ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

The writer wishes to express his deepest gratitude to his research advisor Professor Ray Weisenburger, for his encouragement, patience, guidance, and constructive criticism that made this report possible. Special appreciation is extended to Dr. V. P. Deines, Dr. Amos I. T. Chang, Professor John Selfridge, Dr. John Keller, Professor Clarence Johnson and Professor Claude Keithley for their suggestions and comments.

The writer's greatest appreciation is to his dearest wife Tsai, Chin-man, who continually encouraged him when he was discouraged, and took good care of his daughter Chia-Yu, allowing him to put his mind at rest and finish his study.

The writer also would like to express his gratitude to his dear friends, Wu, Lai-San, and Wu, Chia-Chang, for their collection of data and suggestions. Also gratitude to his American schoolmate Kenneth E. Stein for his friendly assistance.

Lastly, the writer would like to use this Master's Report as a memorial to his dearest parents, also his father-in-law for his permission to study in the United States.

When the writer drinks the water, the people who dug the well always linger in his mind. What he wants to say is: Thank you.
