ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

The writer wishes to acknowledge with gratitude the assistance of many instructors in the Physical Education Department at Kansas State University who helped establish sound basic attitudes concerning physical education and coaching.

Also, the personal and professional advice and time and effort devoted to this report by Associate Professor Raymond Wauthier of the Department of Physical Education at Kansas State University is sincerely appreciated. Appreciation is also expressed to the Athletics and Activities Directors of the Secondary Schools in Kansas who responded to my letter for their cooperation and assistance.

The writer also wishes to acknowledge the following schools for their contribution of information for this report. The schools are: The Topeka Public Schools, Handbook for Athletic Coaches and Administrators; Washington High School, Athletic Director Handbook; and Great Bend High School, Athletic Coaches Handbook.
