set us to thinking; thinking set us to acting, until to-day, as never before in the history of our country, the power of the farmer is felt and his rights acknowledged. We have on consultation with ourselves discovered how that we have erred ourselves. While our politicians, speculators and monopolies have sinned by commission we have been equally guilty of sinning

v omission. We are living in the nineteenth century-a century of progress, of untiring activity. The men of this age are full of "push," and their schemes are guided by wits kept sharp and bright by constant use. Against this we must compete in the race of life. Evade it we cannot; meet it we must, and meeting it we must conquer or surrender. Can we meet the enterprise and intelligence of the age we meet the enterprise and intelligence of the age by solitarily staying at home and quietly and unthinkingly tilling our fields day after day, year after year? Never! never! We must take things as we find them and meet them as they are. We must succeed in the battle of life and never say die, but push right straight on to victory.

To do this we must work our hands less and our brains more; study more, think more; sharpen our wits polish our thoughts and here, right on the wits, polish our thoughts and here, right on the plane of the nineteenth century, meet the politi-cians, the monopolies and the speculators, and set wit against wit, mind against mind, and stern integrity against trickery. Thus fitted and armed, the farm-ers of Missouri shall stand on a level with the ers of Missouri shall stand on a level with the proudest citizen of the State, and own and possess share and share of its wealth and honors. But, brothers, this result is not to be accomplished by the National Grange or by any dozen men whom you may elect officers of the State Grange. You yourselves are the State Grange; you are soul of its soul, and flesh of its flesh, and it will be just what you make it, and not one iota more; we are assembling and organizing to pit ourselves against the bling and organizing to pit ourselves against the sharpest wit in the world, if we fail it will be for want of ability, or want of effort; if we succeed, it will be because we individually and collectively put our shoulders to the wheel and lift like men, and not because the National Grange or anything put our shoulders to the wheel and lift like men, and not because the National Grange or anything else has come along and spread the mantle of the millionaires upon us. The old saw is still sharp, which says: "The gods help those who help themselves."

The Citizen says work has been commenced at Altoons in that (Wilson) county, on the Memphis and Northwestern Railroad.

IN THE NEST.

Gather them close to your loving heart-Cradle them on your breast; They will soon enough leave your brooding care-Soon enough mount youth's topmost stair-Little ones in the nest.

Fret not that the children's hearts are gay, That the restless feet will run: There may come a time, in the by and by. When you'll sit in your lonely room and sigh For a sound of childish fun.

When you'll long for the repetition sweet That sounded through each room Of " mother," "mother," the dear love calls That will echo long in the silent halls, And add to their stately gloom.

There may come a time when you'll long to hear The eager boyish tread, The tuneless whistle, the clear shrill shout, The busy bustling in and out, And pattering overhead.

When the boys and girls are all grown up, And scattered far and wide, Or gone to that beautiful golden shore Where sickness and death come nevermore, You will miss them from your side.

Then gather them close to your loving heart-Cradle them on your breast; They will soon enough leave your brooding care-Soon enough mount youth's topmost stair-Little ones in the nest.

HOW TO COOK PORK.

A lady writes as follows: There are times when salt pork is our only resource in the way of meat, and there are several ways of cooking it so that it

Of course it must be thoroughly freshened by boiling it three or four minutes in either fresh milk or water. And here let me say I think a great many cooks cut the slices of pork too thin. They ought to be at least half an inch thich. Then have your frying-pan hot, and after flouring each slice put it in the pan and don't leave it, but be ready to turn each slice as soon as it is brown on one side, which will not be long if you have used milk to freshen it with; and if not, add a teaspoonful of cream to it as soon as it begins to fry. When it is nicely browned on each side take it right to the table and be sure not to pour the lard that has cooked out of it over the pour. cooked out of it over the pork. If you wish gravy, leave two or three spoonsful of lard in the pan, and add flour enough to thicken it (dry flour) and let it get thoroughly cooked. Then add a bowlful of In Louisiana there are more than one million part cream and part milk, and stir it constantly until it is smooth. Another nice way of preparing pork for the table is to soak a piece entire, in tepid water, over night. About an hour and a half before dinner make a common flour or Yorkshire pudding, and an easy way to make enough for five or six persons is seven eggs to two quarts of milk, Put this on an ordinary baking dish, and after wiping your piece of pork dry, place it in the center of your pudding and bake it about an hour and a half, according to the heat of your oven. You will be surprised to find how nice the pork is, and the pudding is excellent with or without sauce. help eat it you want as many slices as you can place on your griddle. Peel and slice enough potatoes to make a thick layer over the pork, and don't forget to salt and pepper your potatoes. Over this put a layer of nice soda biscuit dough rolled thin, then add a pint or so of water, and put over the whole the cover of your wash boiler, for the stove man didn't calculate you were going to use your griddle for this purpose, and consequently did not prepare any cover. As soon as the pork begins to brown, remove the biscuit and potatoes from one and of the griddle to did not prepare any cover. from one end of the griddle to a dish and turn the potatoes on to the pork already turned, and turn over the pork now exposed, and when you get to the other end of the griddle replace the potatoes and biscuit you removed from the griddle and put on your cover, and if your fire is sufficient your dish will soon be done. This is very nice with the cream gravy poured over it; and it is always eaten, every bit of it, at our house, by children and grown

OATMEAL, BONE AND MUSCLE.

Liebig has shown that oatmeal is almost as nutritious as the best English beef, and that it is richer than wheaten bread in the elements that go to form bone and muscle. Prof. Forbes, of Edinburgh, during some twenty years measured the breadth and hight, and also tested the strength of both the and hight, and also tested the strength of both the arms and loins of the students in the University—a very numerous class, and of various nationalities, drawn to Edinburgh by the fame of his teaching. He found that in hight, breadth of chest and shoulders, and strength of arms and loins, the Belgians were at the bottom of the list; a little above them the English; and the French; very much higher, the English; and highest of all, the Scotch and Scotch Irish from Ulster, who, like the natives of Scotland, are fed in

A good man was lately attempting the conversion of a convict, in one of our prisons, who had shown some signs which were considered hopeful. After a suitable opening, the instructor, wishing to make his teachings appropriate, said:

"What brought you here?"

"Two sherifs," said the man.

"Ahem! yes—but I mean—had intemperance anything to do with your misfortune?"
"Yes," said the convict, "they were both drunk."
The examiner passed on to the next hopeful sub-A A W RESIDENCE, BY A RESIDENCE

Some time ago two young men went to a livery stable to hire a horse and carriage. They told the keeper of the stable that they only wanted to go to a village seven miles off. When they came back, the man thought the horse looked as though he had best driven much farther than that. He asked them how much farther they had been. They said they had only been to the next village. Then he opened a box that was fastened to the side of the carriage. In this box was a lttle thing almost like a clock. This had the power of keeping a correct account of every turn made by the wheels of the carriage. It did this by pointing with a finger to the figures on a dial plate. The man knew how many turns of the wheel it took to make a mile, and when he saw the figures to which the finger and when he saw the figures to which the finger pointed, he knew in a moment how far the carriage pointed, he knew in a moment now har the carriage had been. As soon as he opened his box he saw that the carriage had traveled thirty miles instead of fourteen. Those young men didn't know that they were carrying with them a silent witness against themselves. They didn't know that a little instrument was keeping a correct account of every yound of ground they want over. And just so it is yard of ground they went over. And just so it is with conscience. It is busy all the time; and at last it will give a correct account of all that we have

There is going to be no end of trouble with these postal cards. Here is a real nice young man on Columbia street, just home from college, and destined for the ministry by his father's command, had a postal sent him yesterday, a bill for wine and gin and cigars, and it comes from the same firm which has receipted all the young man's "station-ery" bills, and the father has the receipts, and by some accident that postal card fell into his hands. Now what is that young man to do?-Utica Herald

Anecdote of Lincoln. Laura Ream, of Indiana, relates the following new anecdote of President Lincoln, as told to her by ex-Governor Baker. When the draft just pre-vious to Mr. Lincoln's re-election was ordered, leading politicians of Indiana thought it injudi-cious, and appointed a committee of which Governor Baker made one, to wait upon the President. They remonstrated with him against the draft without producing any effect, and finally urged the danger of his defeat in case Indiana should go against him, as they believed it would, if the draft went on. "It is of no consequence," the President replied, "Whether I am elected President or not. The country must be saved. We must have soldiers. The Union must be restored." Governor Baker said that he went out from the presence of Mr. Lincoln feeling rebuked for having allowed

In Louisiana there are more than one million acres less under cultivation at this time than there were in 1860; the white population has decreased more in the last year than it had increased in the preceding twelve; lands have depreciated twenty thirty, fifty and even ninety per cent. in value, and in all material respects the state has undergone a startling deterioration.

Tomato Plants.

A market gardener of Lake County, Illinois, says that he has the most remarkable success in the use of salt upon his tomato plants. He applied it at various times during the season, and in every case and the pudding is excellent with or without sauce. Then, for a variety, I make occasionally what I call a pork pot-pie, though it is not cooked in a pot at all but on what I call a long griddle. I freshen the pork the same as when I am going to fry it, and if you are going to have four or five more to the plants treated in this way take an immediate start, and develop the fruit.

Ant's Nests in Gardens.

F. M. G., in Nature, says; "I have found a very effectual remedy for the annoyance of ants nesting in the garden paths and borders. A strong solution of carbolic acid and water poured into the holes, kills all the ants it touches, and the survivors immediately take themselves off. Care must be taken in its use, as it destroys animal and vegetable, as

A WORD TO TRAVELLERS! We have a word to say in favor of the Missouri Pacific Railread. It was the "pioneer" line Westward and is the "old reliable" route to St. Louis. With the improvements which have been made during the past year, we believe that the Missouri Pacific Railroad has the best track and the finest and safest equipment of any line west of the Mississippi. It is the only line which runs three daily express trains of fine Coaches and Pullman Sleepers, equipped with the Miller platform and the patent air brake, from leading points in the West, through Kansas City, Sedalia and Jefferson City to St. Louis without change, connecting at St. Louis with eleven different through routes to points North, East and South. Particular information, with maps, time tables, &c., may be had at the various "Through Ticket" Railroad Stations in the West, or upon personal or written application to G. H. Baxter, Western Passenger Agent, Kansas City, Mo., or E. A. Ford, General Passenger Agent, St. Louis, Mo.

Climate, soil, timber, mineral wealth, schools, churches and law-abiding society invite emigrants from all points to this land of fruits and flowers. For particulars address A. "HOW TO GO EAST."

By the Kansas City, St. Joseph and Burlington Route.

"Though last not least," is an adage as true as it is old, and its truth is again exemplified by the completion of the New Line to the East, via Creston and Burlington, which, though the last, may be called the best route in the West. The Line consists of the Kansas City, Saint Joseph and Council Bluffs R. R., with two daily trains from Kansas City, through Atchison, Leavenworth and St. Joseph to the Missouri State Line, there connecting with the Burlington Route, which leads direct to Chicago, Cincinnati, Indianapolis, Logansport, and Columbus—through cars are being run to all these points.

This line is well built, thoroughly equipped with every modern improvement, including Pullman's Sleeping and Dining Cars, and no where else can the passenger so completely depend on a speedy, safe and comfortable journey.

The Burlington Route has admirably answered the query 'How to go East,'' by the publication of an interesting and truthful document, containing a valuable and correct Map, which can be obtained free of charge by addressing General Passenger Agent B. & M. R. R. R., Burlington, Iowa.

A SUGGESTION.

There are a great many people in Lawrence and in every city of Kansas, who earnestly desire the success of the Grange movement, but are not now able to contribute directly to that success, for the want of an appropriate organization. They naturally regard their interests as identical with those of the producing class, as what affects that for good or ill, also affects them.

The agricultural being the interest most nearly affected by public evils, its patrons are of course expected to take the lead in measures for their correction. The farmors having done that, and demonstrated in their organization a degree of vitality and directness of effort which indicate a well defined and fixedness of purpose that constitutes a guarantee of success, other industrial classes are ready to take hold and assist in pushing forward the good work, in effective co-

The suggestion we started out to make, in this connection, is the formation of clubs of mechanics, artizans.and laborers in the cities; all, whomay be properly classed as workingmen, auxiliary to the Granges and other organizations of farmers. Let them be called anti-tax leagues, workingman's clubs, or any appellation that shall be discriptive of the object sought.

In this way the co-operation of thousands in the cities, who sincerely desire the success of the Grange movement, and who are now unable to contribute directly to it for the reason suggested, would be secured, and success doubly certain.

Every man who labors with his hands for a living, no matter to what branch of industry lie belongs, whether a stone mason, a carpenter, or a blacksmith is a natural ally of the farmer in his demand for the removal of high taxes and all the causes which lead to commercial depression and hard times. Their interests, in this regard, at least, are identical. When the farmer gets a good price for his produce, his fields productive, and he is not obliged to pay to the tax gatherer an unfair proportion of the avails of his land, every other branch of industry thrives also. The reverse is true in the case of a depression of the agricul-Itural interest of the country, upon the prosperity of which the wellbeing of all others largely depends-and all, both agricultural and mechanical, are directly afeffeted, for good or bad, by the manner in which public affairs are administered.

Their interests being so nearly allied, what is there to keep them from acting in concert for the inauguration of measures of reform?

The Washington Chronicle, the central organ of the administration, is sorely troubled for fear that the party. The surest way to prevent that is for the Rethe Grangers complain of.

The Kansas Magazine for July came to hand this morning, but we have not yet had time to examine its contents. That is not necessary, however, in order to intelligently recommend it to our readers, as "The Kansas" is always good-instructive, witty, and entertaining. It would be impossible to go amiss in opening its pages in search of good reading.

State Auditor Wilder has published a card stating that in view of the recent decision of Judge Dillon af- | ical mountebanks. firming the unconstitutionality of the Iola Bridge Bonds, he shall in future refuse to register all bonds of a similar character.

The decision of Judge Dillon cuts off all bonds issued by municipalities in aid of private enterprises. The amount of bonds of this character now out in this state, must be not far from a million and a half.

If railroads should come to be construed as private corporations, the amount of worthless bonds now issued would be increased to many times that sum.

GRANGES IN OSAGE COUNTY.

Deputy W. S. Hanna organized six Granges in the eastern part of Osage county last week, the aggregate membership being one hundred and sixty-four persons. 'Nearly all of these had tried the Farmers' Union, and they expressed themselves as highly pleased with the change, and they were astonished to find there was so much to learn in order to become a "bright Patron."

There were four Grange feasts in Franklin county last week, and the farmers seem bound to enjoy some happiness. They are raising a donation to help the afflicted officers of the State Grange, whose farms have been swept by a tornado.

THREE AND FIVE HUNDRED DOLLAR MEN.

In conversation with a somewhat distinguished and regard to the result of the Farmers's movement.

"Well," said he, "you fellows will elect a good muny of your Grangers to the Legislature, but a good many of them will be simply three and five hundred dollar men-cheap men, where we have heretofore had high than prevails elsewhere. priced men."

Kansas legislation, who, like too many others, from telligence and enterprise. witnessing the dishonesty and corruption so prevalent the difference being only in the amounts neccessary to buy them.

Unfortunately, this view of the political situation is becoming quite too common for the good name of the East. State. The public mind is becoming impregnated with the vicious idea, and the public career of too many of our politicians tends to confirm the base suspicion that office holding and strict integrity are antagonistic, and not expected to be found together.

It is this that leads too many to look with an indifferent and cynical eye upon all propositions for reform, posed. and upon all who engage in efforts thereto, as persons merely seeking their own advancement instead of the public good and the correction of public abuses.

Hence it is that the Farmers' movement is regarded liable to come under the control of such, and to result not found elsewhere, and so the impression has gone only in failure, so far as its avowed objects are con- abroad that an extraorpinary degree of rascality pre cerned, and the installing in the offices of the country vails. only more rapacious or less competent men than those they displace.

It is for the farmers themselves to correct this by first place for admission to their Granges, and in the of hiding that dishonesty to the extent that prevails next, for their votes for official position. To say that there is not interest enough felt among the farmers in the politics of the country to do this, is a slander upon their patriotism. To say that they have not penetration enough to forefend against a repetition of the history of the past, is to slander their intelligence.

That they have the intelligence, the patriotism and the votes to at once mercilessly ostracise all presenting themselves, who do not come up to the propre standard of fitness for what they ask, we fully believe.

In addition to the usual inducements to aspire to a seat in the Legislature, we have next winter, a vacant seat in the U.S. Senate to fill; and it will undoubtedly be that scores of three and five hundred dollar men will contest for legislative honors, and that some will succeed -yet we have faith in the aroused patriotism and quickened intelligence of the people, and the farmers espec-Grange movement is going to weaken the Republican | ially, under the rankling stimulus of yearly increasing taxes, the depreciation of their products under the burpublican party to adopt the cause of the Grangers, and dens imposed on them by dishonest legislation and the secure a new lease of power by correcting the evils public robebries of dishonest officials, that the number of either low or high priced rogues who succeed will be small.

> Let every farmer, and especially every Grange man, see to it that none such get farmers votes; for every man of that class that goes into office by farmers' votes, be he farmer, artizan, professional man or politician becomes a conspicuous example of the folly or the stupidity of those who elected him, and correspondingly retards the great end in view-the relievement of the > POLITICAL DISHONESTY AND HIGH TAXES. It is unfortunate for the Administration and the country that its new appointee to the Japanese mission. Hon. John A. Bingham, goes abroad in the high charneter of a Foreign minister, and the representative of Republican institutions at the Court of a foreign nation, affected to the extent that he is by the damaging disclosures of the past year.

> It is well understood, as shown by subsequent investigations, that Mr. Bingham was one of the largest beneficiaries of the Credit Mobilier swindle; that he solicited an interest in it as soon as the Ames contract was made; that he engineered through the House, as Chairman of the Judiciary, and without permitting a word of debate, the bill for removing the Pacific Railroad offices from New York to Boston, where the Ring was located; that he was paid for his services in fabulous dividends; and that he advocated and voted for the back pay and salary steal throughout, and was one of the first to pocket the proceeds of that monstrous plunder, which even his own party conventions have branded with infamy.

> In the face of all this, he has been endorsed as a fit representative and exemplar of the American people by being selected to represent the dignity and purity of Republicanism in a foreign land.

> By the Credit Mobilier business, in which Mr Bingham was found to have taken so active and influential a part, the Government and the people were swindled out of many millions of money that rightfully belonged to them; and by his part in the salary business, a million and a half was taken directly as back pay, while the increase added millions more to the annual cost of

Thus, largely through the instrumentality of this gentieman, who now goes abroad with the highest endorsement as to personal and official rectitude it is in the power of the Government to give, that the people of this country have been saddled with millions on mill-ions of financial burdens, which they and their children ions of financial burdens, which they and their children must carry for many years to come.

It is this sort of practice, of endorsing public theives —of putting the stamp and brand of approval upon official rascality by the appointment of official rascals to office, that is corrupting the public concience and demoralizing the people on one hand, and combining them on the other in a new and deadly warfare against all the forms of official corruption as illustrated in the shameless robberies and high taxes that have characterized the history of the last decade.

APPARENT, ONLY.

If those who are in the habit of denouncing Kansas ery astute partizan politician, a few days ago, we were as par excellence the "Rotten Commonwealth," will regaled with the following bit of political prophecy, in give the matter a moment's reflection, they will see that, after all, the alleged unusual dishonesty of Kansas people and Kansas politicians is only apparent, or rather, that the accusation arises from causes other than the actual existence of a greater degree of dishonesty here

The population of Kansas is composed largely of This was said by one who has had much experience those who left their homes in the East because of the n the ways of Kansas politicians, and in the tricks of limited field there enjoyed for the exercise of their in-

It is not that Kansas politicians and Kansas officials are more dishonest than the politicians and officials of other States, but that the people of Kansas have had the penetration to detect them and the independence as a visionary scheme, gotten up by designing men, or to expose them, to a degree and with a severity that is

The politicians and officials of Kansas are quite as honest, and we think a little more so, than those of other States, but the superior penetration and intelligence crutinizing every one who presents himself, in the of the mass of the people has precluded the possibility elsewhere.

That is about the difference between the people of Kansas and those of other States, in the matter of houestv.

POMEROY'S TRIAL

Mr. Pomeroy's trial, which was set for the 16th inst., has been postponed till the December term of the Shawnee District Court. His counsel claimed that they had not had time to make the necessary preparation for defence. Mr. Pomerov has had four months of time in which to prepare for his defence. Three and a half months of that time he allowed to go by without attempting any such preparation, and it is under stood, without even employing counsel, so that if he was not ready for trial, it was no one's fault but his own. In view of these facts, it is useless for Mr. Pomeroy or his friends to plead in his behalf and as evidence of his innocence, that he was ready and anxious to proceed to trial. That plea was nothing more or less than an attempt to manufacture a little cheap capital-but it is too transparent, and will deceive nobody. It is but too evident that he was anxious for a continuance, and conscious that he could not procure it upon his own netition, delays the employment of counsel till almost the day of trial, and then relies upon them, through their plea of lack of time for preparation, to procure it for him. Well cnowing that they would not consent to an immediate trial.

he could very safely proclaim his entire readiness to proceed. As to the guilt or innocence of Mr. Pomeroy of the matters for which he is on trial, or the probable result of that trial, it would now be improper to speak, but of this matter of postponement till the winter term of court, thus needlessly adding hundreds if not thousands of dollars of costs for the state to pay in the prosecution of the case, we have a right to speak. We are desirous that he shall have an impartial trial, country of the rule of moneyed corporations and polit- as is his right, and we were desirous that he should have it now, ample time and opportunity having been afforded for oth parties to make the fullest needed preparation there

This postponement, with his counsel's plea of unwillingness to go on, and his own protestation of a desire to proceed, looks very like one of Mr. Pomeroy's wiley pieces of strategy, entered upon in the hope of aiding his schemes for re-elect tion to the Senate.

Notwithstanding his oft repeated denials of candidacy, and the as oft repeated denials of his friends for him, those who have had the opportunities for knowing him best are confident that he entertains no other intention in this connection than that of being a candidate, and, so great is his faith in the purchasing power of money, is confident of being elected.

He is hopeful, of course, of being acquitted at the December term, if, indeed, by some legal technichality, his further rosecution is not still farther postponed or abandoned. In either case, regarding that prospective acquittal or abandonment as a vindication as well of his character as against the charge upon which he is prosecuted, he hopes thereby to create a reaction in his favor that will, supplemented by the pecuniary logic he knows so well how to use, have the effect of reseating him in the National Senate in January.

Either, a judgment of acquittal or an abandonment, wil be trumpeted far and wide as a refutation of all the charges that have been made against him, and used to manufacture sympathy as for one persecuted, on which to demand an election, as the least fitting reparation that can be made to the injured man.

This we believe to be Mr. Pomeroy's game, and that he is foolish enough to think that he is going to deceive the people and legislatuae of the state by it.

It will be for the farmers and the working men of Kansa to say, at the approaching Legislative elections, whether this game shall succeed—whether a man who has done so much to inaugurate a reign of public plunder and corruption, and has been the means of adding vast sums to the burdens of the people by the robbery of their lands and moneys, shall be permitted to be even a candidate for that high and honorable

If he is returned, it will be by the votes of those who pay the great bulk of the burdensome taxes he has helped to hear upon the country, and to them will belong the responsibility.

THE FOURTH AT HIGHLAND PARK.

Maj. C. B. Peck, with his usual public spirit and care for the guests of the excellent road of which he is Superintendent, is having the grounds at Highland Park thoroughly cleaned, and is enlarging the cleared space for the great Fourth of July excursion. Highland Park will be a lovely spot for solid enjoyment.

The preparations for enjoyment on this occasion are on an ample scale. A train of cars will run during the day between Lawrence and the Park. A band of music will accompany the excursion. There will be a Fourth of July dinner on the grounds, with all manner of good things and no end of refreshments, whilst the amusements provided will be of a character to interest, amuse and enliven everybody, embracing several novelties not yet down on the bills. "Our young folks," too, will be there in force; the groves of Highland Park will bloom and blossom with added leveliness, and, as is natural "where youth and beauty meet," there will be ample opportunity to "chase the glowing hours with flying feet. In short, it will be made an occasion for relaxation, recreation and general enjoyment for young and old alikefor good cheer and healthful hilarity, music and mirth, festivity and fun.

Town Talk.

CITY COUNCIL.

The city guardians had their regular semi-monthly set-to Monday evening last. The chief of the fire department submitted his report on the late fires and recommended that the materiel of the department be increased. Mr. Miller, a colored man, who had been fined in the police court, for killing a neighbors cat that had been killing his chickens, petitioned the council to remit his fine. After some discussion his prayer was granted. The petition of Dan Stone, asking that a billiard license be granted him, was rejected by the council, just for what particular reason we do not know. We don't see why Dan Stone (colored) should not be permitted to run "a pauper shop" by paying his license just as well as John Stone (white). Rev. John B. Stone proposed to the city council that he would take the city library and run it for the income of the same, the city to pay incidental expenses and make a quarterly appropriation for books. The committee reported favorably upon his proposition; but the council, after indulging in the usual amount of form, for which many of the members are noted, rejected the report.

And now comes up the regular question of all meetingsthe bridge question. The special committee appointed to confer with the bridge company, reported favorably upon entering into an arrangement with the bridge company on the following terms:

The Lawrence Bridge Company to cross all foot passengers, city business and public processions free, to charge for teams not to exceed ten cents for each crossing, and to erect a firstclass iron superstructure within ninety days. The city to withdraw the ferry and all opposition to the bridge company, and to have the privilege at any time of purchasing the bridge by paying therefor the actual money value of the piers and

Mr. Barker wanted this arrangement referred to a committee of three, including the city attorney, to ascertain if the city would legally enter into such an agreement. Mr. Carnes wanted the agreement accepted, and Mr. Howard was ready with his legal obstacles. Mr. Morrow wanted a free bridge, but that involved an outlay of $70,000 which the city was not in a condition to pay at present. Mr. Hollister wanted a free bridge very much. So did, he want a good farm, but the want of funds prevented his getting the farm. So with the city. The people would not consent to any more taxation for any purpose, not even if the bridge could be bought for $15,000. Mr. Dicks was in favor of the agreement offered by the committee. If the city had the money to buy, he would vote differently. After a long discussion the question of referring the arrangement reported to a special committee of three was carried. An ordinance was passed providing for a special election for councilman from the sixth ward to be held on Monday, June 30th, was passed, when the council adjourned till Monday the 22nd, when it will meet to perfect the organization

METHODIST CHURCH .- The Methodist church had, previous to the Sunday morning services, been very handsomely decorated with flowers and evergreens, by the ladies, for the Sunday School celebration. Sunday morning the large audience room was filled with the children of the Sabbath school, who entered with good spirits and happy hearts into the exercises of the morning. The occasion was an enjoyable one for children, teachers, pastor and visitors.

FILED.-County attorney Barker has filed a petition for a writ of quo warranto against the Lawrence Bridge Company, requiring the company to show why their charter should not be declared forfeited. The petition sets forth that the bridge is unsafe and that it is not a legal corporation.

WOOLLEN MILL .- Mr. A. W. Cone has purchased the Phœnix Woolen Mills of this city and will conduct the business himself hereafter. He has made many improvements and will keep it running henceforth.

FRUIT.-Cherries are plentiful, the strawberry season is about over, but raspberries are coming along to take their place. The small fruit crop is good, other fruits promise well except peaches. Many of the fruit trees have been attacked by the twig blight, and much of the fruit thus blasted, but it don't seem to be a disease that will permanently injure the tree. A good plan would seem to be to cut off the twigs as soon as attacked when new shoots will start out. Quinces and apples particularly seem to suffer from the blight this FESTIVAL.-The colored Baptists had an ice cream festival and sociable, at their church, corner Ohio and Warren streets, Monday evening.

Hor.-The weather for the past week has kept up the reputation of our Kansas summers. It is "blazing hot" during the day, but the evenings are pleasant. Keep cool by buying ice; it is only half cent per pound. One of Shaw's refrigerators will do the balance."

SUGGESTION RENEWED.—The cholera is unquestionably working regular approaches along the Mississippi and its tributaries, and before it reaches Lawrence every preparation should be made to guard against its ravages. The proper authorities seem to be doing little or nothing to clean up the streets, alleys and other places calculated to produce disease and people generally seem to take but little interest in the condition of affairs, and probably will not until the appear ance of an epidemic creates a panic, and scares the people and the city authorities into doing something, when perhaps it is too late. Afleys that have been filthy for months, remain filthy to-day and probably will remain so unless located under the nose of some city official. In each case the red tape pro cess of a petition, reference to a committee, funny speeches and other dilatory action must be gone through with, while disease marches straight along not stopping for petitions, committees, speeches or anything else but proper sanitary regulations. Let the work of cleaning up be promptly commenc ed and carried out. Let lime be thrown in damp cellars and alleys be thoroughly cleaned, privies and other places disinfected, let the city see that it is done too, and Lawrence will have little to fear from an epidemic.

DEATH OF JUDGE WAREFIELD.

We were pained to learn, on Tuesday last, of the death of Hon. John A. Wakefield, which occurred at his residence in this place, on that day, in the seventy eighth year of his age. Judge Wakefield was a native of Columbia, South Carolina, and carried in his veins some of the best blood of the revolution. At the age of fifteen, he removed to the then Territory of Illinois, afterwards to Wisconsin, and to Minnesota, and from there, in 1854, to Kansas.

From his first arrival in Kansas, Judge Wakefield took prominent part in the stirring history of that time and much s due to his patriotic and intelligent effort for the happy isue of the great controversy then inaugurated.

During the long border warfare of 1855, 1856 and 1857, he did his whole duty as one of the Free State leaders, always counseling a firm resistance to the encroaches and outrages of the slave power. At the first Squatter's meeting in 1854 he was hosen Judge of the Squatter's Court, and performed his du- fulness. ties after a manner that gave satisfaction to all. He was chosen one of the Senators in the first Territorial Legislature; being expelled by the Border Ruffians, from his seat, which was wanted for a "bogus" member. In 1856, while en route to Illinois for aid in men and arms, he was captured by Buford's South Carolinians and narrowly escaped death as a "traitor to his native State."

He was chairman of the Judiciary Committee of the Topeka Constitutional Convention, and has served as Representative in the Legislature from Douglas county.

He was ever distinguished for great energy of character and a high sense of personal honor, his word being as good as his bond wherever he was known.

He had been for torty-two years a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and left this world with a bright and conident hope of awakening in a better one. He is mourned by six surviving children, and a large circle of warm personal friends.

NOT CONFIRMED .- Several young colored sprigs who had not been regularly confirmed as policemen, undertook to play policemen a few days ago. One of their first "official" acts was to levy blackmail upon an unsuspecting vender of "forty rod whisky." The victim forked over ten dollars, but afterwards had the gents arrested. They were each required to pay five dollars and costs, not having the money were put in the city refrigerator.

GOOD LUCK .- A gentleman, by the name of Cox, living in Wakarusa township, last fall gave a team and about one hundred dollars in money for an interest in a Lead mine in Missouri, and has just sold his interest for $10,400, making a clear profit of $10,000.

A GOOD ANSWER .-- No matter how unimportant the case that a jury may be so unfortunate as to be called upon to hear had and determine, there is a certain class of lawyers who seem to think that the ends of Justice cannot be subserved unless they cross question the jury by a long list of "special findings" all of which are calculated to consume time, bore a jury, and do no good. Such a system of pettyfogging should be prohibited by statute. It is often the ease that juries are stupid as well as those who "manage cases," but juries are sometimes made up of men of average intelligence, who can render a fair verdict and do justice to all parties without being cross examined by an over astute disciple of Blackstone. A jury recently in a justice's court, in this city gave a good answer to one of these "special findings," which we commend to the attention of attorneys who are ever presenting them to juries. When the jury retired several pages of "special findings' were handed them to return "intelligent" answers upon. One of the findings read, "If W. thought that the money was loaued for partnership use, why did he wait one year and a half before letting S. know of its existence?"

To which the jury answered: "We respectfulty refer to the reply of the blind man's paents found in the 9th chapter of John, 21st verse."

The verse reads: "But by what means he now seeth we know not, or who hath opened his eyes we know not; he is of age; ask him, he shall speak for himself."

Wonder if the attorneys accepted the verdiet without reforing to the Bible?

fered in Dry Goods, Boots and Shoes, to reduce stock, for 30 attendance to give them all a ride around town.

SAD .- The many friends of Mr. and Mrs. H. S. Clarke, will sympathize with them in the sad affliction which has again visited them, in the loss of their only son, a bright little fellow one year old. About a year ago death took away a little daughter and previous to that time the destroyer had torn away tender buds from the household, and borne them to the eternal gardens above. The loss of their little boy falls upon them with crushing force, and they have the heartfelt sympathies of a host of friends in Lawrence.

WHAT THE LADIES SAY. We believe it is generally understood that it is hard for a woman to keep a secret, but by hearing them talk, we have found out one of them, and now we are going to publish it. They say that Mrs. Coulter keeps the finest stock of Millinary goods in this city, also that she sells the same quality of goods for less money than anybody else. We could hardly believe the yarn, so we went to see for ourselves, and sure enough, we found the story true And such a stock as she keeps-Hats of all shapes, sizes, and of any desired texture, and Flowers, Ribbons, and, in fact, everything a Lady needs in the shape of head gear. at. Go and see for yourselves. SHOT HIMSELF. #### NOTES.

We don't mean to insinuate by this heading that we expect any one to pay us notes that have been held until they are outlawed, nor that we intend to "take up" any of the kind ourselves, but we wish our readers to make notes in their memory for their own benefit. The first note to make is this: Note the fact that Dr. Fesler is still prepared to attend to any professional calls requiring the services of a skillful surgeo and note farther that he has a complete set of surgical instruments. He has performed some very skillful and difficult opcrations since locating in our city.

The next fact to note is that Simpson's Bank is one of the oldest established financial institutions in the State. It has braved many a storm, financial and otherwise, and has never yet been hurt. It still is in the field for doing a general banking business, and will continue to do so. New facilities have enabled this bank to enlarge its business and sphere of use-

Note farther that Johnson and Albertson have a nursery where you can get anything in the line of garden shrubs, trees or anything else you may want in the tree line. Make out your orders and have them ready to be filled for fall planting. Also note that Good & March are not so far down the street as they were a few months since, but that they are now in a central location, Thompson's old stand, and that they have a large stock of family groceries which they sell at rea-

Note, also that Dr. S. O. Himoe and Co., have one of the largest laboratories in the west, where they manufacture in large quantities condition powders, ague cure, peruvian tonic. (by the way a most excellent tonic) and other medicine and preparations especially adapted to the climate and the cure of disease that arise from the miasmatic impurities that impregnate the atmosphere of this latitude at certain seasons of the year. Himoe's preparations are already becoming more popular as they become better known.

While making these notes, don't forget to note that it is necessary to keep cool and enjoy yourself occasionally if bus iness does press upon you and claim most of your attention. Then in order to enjoy a pleasant recreation and get a good meal, or ice cream and all kinds of fruit in the proper season, get a buggy and take your wife, sister, or sweatheart to Colman's Retreat, and you will be sure to be glad that you have made this note.

EXCURSION .- The Methodist Sunday school folks contemplate an excursion on the Carbondale road on Wednesday next. They go to Ridgeway, 25 miles southwest of Lawrence where an elegant grove has been fitted up for them with seats. speaker's stand, &c., by the citizens of Ridgeway. There are also fine springs and an abundance of fresh water in the grove. A pleasant time is anticipated and no doubt will be

JUNE 21, 1873. Taken altogether the week's business has been very satisfactory as compared with the last three or four weeks. The market for shipping cattle remains about as last week. There seems to be, however, a little more activity in the demand for wintered Texans. There was a steady demand for all kinds of stock, but the sales indicated a cautious feeling on the part of buyers and transactions could not be pressed at any price. Holders were not making any effort to force their stock upon the market, knowing very well it would not help matters. No heavy concessions could be obtained, as the present prices are as low as sellers can afford to take. The market closed strong at the following quotations:

CHOICE NATIVE BLOOD STOCK-In this description we include smooth, well formed steers of 1,200 :o 1,400 lbs average. These were in light supply, and under a light shipping demand, prices were weak at $5.50.

GOOD TO PRIME STEERS-This description includes smooth well fatted and well formed stock, from three to six years old of 1.200 to 1.350 lbs average. These were in light supply and a light business was transacted at $5 10@ 5 25.

COWS AND HEIFERS-Good to choice lots of 900 to 1,000 lbs average were in fair request at $3 50@4, while rough lean lots of 600 to 900 average were firm at $2 15@3.

MEDIUM TO FAIR BUTCHERS STOCK-This description includes rough, fleshy steers two to six years old; 900 to 1,000 lbs average. These were in good supply, and prices were firm at $3 70@4 75. STOCK STEERS—This description includes thrifty steers of two and four years old, of 900 to 1,000 lbs average, and thrifty steers of two to three years, of 900 to 1,000 lbs average. These were steady but scarce at $4@475 for the former and $3@375 for the latter, the supply of light weights being good. INFERIOR TO COMMON MIXED STOCK—This class includes thin, scrubby steers, stags, bulls, bony oxen, thin cows and heifers. There was a fair supply of this class and the demand was meagre at $2 25@2 75.

Wintered Texans were in good request at $4 25@4 75 for good choice, while through droves were nominal at$2 25@2-75 for common to light fleshy lots.

"Thinkest thou this is not true to nature?
Be thankful."

"If the blessing tarry, wait for it." CHAPTER XXVI.

Joe had come in with the mail, and Blanche was crying over her letter. "What now?" was the terrified question of Jessie, as she entered her sister's room. "Read," cried the latter, pushing towards Jessie the letter, and proceeding to hide her face on her arms which she folded It was a summons to depart. Eric had been able to send means sufficient for paying up the board bill of his family, and to pay their passage out to him. Whatever it was necessary for them to have he was sure Jessie would provide for them. and charge all to him. "It don't seem to enter his head that I will not go," sobbed Blanche; "but I never will. No, never." "Don't say such a thing!" Jessie's look grew pale and stern, "You will surely not disobey your husband thus, if you love him." "I don't know whether I love him or not," said Blanche. "I don't think he deserves that I should, any way. There is one thing that I do know, and that is I will not stir one step to California."

Jessic knew not what to say.
"I think it awful of him to demand such a sacrifice of me!" continued the wife.

"Sacrifice! it must be a fearful 'sacrifice' to leave one room in a cooped up city where a woman has but one relative to bid farewell, and go to a fruitful and beautiful land, and a lovely home, (see all he writes about it,) to a kind husband, who cares for nothing so much as to make her happy. Blanche, I'm indignant and astonished. I cannot comprehend you."

"How would you like it yourself?" retorted Blanche. Would you drag over half the globe, with two restless young ones to chase after, and only a stranger to depend on, for the sake of any man? Suppose you go instead of me!"

How suddenly the pale face of Jessie had crimsoned! What a look came to her large lustrous eyes!

Blanche was startled at the strangeness of her expression She stared at her silently; but could make nothing by that. She could not see the fairy picture whose ravishing colors for a moment dazzled Jessie's mental sight. She could not divine how in a moment there seemed to be a vision of future years opened out before the eyes that were bent on her face, and that from that vision of those happy tranquil years she was absent though Eric was not.

Her thoughtless words had worked in a marvelous and bewildering manner on the mind of her companion.

In Blanche's astonishment, and in fact almost terror, at the strange appearance of Jessie, she had quite forgotten what it was that she had said. So when, mastering her emotions, Jessie replied, "I will go if I may take the children."

She asked, "Go where?" "Out to your husband."

"Take my children away from me, would you? and carry them there to die!" exclaimed Blanche, passionately, "never! I will not go, nor shall they."

"I should fear to take such a postion as you will occupy if you maintain this determination. You will be out of the way of your duty and can look for only trouble."

'I'll risk it. There will not be likely to be trouble equal to losing my children by taking them to a strange, and probably sickly climate. I want to hear no more about it." Jessie soon after left the room.

That evening Mr. Ferguson, the friend of Eric, came to make the acquaintance of the lady whose company he fully expected to have on his return to California.

He was struck dumb at the announcement of Blanche, in no very amiable tone, that she had not the most remote idea of going to her husband.

By the grave and constrained manner of the other members of the household the stranger saw that her resolve was not approved; and the distress of Jessie (whom he had exceedingly admired) was plainly pictured in her face.

"I-I really shall not know how to see again the face of my friend if I am not able to present to him his wife. Is this determination final, madam?"

"It is," was the cold reply. "Perhaps," said the gentleman, after an oppressive silence "perhaps you may have a wrong idea of the place to which your husband desires to introduce you. Allow me to assure you that he has a very neat and comfortable house, situated in a most healthful and lovely spot, commanding a wide prospect of sea and land. I hardly know a place so picturesque and romantic. There is a church, a school and a doctor in the neighborhood, and you could hardly wish to be more pleasantly situated than you would be there."

"My husband has written all this," replied Blanche. Finding that he was not likely to gain much by remaining, the disconcerted stranger soon departed, not however, before he had promised to see Jessie at the studio before he sailed. Mr. Carlyle was highly indignant at the conduct of Blanche, and it is hardly to be denied that between him and Jessie and Mr. Ferguson, the disloyal wife was rather severely discussed during the visit of the latter to the studio.

Jessie had ready a package of letters and the freshly painted portraits of the children to send to her dear brother by his friend. These would, she knew, at first seem hardly better than a mockery; but she felt sure that after a while they would cheer and comfort him.

"Eric has a recuperative mind," said she to Mr. Ferguson, and when he finds that a thing is inevitable he soon learns to bear it cheerfully."

"Outwardly so, perhaps; but I have seldom seen a man or whose mind trouble makes a more abiding impression," was the reply. I have frequently been surprised at the effect that even now the attempt to relate the sad experience of his boyhood produces upon him.

"I must confess to you that I dread to return to him alone. I fear the consequences to him of so great a disappointment. Why cannot you at least take one of these little ones and go out to your brother? Ferguson might have been putting in a few words for himself here, as well as for his friend. But we can only guess at this.

Jessie made no reply to what had been said; but presently remarked: "I thought you would like to see the children that you might tell it to Eric, so I brought them to the studio with What shall I say to papa for his little girls? are you not sorry that you cannot go to your dear papa?" Asked the gentle-

"You tell my papa that I always remember him, and that I love him dearly. I go to see him as soon as I can, tell him not to cry."

These were the parting words of little Jessie, spoken earnestly to Mr. Ferguson, and then her soft lips kissed him over and over, for her dear papa," Blanche followed her sister's example, and the traveler went from them laden with love for the exile, and full of pleasing impressions of the group he had left in the studio.

Months went by and no tidings came from Mr. Ferguson or from Eric.

Every one thought it very strange. Even Blanche became uneasy.

"Do you suppose Eric will be angry and not write or send any more money?" she asked of Jessie.

"I do not know," was the reply. "That is what you deserve," said Mrs. Creep, "you are not fit to have a husband any more than Rosa is, nor half as much." "But he would write to Jessie; would he not?" "Perhaps he's dead! I would not wonder if your behavior killed him," said Mrs. Creep, maliciously. "Oh, dear! you don't think so!" cried Blanche, momentariy alarmed. "But there, I know you don't. You only say that to scare me. I think he is on his way home. That is what I wanted, to have him come back-I expect him any

"You will be disappointed, I think. I do not feel happy about Eric; perhaps I am superstitious, but I cannot shake off the influence of the dreams I have of him."

"What do you dream?" inquired Blanche, with marks of

"Nothing very rational or very connected; but Eric is always in the dream, be it what it may, and always in some strange distress. I hear him calling on me, so loudly sometimes that it wakes me—just as it used to when he was a boy. Last night I saw him dead. He lay still and pale, with such a peaceful smile on his face. It was the most pleasant dream of him I have had."

"How can you!" said Blanche reproachfully, "one would think that you really wished him dead."

"I do not wish to dictate to our Maker as to the time for any of us to depart; but have certainly thought, more than once, that I could look upon my dear brother, laid at rest in his coffin, with far less of pain than I feel for him a lone wanderer about the world, unappreciated, where to be so is most fatal to his happiness."

"You are severe," said Blanche, drily; but she never laid ny offence to heart.

Blanche might have been far better; but she might also, have een muchworse than she was.

Her object in refusing to go to California had really been as she declared, to bring Eric back. She had not considered the papa." She waited a little while, and then clasping her tiny subject in all its bearings-perhaps, however, she had done as well as she was able in the line of reflection. Her chief papa, and Blanche and all the folks, and my dear aunt Jessie! fault was that where she was not competent to judge for herself, she had refused to allow others to judge for her.

As to the old fashioned notion that a woman ought to obey her husband, Blanche scoffed at it.

The weeks were slowly and yet there was no news of Eric. Jessie could hardly endure the suspense, but she strove by work and amusement to keep her mind occupied.

She went frequently into the country, sometimes taking the children, sometimes not. Sometimes when she went alone, she remained away two or three days wandering among wild, the calm in which your child is resting you must control yourbeautiful scenes, sketching. There was, now-a-days, a fond, delightful welcome for her upon her return. Even Madam Creep was always glad to see her. Blanche and Rosa-not to mention Bob and Joe-felt lost without her, and the dear children rushed, bubbling over with joy and love, to her arms.

Perhaps it ought to be mentioned here that Robert Creep, although he never expected to survive the admiration and almost adoration which he felt for Jessie, had managed to fall in love with a young lady who returned his flame, so that he was no longer made unhappy by the charms and attractions of the beautiful artist.

On her return from one of her solitary tours Jessie noticed, with instant alarm, that her darling namesake was wanting in expressive look, to Jessie. Then again folding her hands her usual animation and activity. Little Blanche, for the she began to repeat: first time in her memory, was foremost in springing to meet "Aunty," Jessie came indeed, with a joyful smile upon her lips; but her sweet eyes were heavy and her cheeks were very

"What ails Jessie?" inquired the aunt, sitting down with nat and shawl still on, and taking her favorite in her lap. "Nothing that I know of," replied the mother. "She has oeen well enough; haven't you, dear?" "Yes, mamma; well-only very tired. I am so glad aunty has come to hold me," was the slow and rather weary an-

"She would never act so if she felt right, you may depend," said Jessie, as the curly head drooped and the eyes of the little one closed " "It is strange she should be sleepy again so soon," remarked her mother, rather uneasily; "she slept all the forenoon. I never knew her to do so." "Jessig-Jessie-don't you want to hear aunty's adventures? Wake up dear-it is not time to go to sleep yet. Let me tell you about the pretty squirrel that I saw," said Jessie, in a bright, cheerful tone, and gently shaking her plump bur-

"Yes-do tell me," said the little girl, rousing herself to list-

"You will not shut your eyes, then; will you?" "No, aunty, I will not."

"Well, darling once upon a time there was a squirrel. He had a safe, warm hole under a beautiful, great walnut tree that stood on a hill so high that he could see all over the city and way out into the ocean. Great rocks were piled about, covered with soft, green moss, and a clear spring run out from between them and trickled away, a bright little brook, to the valley below. Never had little Bun a more lovely or secure nome, and he had plenty of good company to visit him, and play and chatter with lim in his tree. But Bunny was discontented, he grumbled and whined every day because he had no wings with which to fly, like the birds and see the world, 'tis too mean to stay shut up in one spot in this forest,' he said, 'I just wont stand it. I'll start on foot, as I can't fly, and I'll see the world."

So he started. But no sooner had he got out of the wood than a hawk saw and pounced upon him.

"Ah!" sqeaked the poor frightened Bunn, "now indeed I see the world; but not as I desired to, Oh! if I had never, nev er left my dear, dear nest!"

He fully expected the hawk to eat him; and so the hawk expected; but an eagle saw and chased the hawk who had to and sent a bushel of kisses and sweet words by their dark but pleasant faced friend, to their lone papa.

"What a punishment to a man to keep away from him such lovely children as these! It really makes my blood boil with into a deep sleep. He woke refreshed, and having eaten a nut and taken a drink from a stream near by he started in search of his home.

After many perils and much suffering he at last came in sight of his own home, and was soon after found fast asleep in his own nest, by his sorrowing friends, who gave the little wanderer a warm welcome; and Bunny told them all to take a warning by his sad experience never to be discontented, and wish to desert a comfortable home."

"I only want to go and find papa," said Jessie, looking with a smile into autie's eyes. Then smiling still, she seemed to

"What does make you look so woe-be-gone, Jessie?" asked Blanche, entering the room, from which she had been absent a moment. "One would think the child had some dangerous

"I fear she has," was the answer of Jessie. "I wish Joe would call the doctor. See here she is asleep again, and her flesh does not feel natural at all."

This sobered Blanche and she sent for Dr. Westmoreland. Jessie now resigned her pet to the bed while she took off her traveling dress and put away her things. She was ready to meet the doctor when he came.

Eric's children were great favorites with Dr. Westmore-

He called them the Violet and the Rose. He had noticed Jessie's devotion to her namesake, and once had said to her, have a care there, Jessie; hold that cherub closely. She is one of those that I call the Infantry of Heaven."

"Oh, doctor! do you not think she will live long?" cried Jessie, with quick pain. "I think," said the doctor, meaningly, "that she will live forever." He came now, and after examining the little patient, stood gravely regarding her. "Is she much sick, doctor?" asked the mother, anxiously. "No, not much," was the reply, "but she must be taken good care of. I will call again in the morning." He then left some medicine and his orders for the night and withdrew. Jessie did not improve. Her mother's heart soon failed her and she said weeping, "I wish Eric was here. Oh! where is

The elder Jessie sat day and night beside her darling; or held her in her arms. Blanche could hardly endure to see the suffering child.

At last there came a day when she was called to see her: but little Jessie was not suffering any more. The small waxen figure lay peacefully on white pillows, with mute Jessie, pale as marble, sitting near. The large, grave eyes were open, the sweet lips moved.

"Mamma, I love you dearly," said the dying child. "I love you, too, dear little Blanche," said she, as they lifted the frightened baby to take a last look at her sister, aunt Jessie, and the doctor, and Rosa, and all the folks, and my dear hands, prayed, of her own thought, "God bless mamma and to Jessie. "Yes, my treasure, he will, he surely will," answered Jes sie with a sob. "Oh! doctor, you can surely save her now. See how strong she is, how much better she seems-and do not let my darling die."

now will he, aunty, because I asked him?" she asked, looking

Blanche wrung her hands in anguish, and would have fallen at the doctor's feet had he permitted it. "Madam," he whispered, taking her by the arm, "if you would not disturb self. Any excitement will renew the convulsions from which she has already suffered so much. Sit down beside her, and pray. Thank your Maker that he has dealt no more hardly by you than he has. Remember you have another child."

Poor Blanche, choking down, as well as she could, her feelings, took the low seat to which the doctor pointed, and sat there her eyes fixed with a most despairing expression upon her little departing one.

Hard, bitter hard to give up to the hungry grave the treasires of our hearts!

The child, having rested with closed eyes for awhile, suddenly opened them wide, and there fiashed from them a strange splendor. She smiled on all, and kissing a white rose-bud, for which she had asked shortly before, handed it, with an

"Now I lay me down to sleep, I pray the Lord my soul to keep, If I should die before I wake, I pray-2

The Sweet, faint voice died away and the silence of the chamber was broken only by low sobs, as the Messenger entered, who, taking Jessie to his quiet heart, bore her upward to those "fair, celestial gardens, where angels walk and scraphs are the wardens; Where every flower brought safe through deaths dark portal, becomes immortal."

The poor mother, seeing Dr. Westmoreland lay his hand gently on Jessie's eyes, and shut down the snowy lids, shrieked out in agony, springing from her seat, and catching the doctor's arm. "Not dead! not dead: oh! doctor, she is not dead!"

"You are right, my child; Jessie is not dead. She is alive forever!" responded the doctor, solemnly; and he added as he saw the look of suffering on the fair face of the young mother, "He doth not afflict willingly, nor grieve the children of men. The little lamb is taken to the safe fold that it's mother may follow."

Jessie sat, without word, or motion, at the bed's head, with her tearless eyes fixed on her darling's still form, holding the white rose-bud in her hand. To be continued.

Lyndon, Osage Co. Kansas, June 12, 1873.

I was agreeably surprised on my first visit to Osage county to find the eastern part of it so thickly settled by an industrious, intelligent class of organized a fine Grange, of which John E. Ellis was elected Master, and Horace Barnett, Overseer, and Wm. Barnett, Secretary. Of course such men need the Spirit, and you may look for more subscribers from this fine farming community.

Near Lyndon I found finer farms, more improved, and was surprised to find that land has been rising rapidly in value during the last year. In Valley Brook township I turned a fine Farmer's Union into that more efficient organization, the Patrons of Husbandry. Here we enjoyed ourselves in the midst of as fine a community of intelligent farmers as I have met for a long time. In fact I felt so much at home amidst my newly found friends that I regretted to leave them. James Fanchier has presided before, and will make a most efficient Master, and the Secretary, Mrs. Margaret Moyer, is a lady of fine abilities. The ladies of Salt Creek demonstrated beyond a doubt their ability to perform all the necessary business, and it was done in first class style, too. Thirty one members joined here, one lady paying her two dollars initiation fee. I intend to follow the Constitution to the letter and not forfeit our rights to our Charters. Granges should not be organized within three miles of each other, and thus build up a strong and wealthy organization such as Salt Creek Grange is bound to be. I am glad to say that the Lyndon Sentinel is the farmer's strong friend, and fearless in exposing the tricks of monopolists. I prophesy that there will be twenty Granges in Osage county within two months. By invitation I stopped and lectured in the Morris district. Only fifteen farmers gathered, it being a very busy season, and money being very scarce; still all those present voted to organize a Grange, and after supper their number increased to twenty-three. It takes me about eight hours to lecture and organize, as a Grange should be organized, and seldom "go home till morning." J. N. Morris is a fine farmer and Master of Junction Grange. He is ably assisted by John E. Winder? who is full of "Spirit." Junction is so named on account of Dragoon Creek and One Hundred and Ten uniting in this township. I passed to Pleasant Ridge where I found a fine new school building amidst a settlement whose houses did not average over one-third of a mile apart, so thickly settled is this part. Here they had been anxiously awaiting the formation of a Grange for one month, and the house was full of anxious farmers. Brother Allen will make an efficient leader, and M. V. B. Soule will be an intelligent medium to communicate with the Granges of the surrounding country. Brother Randal raises some of the largest hogs in Osage county, and I notice that nearly every farm here has a fine patch of wheat, and there are very few farms offered for sale. These men have come here to live and build up pleasant homes. I would that Kansas had more of such farmers. The next day I organized Maple Grove Grange, which is to meet in a fine new stone school house, B. A. Gibson is Master, and B. A. Washburn, Secretary. The Doctor lives in the finest stone house I, have seen in my travels.

Wheat looks as if it will yield 30 bushels per acre. I have organized 14 Granges in five days.

Granges in Franklin County.

There are 28 Granges in the county now and nearly 1,000 members. Granges will be formed in Hayes and Potawatomie townships within a week; one near Mr. Wickard's, and the other near Judge Hanway's. Both these ought to have 30 members each. Persons wishing to join a Grange must not leave a Grange nearer to them in order to get in for $3, as the deputy will enforce the law. Last week, he dissolved two neighborhoods ready to organize, because they were within the jurisdiction of other Granges, that is within two and a half or three miles, kept out some atheists, merchants, and tattlers, but which proved rather unplesant but necessary duties. The Spirit of Kansas, published at Lawrence, is our organ.

From the Turf, Field and Farm. THE FARMERS' MOVEMENT.

The farmers' co-operative movement is a good one, but the men who join in it should be careful and not let the demagogues lead them astray. They should see to it that their numbers are proportion farmers, nearly all of them pre-emptors, whose lands must be paid for this fall and winter. What lands must be paid for this fall and winter. What but they should not jump to the rash conclusion a contrast between the settling up of this county that every interest in the country must in every and that of Franklin, where the greedy speculators case be made subordinate to theirs. They consti"gobbled" all the land to sell it at ten dollars per tute the foundation of our social system, but there "gobbled" all the land to sell it at ten dollars per acre. Here the poor man found a cheap home and a chance to pay for it. There, vast strips of unoccupied land held by some eastern capitalists, while what might have been a thickly settled county will soon be ten years behind some of her western neighbors. Verily our land speculators have been a curse to the county. It will be generally grafia curse to the country. It will be generally gratifying to the people if the assessor will make these land-lords pay their full share of the taxes. We first stopped at Michigan Valley school house and had been employed in different channels, the fruits would have been various, and as such would have satisfied a larger demand and given more general satisfaction. The railroads are grasping, but they are not responsible for all the evil. The speculators do much to unsettle values and to rob the farmer of the full waved of his labora but they are farmer of the full reward of his labor, but they are not wholly the agents of mischief—they simply study the law of supply and demand and take advanstudy the law of supply and demand and take advan-tage of it whenever they can to put a penny in their own pockets. When the grain-growing districts are so widely separated from the grain-consuming districts, middle men, or traders, become more and more of a necessity. They help the farmer to ex-change his corn and wheat for the products of man-ufacture, and we can hardly expect them to look after this business of exchange for nothing. * *

If a man is compelled to sell as soon as his crops are harvested, he will have to take the best price offered, no matter whether his grain passes through a general warehouse or not. If the merchant can-not sell his calico for twenty cents a yard, then he must fix the price at a lower figure. If the competition is so great as to force him to sell at a loss he must stand the consequences as best he can. If every town resident should turn merchant and deal in nothing but calico, we should not marvel that the supply should far exceed the demand. And yet an entire community will devote their whole ime and labor to the production of corn and wheat, and express surprise that the business does not pay. What everybody has nobody wants. Let agriculturists bear this simple maxim in mind, and fix upon some way to diversify production.

Strawberry Culture.

A strawberry-grower states to two barrels of rainwater he put one-quarter of a pound of ammonia and one quarter of a pound of common nitre, and with this solution he sprinkled his strawberry beds every night when blossoming. The result was double the amount of large strawberries to that ust adjoining not so treated.

Every farmer and stock raiser is convinced that an impure state of the the blood originates the variety of diseases that afflict animals, such as founder, distemper, fistule, poll-evil, hide-bound, inward strains, scratches, mange, yellow water, heaves, loss of appetite, inflammation of the eyes, swelled legs, fatigue from hard labor, and rheumatism (by some called stiff complaint) proving fatal to so many valuable horses. The blood is the fountain of life itself, and if you wish to restore health, you must first purify the blood; and to insure health, must keep it pure. In doing this you induse into the debilitated, broken-down animal, action and spirit, and promoting digestion, &c. The farmer can see the marvelous effects of Leis' Condition Powder, by the loosening of the skin and smoothness of the hair.

Tnesday's Kansas City papers contain an account of a fatal accident by lightning. A young lady named Nora Ritesmore while promenading last Sunday afternoon with some companions on the rotunda of the amphitheatre in the exposition grounds, fell dead upon the promenade by a stroke of lightning. The fluid entered near her chin and passed down on side of her body, tearing her limbs in a frightful manner.

The cholera in Nashville, Tenn., is driving a considerable number of people out of the city. On the 18th three draymen were attacked on the streets with the disease. Deaths from cholera that day were thirty, of which eight were whites and twenty-two colored. Business is almost totally suspended. Commercial interests are suffering badly.

Immense crowds were collected to witness the spectacle, and the enthusiasm was very great.

The case of the state against S. C. Pomeroy came up before Judge Morton's court last Monday. John Martin and Alfred Ennis appeared as council for the defendant, who, through them, asked for a continuance which was granted. Thus is this important matter put over until the next term. The wit nesses who had been summoned by the prosecution, many of whom reached the city Monday evening, were all recognized to attend at next term. The costs in this case will amount to a small fortune. The county attorney expresses the epinion that impannelling a jury will be the largest item in the bill of costs.—[State Record]

The citizens of Dover, in this county, have successfully in stituted semi-monthly stock sales. They have been better patronized, and give far better satisfaction than was anticipated. The little town of Dover, with two stores, one church a school house and a blacksmith shop, and five dwelling houses, had a farmer's club organized several years ago, and is now leading Topeka even in the establishment of stock sales. This is an example worthy of emulation by older and larger towns.-[State Record.]

A Times special from Boston says General Butler has at last announced himself a candidate for governor of Massachusetts, and his second light for that position may now be said to have fairly begun. At a recent dinner at the Revere House, given by one of his supporters, and at which also Dr. G. B. Loring, Collector Ressell, and men from all sections of the state attended, he said he would be glad to receive all their votes, but should not feel unkindly to those friends who might oppose him, though his heart would be a little warmer for those who voted for him. He defended his course on the salary grab and denied being an advocate of the bill, and was always greatly opposed to it. However, he became convinced it was right, as he advocated and should defend it.

By a report from Capt. Moore, U. S. A., intelligence has been received of a terrible freshet in the Republican valley, Nebraska, which occurred May 31. Capt. Moore was in command of a detachment of fifty cavalrymen, and lost six men and twenty-six horses, and all his camp equipage and clothing. The loss to settlers especially in stock, has been severe. The singular feature of the freshet was that there had been no rain for five days, and it came on so suddenly that men had to take to trees to save their lives.
