In compliance with the provisions of the 22d degree of the Order, Bro. Frank F. Dumbauld, of the 5th degree of Labette, was opened and the degree installed by Bro. F. Richardson, master, and J. T. Lampson, secretary, at the regular meeting of the labette county grange on the evening of April 22d. The master then read the by-laws and stated the objects of the grange. The master then introduced the visitors to the grange and gave an account of the same. The officers of the order were then installed and the following were appointed as members of the executive committee: John R. Shalvoy, master, J. W. Tate, secretary, and Geo. D. Pollock, treasurer.

The State of Kansas reports 1,300 granges, with a membership of 50,248. An Alabama granger claims to have grown 221 bushels of corn on her acre of ground. The State of Alabama reports a membership of 2,500.

It is to be hoped that the grangers will not give up their efforts, but will continue to work in the interest of agriculture and the general welfare of the community. The grangers are doing valuable work, and their efforts should be encouraged.

What Bees to Grow for Coop.

There is a great diversity of opinion as to what should be the best kinds of roots to plant for the feeding of bees this fall. Many advise clover if you have it, but many do not. After much experience, I have decided to plant Burdock. To every 100 bushels of Burdock I add 20 bushels of clover. This is the best plan I have found and is a little cheaper than clover.

Buckwheat is a good green crop for the bees. There are two kinds, red and white, and both are successful. The white is a little cheaper than the red. I have found it to be excellent for the bees. It is also good for the bees in the fall.

If you are going to plant clover, be sure to have it in the fall, as it is not advisable to plant it in the spring. Clover is a good green crop for the bees, and it is also good for the bees in the fall.
